Welcomes Her Home as the Charge Is Lodged at Rockville.

Two Men Arrested As Death Hirelings

Tell Police Woman Paid Them $750, Promised Bank Robbery Aid.

In as bizarre a drama as the town of Rockville, Md., has ever known, a husband last night welcomed home a wife who had just been charged with conspiring to murder him.

The wife is Mrs. Ann Lyddane, 35, tall slender and blonde. She was arrested Monday night. Not until late yesterday, however, was she formally charged with entering into a conspiracy to murder her husband.

A similar charge was placed against Jack Boland, 42, of the 300 block of Fourth street northeast, a police character, who has been arrested 19 times but never before sent to jail.

John H. "Googy" Carnell, 35, a bartender in the Lincolnway Hotel in Rockville, also was under arrest, but no charge had been placed against him. Rockville police said he would be a State's witness.

$750 Fee Reported.

Detective Sergeant Robert J. Barrett, of this city, who first got wind of the alleged murder plot, said yesterday that Boland and Carnell had confessed that they and a third man, still being sought, had received $750 from Mrs. Lyddane as a "down payment" on her husband's murder.

Mrs. Lyddane is secretary to the president of the Farmers' Banking and Trust Co., in Rockville.

After the conspiracy charge had been preferred against her late yesterday, Mrs. Lyddane was released in the custody of her attorneys—another unusual circumstance in a fantastic case.

Francis Lyddane, her husband, who visited her in the Rockville jail, was awaiting her when she returned home.

Reporters asked him:

"Are you going to stand by your wife?"

"Well, I'm still here," he replied.

Counsel Sees "Frame-Up."

Mr. Lyddane, known as "Slom," and employed as a clerk at the Montgomery County Liquor Dispensary in Silver Spring, was called to one side by his wife's attorney, Robert Peter, jr.

When they returned, Attorney Peter said:

"Mr. Lyddane has authorized me to say that he doesn't believe the charges made against his wife and that he is behind her to the fullest extent.

"It looks to me like a frame-up on the part of the fellows who told those stories."

Mrs. Lyddane, according to the authorities, was paying the premiums on a $15,000 insurance policy on her husband's life.

Arthur Bell, 41, was questioned by Rockville police after Mrs. Lyddane's arrest, but was released when he convinced them that he knew of no murder plot. In 1933, Bell's wife sued him for divorce, naming Mrs. Lyddane as corespondent. The divorce suit was withdrawn two days later.

The investigation of the alleged murder conspiracy began two weeks ago.

"Googy" Carnell, the Rockville bartender, according to the investigators, was not satified with his share of the money that Mrs. Lyddane allegedly paid out for her husband's murder, and after dining too well one night in Washington did considerable talking.

Detective Sergt. Barrett was

Vinson Support Voted by Legion

Service Certificate Payment Urged by National Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, April 2.—The national executive committee of the American Legion tonight voted unanimously to urge passage by Congress of a soldiers' bonus bill "which includes no other question than immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates."

The resolution adopted by the committee made no reference by name either to the Vinson or Patman bills for the payment of the bonus, both of which are pending in Congress, but legion officials declared it meant the organization would support the Vinson bill.

The Patman bill provides for the issuance of $2,200,000,000 worth of new money in addition to payment of the adjusted service certificates. The Vinson bill contains no provisions other than those for the payment of the bonus. The matter of raising the money is left to the Government.

Planes Fly in Protest At Hanging in London

By the Associated Press.

London, April 2.—Widespread British criticism of the so-called "theatricals" of the recent Hauptmann trial in the United States were recalled today as London had its own show, including even airplanes, at the hanging of a naval petty officer for murder.

Three planes trailing huge yellow banners reading "stop the death sentence" circled over Wandsworth Jail where the hanging took place. The demonstration was put on by an anti-capital punishment society.

Despite the demonstration, Petty Officer Leonard Albert Brigstock was hanged for killing Chief Petty Officer Deggan on the warship Marshal Soult.

Farm Debt Act Wins One Test, Up for Another

Appeals Body Deems It Legal; Supreme Court Arguments In.

As the Supreme Court yesterday completed hearing of arguments on the validity of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals handed down a decision in the case of a Maryland farmer declaring the act constitutional.

The case before the Supreme Court came there from Kentucky on an appeal from a decision of the lower courts in that section holding the Frazier-Lemke act constitional. The Supreme Court justices sharply questioned those arguing in behalf of the act and Justice James C. McReynolds rebuked one of the attorneys for a reference to Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes.

The Appellate Court at Richmond reversed a decision of the Federal District Court at Baltimore, which was the first tribunal to declare the Frazier-Lemke act unconstitutional, in a case brought by William W. Bradford, jr., of Belair, Md.

Brandeis Gives View.

According to the Associated Press, Bradford won a complete victory in the appellate court, that tribunal answering in the affirmative and favorably to him each of the three questions in issue. In addition to upholding the validity of the act, the court ruled that under it Federal courts had power to stay proceedings for foreclosure of a mortgage undertaken in State courts, even where there has been a sale of mortgaged property, which, however, had not yet been confirmed by the court.

Justices of the Supreme Court identified with the liberal wing as well as those in the so-called conservative group of that tribunal projected searching questions to counsel defending the Frazier-Lemke act. For instance, Justice Louis D. Brandeis asserted that it seemed that under the act "both the property and the debt are taken away from the creditor."

McReynolds Rebukes Lawyer.

Justice McReynolds rebuked Edwin A. Krauthoff, Chicago lawyer, when the latter assailed the joint stock land bank law and observed that the law had been "ably defended" by Chief Justice Hughes when Hughes was practicing law privately. Krauthoff called this banking system "a favorite child of the law" and a "device to enable men with capital to lend money to farmers without paying an income tax." He said such banks had "pressed loans" on farmers and then "oppressed" them for collection during the depression.

"Why do you address an argument like that to this court?" sharply demanded Justice McReynolds, according to the Associated Press. "It seems to me that

Senate Ousts Gallery, Finds Chatter Own

Debate Proves Dull as Works Bill Remains in Conference.

By Robert C. Albright.

Spring filtered into the Senate yesterday, with its visions of horse racing, golf, and green, rolling fairways, and the Senators just couldn't take it. Maybe it was fever, maybe nerves, maybe just a case of jitters. The Senate succumbed.

A curious buzzing noise, emanating from nowhere in particular, brought on the attack. The sergeant at arms was summoned to run it down. The deputy sergeant at arms was called to help him. In the end, every public gallery was cleared.

But the noise continued. It was the sound of the Senators' own voices.

Senate stands were packed with hundreds of visitors, lured here by the cherry blossoms.

Probably many of them expected to hear some of the sharp debate that has swirled around the $4,880,000,000 works relief bill, but that measure was not before the Senate. It was tied up in conference between House and Senate in a deadlock that still is unbroken.

The visitors all were rudely ejected.

It was the first time since spectators loudly applauding Tom Heflin, when he carried his reelection appeal to the Senate three years ago, that a curious public had been driven from the galleries.

Borah First Complained.

It all started during a general round of discussion on the Copeland food bill. Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, complained he was unable to hear the debate.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson grimly arose.

"I suggest that the sergeant at arms be summoned to preserve order in the chamber," he said. "It is an abuse of privilege for Senators to insist on carrying on conversation on the floor to the confusion of those who are trying to carry on the proceedings."

He moved that the sergeant at arms be summoned. His motion carried. Then the search started for the sergeant at arms, Chesley W. Jurney. He could not be found. Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, teetered wearily on his feet while the search was made. He had the floor, but he could not proceed until Jurney was produced.

"What am I supposed to do?" he anxiously inquired.

Some of the more mischievously inclined Senators attempted to laugh the matter off, but Robinson would not be swayed.

Senator M. M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, suggested a committee be appointed to make the search. The galleries tittered.

Robinson Deplores Levity.

"It is all right to be humorous about these things," boomed Senator Robinson, "but those of us who are serious and want to carry on business ought to have the right to do so. I insist that the sergeant-at-arms be summoned."

Then Senator Royal S. Copeland, managing debate on his pure food bill, made a discovery.

"I think the noise is in the gallery, rather than the chamber," he observed.

President Pro Tempore Key Pittman, who was in the chair, quickly cracked down his gavel. All public galleries were ordered cleared.

There was a loud shuffling noise, as doorkeepers herded spectators before them.

It remained for Senate Minority Leader McNary to trace that mysterious buzzing sound.

"I have found, after 18 years in the Senate," he said, "that 90 per cent of the noise emanates from the floor instead of the galleries."

Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, insisted he was wrong about it. He said the buzzing came from a guide, deliverng a gallery lecture to sightseers.

But the spectators themselves were forgiven. On motion of McNary, they were shooed back into the galleries.

House Republicans to Accept Democrat Social Security Bill

House Republicans sprang a surprise yesterday by indicating a willingness to accept the Administration's social security bill.

A favorable report on the Wagner-Doughton measure was voted earlier in the day by the House Ways and Means Committee. Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, said he hoped to get the bill on the floor next week.

Republicans discussed the bill for two hours in executive session. Later their leader, Bertrand Snell, New York, commented:

"A majority of the Republican members favor this bill in principle and probably will vote for it."

He explained another conference of G. O. P. House members would be held tomorrow so the measure could be discussed in greater detail. No effort will be made to bind the members to vote as a unit.

Representative Treadway, Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, outlined the revisions voted in committee. He told his colleagues he was handicapped because the final draft of the bill had not been printed.

Neither Snell nor Treadway would commit themselves on whether the Republicans, obviously unable to kill the bill if they tried, would undertake to have the measure sent back to committee for substantial changes. Republican strategy will be perfected tomorrow.

A decision is expected to be reached soon by the Ways and Means Committee on whether it will recommend to the Rules Committee adoption of a gag rule which would definitely head off radicals who

All-Time Record Crowd Sees Vanderbilt Entry Defeat Favorite Star Porter; First Daily Double Returns $356.10.

By Walter Haight.

Mother Nature, the Maryland Racing Commission and the fact that he has not been in action hereabouts for four months, served to set the stage for a royal welcome to King Horse on his return to the Capital area yesterday at nearby Bowie.

Mother Nature earned the frowns of the weather man when she upset his calculations and provided a warm spring sun; the Maryland Racing Commission put a new lure on Maryland racing by making possible the first daily double betting in the State and race-hungry persons swarmed the Prince Georges Country track in the largest numbers of the 20-year history of the establishment. The record gathering was estimated at 14,000.

It was Maryland's bid for a new deal in horse racing and it was only fitting that Maryland silks should fly in the feature race. The colors of young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who owns a pretentious farm over in Worthington Valley, accounted for two-thirds of the purse money in the running of the Inaugural Handicap. Dogmata was the principal half of the entry and he made a driving finish to win from Star Porter, another Maryland horse, representing Ral Parr. The other half of the Vanderbilt combination was Dreel and he was a fighting third in the field of 11.

Daily Double Popular.

To the tune of a $356.10 mutuel, the daily double swung into action and its popularity was established beyond the fondest hopes of track officials. The winning combination was Lookabout, a well played juvenile in the first race, and Sparky, a long shot in the third race.

With a new section of windows especially for the combination bet, Bowie found that it had not prepared sufficiently with the enthusiasm of the bettors. The crowd gathered before the windows opened and a steady string of customers marched up for almost an hour. At closing time, five minutes before the first race, more than 500 anxious players were turned away.

A total of $11,550 was bet on the double, a figure that approaches the record for this sort of play in

Jackson Wins Renomination At Baltimore

Mayor Reported Assured of 3d Term Try; Chicago G. O. P. Swamped.

By the Associated Press.

Party strategists—looking ahead to 1936—scanned the returns from scattered elections last night for indications of political trends.

With only 20 precincts unreported in Baltimore, Mayor Howard W. Jackson tonight seemed assured of the Democratic nomination for a third term.

The latest returns in the Democratic primary gave: Jackson, 67,166; Moylan, 45,941; John H. Ferguson, 3,944 and William I. Norris, 2,668.

Three Others in Race.

Two candidates, John A. Meyer and George Sellmayer, were ahead of E. Lester Muller, seeking renomination as president of the city council. With 284 polling places reported in this race, the vote was: Meyer, 13,324; Sellmayer, 13,046; Muller, 10,180; James, J. O'Meara, 2,437, and Max J. Sindler, 1,813.

Raymond E. Kennedy took an early lead over Frank J. Flynn in the race for nomination for State Senator to succeed the late Thurman C. Atkinson in the Fifth Legislative District. Tabulations from 36 out of the 156 voting places in

NRA Bears Brunt of Attacks Aimed at Alphabet Agencies

Tydings Brands It Greatest Prop Ever Placed Under Trusts; Return to Fundamentals Urged by Senator.

Alphabetical recovery organizations, particularly NRA, were under fire on several fronts yesterday.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, in a speech hitting "alphabetical monstrosities" and the "philosophy of scarcity," called NRA "the greatest prop ever put under trusts in this country."

Complaints against NRA continued from witnesses before the Senate Finance Committee.

The Federal Trade Commission announced it was preparing a complaint against the Rubber Manufacturers Association, and NRA code authority, on charges of price fixing.

The House Agricultural Committee vacated its vote approving the AAA amendments and agreed to consider other amendments to the farm relief law.

Talking in the Senate, Tydings challenged the Administration to stop its attempts at "running the Government on hot air" and asked that it get back to fundamentals. He listed among these fundamentals revival of foreign trade, balancing of the budget and stabilization of currencies.

"God knows," Tydings said, "no one who has ever been in the White House wanted to do more for the people than Franklin Roosevelt, but I predict that unless we do an about-face and get back to sanity, we are going to rue the day of these experiments."

Senator Tydings said the Roosevelt Administration had done its utmost to increase prices to the point where it was impossible for this country to compete for its share of world trade. He said the "philosophy of scarcity," which led to plowing under cotton, limiting wheat crops and killing pigs, could only lead to elimination of foreign markets for such products. This, he said, would naturally lead to increased unemployment in the United States.

"I say there is less trade under the AAA," Tydings continued. "Increase costs by these artificial means and you defeat what you started out to attain. You can't have work by a policy of less trade.

"Has not the hour arrived when

Treasury Receipts Top Outlay First Time Since Sept. 1931.

Monthly Report Hailed as Sign of Trend Toward Balanced Budget.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

For the first time since September, 1931, the Treasury in March had a surplus of receipts over expenditures, due in part to an increase of 40 per cent in income tax collections over March of a year ago, it was revealed yesterday.

In March, 1933, the Treasury's balance sheet showed a slight surplus, by inclusion of operations in trust funds. But a surplus in the general and special fund accounts of the Treasury had not occurred for three and one-half years.

When the books were closed for March receipts totaled $600,748,099, as against $420,103,481 in March of last year. Expenditures for last month, including the emergency disbursements as well as general, totaled $350,523,833, as compared with $610,232,937 in March, 1934.

Thus the Treasury ended the month with a surplus of $50,224,265, as compared with a deficit of $190,129,455 for March of last year. If the trust fund accounts are combined with the general special fund accounts, the surplus for last month was $73,733,936, as compared with a deficit of $189,032,411.

Data for Nine Months.

Even though expenditures for the nine months of this fiscal year ran ahead of those for the same period of the last fiscal year, the deficit for the period is less, due to increased revenues. The deficit for the nine months of this fiscal year was $2,199,698,969, as compared with $2,542,299,695 in the previous period.

March's surplus, with the large increase in income tax collections, was hailed as indicating Treasury deficits would grow smaller as time went on, thus necessitating less Government borrowing and a general trend toward a balanced budget.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee greeted the March report as "good news—in fact, the best news we have had from a revenue standpoint for a number of years." He said the increased income taxes reflected increased employment and increased business profits, as well as success in closing loopholes of tax avoidance.

Taylor Sees Gain.

The cheering results of the first quarterly income tax collections and the improved status of Treasury operations came fast on the heels of a statement by Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, to his stockholders, that the "forward movement already begun is plainly gathering impetus" and should gradually sweep away all unsound ideas and practices.

Income tax collections for March totaled $326,268,511, as compared with $232,007,128 collected in March, 1934, an increase of $94,261,383. It was estimated income tax collections for the calendar year would approximate $1,100,000,000.

Details of the income tax reports filed March 15 will not be available for some months, but it was believed the increased sum paid was due to improvement last year in business conditions, higher rates of taxation which became effective in March and administrative changes closing loopholes in the law.

General Costs Up.

Miscellaneous internal revenue for March totaled $188,919,079, as compared with $129,759,402 in the same month last year. This increase was due in large part to an increment in the payment of gift taxes, which surprised Treasury officials. For the nine months of the fiscal year miscellaneous internal revenue totaled $1,267,022,945, as compared with $1,115,510,353 in the same period of the last fiscal year.

The decrease of some $59,000,000 in expenditures last month, as compared with March, 1934, resulted from a sharp slump in emergency expenditures. The so-called gen-

By the United Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, April 2.—Man's normal life span with clean living should be 180 years, Dr. Asen Siataroff, biology professor in the University of Belgrade, said today.

Dr. Siataroff believes human beings average only one-third their normal years because of bodily abuses.

He predicted knowledge to be gained from the study of biology eventually will enable mankind to attain the normal 180 years he sees possible. Dr. Siataroff failed to indicate how soon humanity might expect to have the added span of life, and what the effect would be on already overcrowded areas.

Tax Bill to Cut Profit of War To 3% Urged

Senate Body Measure Also Would Put Curb on Personal Incomes.

By Felix Bruner.

An income tax that would in time of war take all industrial profits of more than 3 per cent and would limit personal incomes to small amounts is provided in a bill made public last night by the Senate Munitions Committee.

In addition, the measure would draft into military service all officers and directors of corporations. They would remain in their respective jobs, but they would receive military pay only, with no compensation higher than that of a brigadier general.

The bill, representing the committee's program for taking the profits out of war, will be introduced next week at conclusion of preliminary committee hearings.

Calls Plan Most Effective.

In an accompanying statement, the committee, headed by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, declared that the plan "will do more than any other proposal before Congress to limit profiteering and to avoid the disastrous and possibly catastrophic results of another post-war inflation."

For industry, the bill would provide for a tax of 50 per cent on all net profits of 6 per cent or less. A 100 per cent tax would be levied on all profits of more than 6 per cent. Thus industrial profits would be limited to 3 per cent.

For individuals the measure provides a normal tax of 6 per cent on all earnings above exemptions.

In addition the bill provides heavy surtaxes. Persons earning $10,000 would be required to pay $2,800 in taxes. For incomes in excess of $10,000 the surtax would be 94 per cent.

Industrial Management Board.

Personal exemptions also would be cut. A single person would be allowed an exemption of only $500, instead of the present $1,000, and a married person would be allowed $1,000 instead of $2,500. Exemptions for dependents would be cut from $400 to $100.

Industrial deductions would be greatly reduced.

The proposed measure opens with the statement:

"It is hereby declared to be the intention of Congress that no person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States shall profit in any manner whatsoever from the conduct of any war to which the United States is or may be a party."

Immediately, in event of war, an industrial management board would be set up. This board would immediately draft officers and directors of corporations "or persons in policy-forming positions in such Confidence Vote Given His Government's War Measures.

Hitler Proposes A 10-Year Peace

Duce Demands Unity of Allies; Poland May Join Locarno.

The Crisis Abroad

Premier Flandin told Parliament France's entire frontier is rapidly being manned with troops. He received a vote of confidence in his government's measures to meet the war crisis. He pledged France to continuance of the gold standard. Paris, at the same time, hailed the announcement Foreign Minister Laval would officially visit Warsaw.

Hitler suggested to Sir John Simon a ten-year "war holiday" based on nonaggression pledges between Germany and her neighbors, it was revealed yesterday in London.

Mussolini demanded that Britain, France and Italy join forces in the face of German rearmament. He cautioned against too great optimism in regard to the Seress conference.

Polish adherence to an Eastern European security pact was urged in Anglo-Polish peace conference.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, April 2.—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin tonight revealed that additional thousands of crack troops are being rushed to the German "front" as France's answer to rearmament of the Reich.

The premier addressed the closing session of the Chamber of Deputies before its Easter recess. He said the government's preparedness moves were nearing a climax and manning of the entire frontier with a "front line" of men and steel-concrete fortresses almost is completed.

The chamber immediately gave him an overwhelming confidence vote, 410 to 134, and adjourned until May 28, leaving the premier and his ministers practically dictators of France's destinies in the coming dangerous weeks, while the allies seek to check Germany's threat to the peace of Europe.

Guards Against Invasion.

Flandin, in one of the most powerful peace-time speeches ever made in the French Parliament, assured the nation his administration was leaving nothing undone to protect France from another invasion. He confirmed reports the high military council would meet on Friday to discuss retaining the present class of conscripts in service.

The giant premier, towering over the chamber from the rostrum, thundered that France intended to keep peace by:

"Our own military measures.

"Through military alliances with other nations, as a result of German rearmament."

"The high military council decided on March 22," he said, "first on certain immediate troop movements, and secondly, manning the entire German frontier.

"But it did not take the decision to keep under arms the conscripts due for demobilization shortly. However, on Friday the council will decide whether these troops should be retained."

180,000 Trained Men.

Few doubted that the council would decide to keep these men in uniform under the present crisis. The men due to be released this month after serving a year total some 180,000 trained men. They were not included in the two-year military service recently voted by Parliament, hence emergency action is essential.

The premier settled rumors France was weakening on her gold standard policy, declaring the franc would remain rigidly on a gold basis despite the present financial and political turmoil, and that the

Gunfire Sprays La Fontaine's; Mystery Shots Pepper Fence

An attempt was made Monday night to "shoot up" the Jimmie La Fontaine gambling establishment on Bladensburg road, according to excited neighbors, who pointed to scores of "bullet holes" in the La Fontaine fence and told of being awakened during the night "by the firing of machine guns.

The shooting, they said, occurred about 11 p. m. Monday. Estimates of the number of shots fired ranged from 50 to 150. Some said automatic pistols were used. Others held to the machine-gun theory. All agreed the location was the Maryland-side gate.

Eugene Plumer, chief of the Mount Rainier Police Department, declared there was a rattle of what soundedd like machine-gun bullets. He said he and several other men hurried to the scene, half-mile distant, to find no one but disturbed residents and persons who had been passing the establishment.

Apparently no one had seen the gunmen, he said. The crowd seemed to think the shootnig was done from inside the high tin fence which surrounds the resort. The wood-and-tin gate contained numerous holes, apparently freshly made by "bullets," he declared.

One near-by resident said he was awakened by the shooting but refused to let his family go near a window until the noise ceased. He described it as three successive bursts from pistols or machine guns. The place was deserted when they finally looked from the window.

He said he inquired of an employe of the establishment, who arrived soon afterward, what had happened. He was told that "some

Discriminations to Bring Denial of Benefits, Secretary Warns.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday publicly launched a policy of "cracking down" on foreign nations which refuse to give equality of treatment to American commercial interests when he warned that unless France abandons discriminations against this country's goods, it will be denied benefits accruing from the reciprocal tariff program.

Later in the day it was learned that the Secretary of State last week had tried out his new policy with success on Czechoslovakia. An Associated Press cable from Berlin reported that a spokesman for the Reich had declared that "Secretary Hull's principles are ours" and that "the German government is convinced that a new trade treaty with America will mean better possibilities for Germany to absorb American agricultural products and raw materials."

Mr. Hull's device is simple and apparently will be effective. He is pledged to the unconditionally most-favored-nation type of trade agreement in his reciprocal program. Thus when this country makes concessions to another country, for example Belgium, all other countries granting this country equality of treatment may take advantage of the concessions as far as they can.

Others Denied Benefits.

But the Secretary of State made it clear that he does not intend to permit nations setting up discriminatory bars against American products to enjoy the favors granted to countries treating this Nation on a basis of equality. So far no nation has been denied any of the concessions granted to Belgium in the treaty proclaimed Monday, the first of the reciprocal agreements to be proclaimed, except that with Cuba, a special arrangement.

President Roosevelt, however, in generalizing the benefits given to Belgium to other countries, separated the latter into three categories. Several with which this government is negotiating trade agreements were given a guarantee that they could enjoy the benefits for six months.

Another small list of nations were placed in a category to enjoy the Belgium concessions only until existing most-favored nation treaties between them and the United States expire. The remainder of the nations were placed in a category under which they may enjoy the benefits indefinitely, but they may be removed from this category—whenever the Administration wishes.

Czechoslovakia Signs.

France was placed in this last category. The French have been discriminating against certain American products by use of quotas and double column tariffs. Mr. Hull yesterday revealed that this government is now engaged in preliminary conversations with the French, which may in a few days result in actual negotiations looking toward a new trade agreement.

Pending the outcome of those conversations, France will be left in the so-called third category. This country does not have a most-favored-nation treatment agreement with France. Should the conversations now going on develop unfavorably for this government, France will be immediately stricken from the list, Secretary Hull said. Such action would deny France the concessions granted to Belgium.

Meanwhile the State Department revealed that on Friday Secretary Hull and Ferdinand Veverka, Minister of Czechoslovakia, exchanged notes which constituted a provisional unconditional most-favored nation agreement in respect of customs duties and equitable treatment generally, pending negotiation of a more comprehensive trade agreement.

Michigan News Heartens G. O. P.; Wallace Due For A Hot Spot; A Hoover Definition.

By Raymond Clapper

THE best news Republicans have heard in—it must be several years, at least—comes from Michigan. They made a clean-up in State-wide elections for judicial and minor offices.

In the corresponding elections in 1931, the Democrats came close to sweeping the State, the first indication foreshadowing the turning tide which broke through in 1932.

This news comes simultaneously with plans for Republican revival meetings in the Middle West and New England. It is sweet music for a lot of ears, that have heard nothing except bad news for a long time.

• • • •

Although no louder than the chirping of the first robin, it was possibly an equally significant harbinger that House Republican Leader Snell, in debate this week, made a personal attack on President Roosevelt. He said it seemed to him that Mr. Roosevelt was "more interested in having a good time on the palatial yacht of Mr. Astor in southern waters, than he is in passing this relief bill."

"Oh, shame on you!" shouted a Democratic member—Keller, of Illinois.

"I mean exactly what I say," Snell shot back.

Responsible Republicans hitherto have condemned Roosevelt policies, but have spared him personally. Most persons will not begrudge the President a couple of weeks' rest after what he has been through. Attacks of that kind do not get far. Yet the fact that it was made is in itself significant of an increasing boldness on the Republican side and forecasts a bitter barrage aimed directly at Mr. Roosevelt himself.

• • • •

Before long it is probable that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will be on one of the hottest spots in Washington.

Senator George, of Georgia, wrote into the $4,880,000,000 works-relief bill an amendment providing that this money may be drawn on by AAA. This amendment apparently is destined to become law despite the fact that Secretary Wallace vigorously opposed it, one of the few times in recorded history that a Government official has run away from an attempt to thrust public funds into his hands.

Wallace tried to fight it off because he knew what it would lead to. The purpose behind the simple one-sentence amendment is to get rid of the processing taxes on cotton. When Wallace embarked upon the AAA crop-curtailment program, one of his fundamental requirements was that the benefit payments to farmers be financed out of taxes on consumers. He wanted to avoid a general subsidy and arrange the tax so that the premium on reduced crops would be paid by those consuming such products and in proportion to the extent of their consumption. This, he felt, was a vitally necessary restriction, and strongly opposed any subsidy raised from the public generally.

When you buy a yard of muslin, you pay, as nearly as AAA can calculate it, 1.3 cents a yard processing tax. The processing tax amounts to about 3 cents on a work shirt and about 8 cents on a pair of overalls.

Cotton textile manufacturers, whose markets are shrinking so rapidly that the mills recently obtained the consent of NRA to restrict operations drastically, blame much of their trouble on this processing tax. They allege it operates as a sales tax equal to nearly one-half of the whole wage bill of the cotton manufacturing industry. They say this introduced an abnormal element of cost. They insist that some other way be found to raise the money which is going to cotton farmers in benefit payments.

So Senator George has come forward with the way to do it. Draw on the new works relief funds. That is, dip into this appropriation, the purpose of which is to put men to work, and use part of it to pay farmers for not raising cotton. It amounts to an outright subsidy, financed by the country as a whole.

Wallace can be sure that the pressure against the processing tax will seize upon this open door in the works relief bill. The authority is discretionary, not mandatory, and it will take a good deal of pressure to force this fundamental change of policy. From now on it is certain to be a battle between Wallace and the cotton textile industry, aided no doubt by heavy political pressure from cotton-raising States, to junk the processing tax on cotton.

Now the same thing is true of hogs. Producers have claimed that the processing tax there, while ostensibly paid by the consumers, actually has been forced back on them. Nobody knows exactly, for the incidence of a tax often is difficult to establish. But if the cotton processing tax goes out, it is a safe bet that the next cry will be to make a works-relief project out of not growing hogs and pay the hog raisers out of the new appropriation.

Then you have wheat and tobacco coming along. The only protection against scrapping the processing taxes and paying the farm benefits—they will run to nearly $500,000,000 this year—out of borrowings instead of taxes will be the independence and stubbornness of Secretary Wallace, backed up by the White House.

The fact that only the discretion of one official stands between a pay-as-you-go method of financing and wholesale subsidizing of practically every farmer in the country out of borrowed money, is an instance of the narrow margin of safety on which some of the major experiments of the New Deal rest.

favor the Townsend $200-a-month pension plan and other amendments unacceptable to the Administration.

State Authority Widened.

As finally reported the bill called for pensions for all needy over 65. The Federal Government would contribute $15 a month to all persons eligible provided the States in which they lived gave an equal amount.

Other sections would provide supplemental old-age annuities after 1942 for persons who now have jobs and pay pay-roll taxes and combined Federal and State unemployment insurance. Less important sections deal with child welfare, public health, vocational rehabilitation, crippled children and maternal aid.

Perhaps the most important committee changes would give wider authority to the States in selecting employes and recipients of the fund, and would place administration of the program under an independent board rather than the Department of Labor.

Mellon Denies Hiring Lawyer As Tax Adviser

Magnate Tells of Employing an Associate of U.S. Revenue Bureau.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 2.—Hiring of an attorney associated with the Internal Revenue Bureau by Andrew W. Mellon in 1931 had nothing to do with his tax affairs, the former Secretary of the Treasury today told the Board of Appeals hearing his protest against a $3,089,000 tax assessment.

The white-haired banker, spending another full day under cross-examination on the witness stand, told of employing D. D. Shepard in reply to question by Robert H. Jackson, attorney for the Government.

"My employment of Mr. Shepard had nothing to do with taxes," said Mellon. "I never asked him if he knew anything about taxes."

U. S. Charges Evasions.

The Government has charged that certain of Mellon's sales of securities in 1931 and their subsequent acquisition by his family's holding companies, Coalesced and Ascalot, were fraudulent tax evasions.

Jackson recalled Shepard had been made a director of these corporations. Mellon said the attorney had been sent to Pittsburgh to "look after setting up" these concerns, in addition to other duties.

"They were intended to be set up with the minimum of tax liabilities?" asked Jackson.

"A matter of course, yes," replied Mellon.

Hiring of Shepard.

But the witness, answering questions readily in a calm voice, insisted his employment of Shepard had nothing to do with taxes. He said he had asked the Bureau of Internal Revenue solicitor, Alexander Gregg, to select a young, dependable man for a position and that Gregg recommended Shepard.

"Why from the Internal Revenue Bureau?" pressed Jackson.

"I was there in the Treasury and the bureau was there and it was the nearest place to seek some one," he replied.

Late in the day, as Mellon began to show signs of physical weariness, Jackson brought out a long letter which was addressed to Mellon, as Secretary of the Treasury, and signed by David H. Blair, former tax commissioner.

Says He Never Saw Letter.

The aged financier insisted he had never seen the letter, which purported to be an answer of a request by the Secretary for a list of methods by which taxpayers could avoid income taxes. There were two pages of ways and means listed.

Jackson led Mellon through the list and the witness said deductions were made in his income returns in line with most of the suggested ways and means.

Earlier Mellon was carried by the attorney through a review of his business life for more than 30 years. The three-times Treasury Secretary testified he turned over great blocks of the Mellon fortune to his children, and related that he took no part in the management of any business concern after going into public office in 1921.

the district gave Kennedy 2,515 to Flynn's 1,545.

The Republicans held no primary. They agreed at conferences participated in by Gov. Harry W. Nice on a municipal slate of candidates headed by Blanchard Randall, jr., as candidate for mayor. The election will be held next month.

Jubilant Democrats steamrollered opposition to elect Edward J. Kelly, Mayor of Chicago, in a ballot deluge that gave him the largest vote ever received by a mayoral candidate here.

G. O. P. Badly Beaten.

Aiming to roll up an imposing vote so that national Democratic leaders would "sit up an take notice," the Chicago Democratic machine swamped Emil C. Wetten, Republican lawyer candidate, and Newton Jenkins, third party Independent candidate.

With 2,900 of the 3,127 precincts counted, the vote stood:

Kelly, 738,498.

Jenkins, 81,655.

Early in the counting, Kelly, who rose from a pick and shovel man to engineer to mayor by council appointment, passed the previous record vote, 671,189, established in 1931 by his assassinated predecessor in office, Anton Cermak, and bid fair to exceed the total 1932 plurality of 850,000 given President Roosevelt in Cook County in 1932.

Eyes on Patronage.

Today's election was the first in which Kelly's name ever was before the people on a ballot. Legislative action at a special session enabled the city council to appoint a successor to Frank Corr, mayor pro tem., after Cermack's slaying in Miami, Fla., in an attempt upon then President-elect Roosevelt's life.

Particularly was the Democratic machine joyful over the big vote for Kelly. Local Democrats insisted they had been ignored by national Democratic leaders in patronage matters.

Also with the huge public works fund soon to be available, Chicago Democrats wanted to be able to go to Washington fully backed by their constituency for any demands.

Gov. Phil Lafollette of Wisconsin gauged the strength of the 10-month-old Progressive Party in contests for two seats in the State Senate and one in the Assembly. Both Senatorial Districts had been regarded as Progressive strongholds and he looked to the electorate for a vote of confidence in his policies and liberal legislative program. Third party leaders charged Democrats and Republicans had entered into an alliance to share the senatorial posts.

Man Quickly Arraigned In N. Y. Double Slaying

New York, April 2 (AP).—Dazed and disheveled after a speedy passage through police routine, Thomas McFarland, 39, was arraigned on two first degree murder indictments today charging him with the slaying of his mother-in-law and her grand-daughter.

McFarland, arrested shortly after the bodies of the two victims were found in their modest Brooklyn home yesterday, pleaded not guilty. Police say he confessed killing his mother-in-law, Mrs. Nora Kelly, 68, and her grand-daughter, Florence McVey, 18, but that he did not assign a motive.

Bates Defends Parole System As Crime Curb

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 2.—The results of experiments in some States indicate that a well-organized system of probation would greatly reduce America's huge budget for crime prevention and detection, Sanford Bates, director of the United States Bureau of Prisons, told a large audience at the University of North Carolina tonight in an address before the Quadrennial Human Relations Institute.

Bates also stressed the view that, regardless of aid that may be expected from the Federal Government, local communities must continue to share in large measure the responsibility for crime prevention and law enforcement.

Dr. Stephen P. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, of New York, and John Hope, president of Atlanta University, also addressed today's public sessions of the institute and led informal discussions at Seminary sessions.

Scouts Danger of War Now.

Speaking this morning, Dr. Duggan, who is professor of political science in the College of the City of New York and president of the New York Academy of Public Education, asserted that, despite rumors, reports and rumblings of war, no nation in Europe is "prepared for war or desires war," at the present time.

Dr. Hope, in an address at the afternoon session, made an earnest, impressive plea for better advantages for the Negro, particularly in education.

"The hundreds of thousands of persons found guilty each year of minor crimes can not all be sent to prison and they should not be turned loose without control," Bates said in his address. "Probation provides the answer."

Citing New York and Massachusetts as examples that free use of probation may be undertaken and at the same time reduce the total volume of crime, Bates declared that the results in these States are "beginning to show that, properly applied, it can be made one of the most effective weapons for the use of society in its defense against crime."

Parole Violations Few, He Says.

Quoting census figures, Bates said approximately only 7 per cent of the persons on parole in 1931 were violators. In 1934 he said that the Division of Investigation in Washington found that of 343,582 persons arrested, only 2,597, less than 1 per cent, were arrested during the period of their parole.

Dr. Duggan, discussing the European crisis, said "the German people, while enthusiastic over recent action of their government, are no more desirous to again incur the horrors of war than are the other peoples of Europe. They have recovered their self-respect, but they fear to be isolated. Moreover, German army officials well know that it will take some years of additional preparation before Germany would be ready to fight."

"France, Great Britain and the Little Ententa want no war," he said. "Russia would regard war as a calamity that might destroy its scheme of internal socialization. Even Italy, apparently more ready to take action, will not move unless Germany moves first."

LaFontaine Place Sprayed by Shots

one was shooting at the night watchman to scare him." The noise also was heard by many Mount Rainier residents.

Inquiry Unlikely.

Chief J. J. Crowley, of the Prince Georges County Police Department, said there would be no investigation of the alleged shooting unless developments warranted it. He explained that his department had no authority to enter the premises and conduct an investigation "just on mere rumor." Police received no report of the shooting at the time of its occurrence.

However, Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the Hyattsville substation, drove past the place and reported that the gate and surrounding fence were filled with holes "which could have been made by bullets." He said persons quite often shot at signs on the fence, or at objects in the adjoining field, and there was little reason to be alarmed if they should be bullet holes.

Various opinions were advanced as to what may have actually occurred and what may have caused the shooting. Most of the supposed bullet holes in the smaller, or pedestrian gate, were made by an object penetrating from the inside. The small gate is of wood.

New York Gang Reported Here.

In direct contrast, most of the holes in the larger tin gate and in the tin fence surrounding, were made by objects penetrating from the outside. This led to the theory that some one may have been shooting from the inside at persons on the outside.

Persons claiming to know said it had been definitely determined that the establishment, which has allegedly been closed by Maryland police, was in the hands of a New York gang. It was said that the "numbers racket" formerly operated there was now running at full capacity in Bladensburg.

It also was declared that the citizens of the county on the La Fontaine pay roll, who received their pay long after the place was shut down, were now deprived of this income.

However, recently there has been some activity in the La Fontaine establishment. Automobiles have been seen entering and leaving the place at nights.

tipped off to this and got in touch with the police of Rockville.

For ten days, Lyddane was guarded wherever he went, and Mrs. Lyddane was watched. The latter, according to police, was seen to converse with Bartender Carnell many times in that period.

Carnell the police describe as the "hook-up" man. He got in touch with Boland, who, the police say, described himself as a contact man here for a Philadelphia "mob." Boland in turn lined up a third man, the police say.

Detective Barrett's version of the statements made by Boland and Carnell differed somewhat from that of State's Attorney James H. Pugh in Rockville, who now is in charge of the investigation.

Barrett quoted the men as saying that Mrs. Lyddane promised them $3,000 if they killed her husband.

Then, said Barrett, quoting the prisoners, she promised to pay them another $3,000 to kill the wife of Bell, who had named her as a corespondent in 1933.

Thereafter, Barrett said the two men confessed, she promised to give them the keys to the bank in which she worked in Rockville and show them how to get $50,000.

The three men employed by Mrs. Lyddane, according to Barrett, divided the $750 as follows: Boland, $200; Carnell, $50, and the man still sought, $500.

A Philadelphia gunman had been hired to "do the job," according to Barrett.

Lyddane in Irate Mood.

State's Attorney Pugh, who talked to both prisoners, told reporters he knew nothing about the plot on Mrs. Bell's life or the plot to loot the bank.

Mr. Lyddane, who married his wife 10 years ago, was in an irate mood when he emerged from the courthouse after visiting his wife.

When cameramen crowded him, Lyddane tore into one and smashed part of his equipment. In talking to reporters later, he told them to warn the cameramen that they had better stay away from them.

Elude Cameramen.

Later he and his wife and the latter's father, Robert McLaughlin, eluded the cameramen by going out a back door.

The charge of conspiracy to murder is a serious one under certain circumstances. The defendant may be sentenced to a penalty ranging from a fine of $1 to a fine of $2,000 and a ten-year sentence in jail.

The next act in the fantastic case comes Monday when Mrs. Lyddane, Boland and Carnell will be arraigned in the Rockville Police Court for a preliminary hearing.

The warrant on which Mrs. Lyddane and Boland were arrested charges that they "being evil-disposed and dishonest persons and wickedly devising and contriving and intending falsely, unlawfully, craftily, and unjustly by direct and indirect means did wickedly, willfully, knowingly, corruptly, and unlawfully conspire, combine, confederate and agree together and each with the other to feloniously, willfully and deliberately premeditated malice aforethought to kill and murder" Lyddane.

Athens, Ala., April 2 (AP).—A 72-year-old farmer and six others, five of them members of his family, today were under arrest for the death of Deputy Sheriff Denny Freeman, 37, beaten and fatally shot last night. Ben Blankenship, 72, his three sons, his daughter and her husband, Frank Guy, and Lee Smith, were arrested.

Sheriff Wellden said witnesses told him a car drove up before Freeman's home without lights and when the deputy went to investigate, the seven occupants beat him and shot him. Wellden said Freeman had been active in enforcement of the prohibition laws as a deputy sheriff.

Laws Don't Bar Negro Jurors, South Insists

Dixie Officials Divided on Effect of Ruling in Scottsboro Case.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 2.—There are no laws in Southern States barring Negroes from jury duty, although by custom comparatively few actually have been called.

This was emphasized today by officials of several States in noting the United States Supreme Court decision reversing the Scottsboro (Ala.) case on the ground that Negroes were systematically excluded from jury duty.

Attorney General William McGraw, of Texas, said at Austin:

"Texas statutes and the conduct of criminal trials are in conformity with the decision of the Supreme Court. Generally when (Negroes are) drawn for service a suitable excuse is presented and always accepted. Texans have demonstrated perfect ability to properly control the Negro question within the Constitution."

Attorney General A. A. Seawell, of North Carolina, said the decision "gives us pause for thought. It may mean more appeal attempts to the United States court from verdicts of our court. The effect it will have can not be predicted at this time."

From Assistant State Attorney General W. F. Barry, jr., of Tennessee, came the prediction that "I don't think that decision will have any influence whatever in the South except probably on a retrial of those cases."

Negroes are eligible for jury service in Arkansas if they hold a poll tax receipt which is a necessary qualification for an elector.

Attorney General Cary D. Landis said the Scottsboro decision will have no effect on judicial procedure in Florida.

The office of the Mississippi attorney general pointed to the records of that State Supreme Court having set aside a conviction of a Negro sentenced to hang for killing a white man when the district attorney admitted that Negroes had been excluded from jury duty because of race.

Attorney General John M. Daniel, of South Carolina, said Negroes "sit on some juries in some counties."

Attorney General A. P. Staples, of Virginia, said:

"I do not know that we ever had Negroes on juries. I have not had opportunity to study the decision, but if the Supreme Court has held it necessary to have Negroes on juries chances are we will have to take cognizance of it."

Since Maryland's noted Euel Lee case two years ago, Negroes in that State have been included on every panel from which a jury is drawn and in some instances served on the jury. Assistant Attorney General Henderson said "Maryland had its own Scottsboro case two years ago."

9 Enter Pleas Of Not Guilty In Bremer Case

Trial to Begin in Two Weeks; Karpis, 11 Others Sought.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, April 2.—Nine of the 22 persons charged with exacting the Nation's biggest kidnap ransom—$200,000 from Banker Edward G. Bremer—entered pleas of not guilty in Federal court today in preparation for their trial two weeks away.

A tenth defendant, James Wilson, former chauffeur for a Chicago physician, the Government alleges was hired to treat Bremer during his 23-day captivity, was allowed to make a conditional plea of guilty. He was accorded the option of changing his plea, if he desired, after consulting counsel.

Taken by automobile along a three-block route spotted with detectives, from the Ramsey County Jail to the Federal Building, seven defendants joined there three others who had been free on bond, for the brief arraignment.

The ten did not include Alvin Karpis, current candidate for public enemy No. 1 notoriety, but embraced his comrade, the alleged coplotter of the abduction, Arthur (Doc) Barker.

Pleading not guilty with Barker was Elmer Farmer, tavern keeper at Bensenville, Ill., where Bremer was held; Harold Alderton, whose Bensenville house was identified as the hideout, and Byron Bolton, Chicago, all indicted for the kidnaping, and Jess Doyle, Edna Murray, John J. McLaughlin, William Edward Vidler and Philip J. Delaney, all indicted for handling Bremer ransom money.

Federal Judge M. M. Joyce set the trial for April 18.

One other of the indicted is in custody—Bruno (Whitey) Austin, still held in Chicago. Government agents are still seeking Karpis and the rest of the 22 indicted.

Bremer is expected to be an important witness when the defendants are brought to trial.

Coughlin, Long, Johnson Seen In Fascist Race

Methodist Social Service Group Calls Speeches Just a Try-Out.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 2.—Father Charles E. Coughlin and Senator Huey P. Long were described by the Methodist Federation for Social Service tonight as being in a race, along with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, "for the leadership of our developing Fascism."

"The triangular contest in vituperation on the air between Johnson, Coughlin and Long was the preliminary try-out in the race," said a report prepared by the federation secretaries, the Rev. Dr. Harry F. Ward and Miss Winifred L. Chappell.

The report, described by the federation as an analysis of the programs of Senator Long and Father Coughlin, mentions Gen. Johnson only to link him, as an ally of President Roosevelt, in the contest.

Called "Unethical."

"All three of these contestants for leadership of the unawakened masses," the report concludes, "are seeking to reform and maintain the system described by our general conference as 'unethical, un-Christian and anti-social' * * *

"The profit system refuses to permit itself to be regulated as Roosevelt and Coughlin propose. Still less does capitalist decline permit the fulfillment of the fantastic promises of Huey Long."

The particular issue in the "preliminary try-out," says the report, copies of which have been sent to the clergy and lay members of the federation, "was whether Coughlin would continue to support Roosevelt or go to Long."

The analytical section of the report cited labor practices and records of the priest and the Senator against promises made to labor in their respective social justice and share-the-wealth programs.

Coughlin's Wages Hit.

"Coughlin's office workers," the report declared, "got less than a living wage. He put up his church buildings with non-union labor which he paid at a rate 40 per cent below the union scale. He has his printing done in a non-union shop. The International Typographical Union and the Cleveland Federation of Labor have openly denounced him for his non-union policy. The A. F. of L. once appointed a committee to interview him on this matter. But he would not see the committee."

In discussing Senator Long's labor record, the analysis said: "Workers on the Louisiana construction jobs, to which he points with pride, have been paid as low as 10 cents an hour."

Among Long's backers the report names Harvey C. Couch, power and railroad magnate, and Rudolf Hecht, New Orleans banker.

Father Coughlin's program, in some points, was compared by the report to what were described as similar statements in the German Nazi article of faith.

Lerroux Again Recalled To Form Madrid Cabinet

Madrid, April 2 (AP).—Alejandro Lerroux, veteran Spanish politician, tonight was trying again to solve the second Spanish republic's twelfth governmental crisis.

Lerroux's rightist-dominated cabinet resigned Saturday after extending clemency to 21 condemned rebels, and President Alcala Zamora almost immediately asked him to form another government.

His efforts meeting with no success, he surrendered the duty Sunday to Jose Martinez de Velasco, who took up the task optimistically enough but reported to the president early today the impasse between rightists and leftists was too much for him.

Single Cow Believed Cause of Epidemic

Baldwinsville, N. Y., April 2 (AP). Search for a single cow suspected of harboring the streptococci causing an epidemic of 200 cases of septic sore throat in this village of 3,800 population was pressed today as State health department doctors pushed their investigation.

Dr. Philip J. Rafle, of Syracuse, district health officer whose report to the State department brought Dr. Fred W. Graves, senior State milk sanitarian here, expressed belief that the number of cases would rise to the neighborhood of 280.

Tire Firm Sees Court Decision As Key to Vote

Goodrich Official Cites Test Case; Holds Ballot Would Be Contempt.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, April 2.—An impartial election of rubber workers for representation in negotiations with three major tire companies can not be conducted until settlement of a pending court case, T. G. Graham, vice president of the B. F. Goodrich Co., said today.

A test case on the subject is now pending in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The case was taken to court at Cincinnati by Goodrich and the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., after they were ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to conduct an impartial election.

"I don't see how we could consent to an impartial election as suggested by the National Labor Relations Board," said Graham, "without being in contempt of the circuit court where the whole matter is now pending.

Ralph Lind, of Cleveland, regional Labor Board advisor, said earlier that "the key to the situation lies in the hands of the companies."

S. H. Dalrymple, head of the Goodrich local of the United Rubber Workers Union and John House, president of the Goodyear local, both said the union would consent to a Government-supervised election and would hold up further action on a proposed rubber workers strike "if the companies will abide by the decision and actually negotiate with the winner."

In reply to the National Labor Relations Board's decision seeking to obtain company withdrawal of their support of so-called company unions, an official said:

"Speaking for the B. F. Goodrich Co. only, it is my feeling that we are doing everything section 7(a) of the national recovery administration code provides. The NLRB, in its decision, threatened to cite the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. for violating the NRA."

Insulin's Use as Stimulant To Appetite Is Recommended

Famed Foe of Diabetes Can Combat Many Other Ills, Doctor Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., April 2.—The use of insulin as a stimulant to the appetite, particularly for underweight children, was recommended to the California Medical Association today by Dr. E. Kost Shelton.

The famed hormone, developed originally for the treatment of diabetes, also has proven valuable, Dr. Shelton reported, in combating a wide range of human ailments.

"From the intelligent application of insulin," he stated, "benefit can be secured for persons suffering from tuberculosis, mental difficulties, narcotic addition, the various types of anemia and kidney and other disorders."

In the treatment of underweight persons, Dr. Shelton said, insulin produces an increased appetite.

The weight gain in most cases, the physician added, is slow, and approximately 30 per cent of adults relapsed to their former weight level after the treatment stopped.

"On the whole, however," he asserted, "the treatment was said to be definitely worth while."

Dr. Shelton also reported beneficial use by physicians of the hormone for persons seeking to regain weight and strength after illness or serious operations.

Defendant Denies Alienation Count

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 2. — The defense rested late today in the $200,000 alienation of affections suit brought by the first wife of Henry Bedford-Jones, author, after his second wife, Mrs. Mary Bernardin Bedford-Jones, the defendant, denied stealing the writer's affections.

The defendant, last witness in the case, denied on direct and cross examination any intent to lure Bedford-Jones from his first wife, denied anything improper in their friendship and derided suggestions that they attended speakeasy and hotel parties prior to their marriage.

She said Bedford-Jones did not propose to her or suggest marriage until late in 1929, after he and his first wife were divorced. The proposal, she said, first came by mail to London and later he came there to "talk things over." The couple were married a few weeks later in London.

Closing arguments were to start tomorrow morning. It was believed the case would reach the jury by nightfall.

A million people can't be crazy!

PART I

When a million people have all done the same thing, there must be good reason for it. And when they have done it over a period of 20 years, there must be an even bigger reason.

There was no law to compel these people to do this thing. And there certainly was no secret about the price of gasoline and motor fuel. Prices are very plainly posted on pumps and people could very easily make their choice. What's more, it's human nature to jump at the lowest price there is.

What we're leading up to is this: In spite of the fact that different gasolines can be bought at different prices, over a million people have found it good business to buy the original special motor fuel—Amoco-Gas—at 3c per gallon more than regular gasoline. And in face of the greatest barrage of claims and counter-claims in the history of the gasoline business, they have stuck to Amoco-Gas.

Why? They are not philanthropists. They work hard for their money. Gasoline is a big item in their budget and they know they can buy regular gasoline for less per gallon at the pump.

Then why do they keep on paying more per gallon for Amoco-Gas? Because they know by actual experience that Amoco-Gas is really cheaper when figured the right way—when allowing for its greater mileage and other proven economies. They know also that Amoco-Gas, among other things, furnishes a luxury in riding—a delightful Pullman comfort—found in no other motor fuel.

They know too, even if they made no allowance whatever for the fewer gallons of Amoco-Gas required to go the same distance—even if they made no allowance for the other Amoco operating economies—the pleasure and driving-luxury of Amoco-Gas would alone justify the slight increased cost per gallon over regular gasoline—about that of a postage stamp a day.

But they know that actually Amoco-Gas costs not more per day, but less. For experience has shown them that the small amount extra per gallon put up at the beginning really winds up by saving them money in the end—in greater mileage, fewer repair bills and extended motor life.

So the moral of all this is: A million people can't be crazy! There must be good reason why so many people will pay more per gallon for Amoco-Gas. And the reason is—it does more and is well worth more!

PART II

The story so far is about Amoco-Gas. If we hadn't said a word about a GREATER Amoco-Gas, these million people would have gone right on feeling that Amoco was the finest motor fuel on earth and that it simply couldn't be improved.

And we didn't think it could be improved either—till something happened! The American Oil Company built the largest, most modern refining unit in the world at Texas City, Texas. It can do things never before done in producing gasoline.

One of these things is the remarkable way this new refinery, through new patented processes, can put more of the available energy from the raw crudes into the finished gasoline. Always wasted in older methods of refining, this extra available energy makes an entirely new quality in our basic gasoline.

Everything that made Amoco great has been kept in; but to the now improved basic gasoline is being added a larger percentage of the most costly of Amoco's exclusive ingredients. Therefore we are able to offer—GREATER Amoco-Gas, which reaches a new world's high in calorific★ value.

PART III

The greater calorific value of GREATER Amoco-Gas means this to you as a motorist—it takes less fuel to get more results.

Whether or not you have been a user of Amoco, a new experience in motoring is in store for you when you fill up on GREATER Amoco-Gas. Amoco's twenty year record of lower cost per mile through more miles, quicker starting, surer power, easier riding and fewer repair bills, is surpassed by GREATER Amoco-Gas.

GREATER Amoco-Gas costs us more to produce, but is being sold to the motorist on the same basis as the previous Amoco-Gas.

Fill up on GREATER Amoco-Gas and stay with it. The saving stays with you. Sold by thousands of American dealers and stations from Maine to Florida and inland. American Oil Company.

[★ CALORIFIC VALUE: The heat units available in a gallon of motor fuel for direct conversion into mileage and power.]

Leaders Weigh Force Tactics In Works Snarl

Robinson, Garner Intervene in Attempt to End Deadlock.

Strong-arm tactics to force an agreement on the beleaguered works and relief bills were pondered last night by Senate and House leaders, after an all-day conference on the measure had produced exactly nothing in net results.

Two men famous for their skill in conference bargaining—Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and Representative James Buchanan, of Texas — faced each other again across the conference table, neither yielding.

When the meeting broke up, reporting "no progress," Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson conferred with the House conference committee. With him was Vice President Garner. Afterward Robinson said he hoped for an agreement today.

Speculation turned on whether the Senate might move to instruct its conference committee, or even appoint new conferees, if the deadlock continues.

Center of the conference impasse is a provision in the last conference report, requirnig that one-third of all loans made to States from a $900,000,000 fund earmarked for that purpose be expended directly for labor.

Secretary of Interior Ickes objected to the limitation, and the White House backed him up. Yesterday Senator Glass, who has the Senate conferees 100 per cent behind him, agreed to reduce the labor requirement to one-fourth of total loans. Representative Buchanan, supported by Democratic House conferees, declined to accept any limitation. And there the matter rested, when conferees adjourned.

There was one other point in controversy. The White House is said to have objected to an amendment requiring Senate confirmation of all new administrative officers, State and local, directing the program. Senator Glass and his conferees stood pat for Senate confirmation.

The Virginian's position for the percentage labor limitation is substantially this: He believes that without it the Government not only can, but will, purchase, or lend money for this purpose, of operating municipal power and gas plants, involving no new employment. If this is the purpose, he believes a new bill should be offered on its own merits. Many of the other conferees share his views.

Offers to Broaden Plan.

Yesterday Glass not only offered to reduce the labor requirement—he offered to broaden the language of the amendment, so that work done indirectly on materials contributing to a work project would be included in the estimate. This, he told conferees, would enable the Government to undertake all true work-relief projects — even slum clearance and rural electrification, claimed to have been barred by the one-third limitation.

"I think Glass is suffering from a misapprehension as to what the amendment is supposed to do," Secretary Ickes said.

"I have the highest possible respect for his ability and integrity. There is an honest difference of opinion between us.

"If the bill goes through with this amendment, there is no use of our going ahead with new works projects. The money would have to be given away."

Senator Glass had little to tell reporters following yesterday's conference, but he poked fun at a newspaper story that he had "recanted."

Glass said merely that there had been no agreement, and the next move was not up to him. In another quarter, it was suggested that Buchanan might confer with Ickes to find out whether the 25 per cent labor limitation is acceptable to the Administration.

Called Democratic Quarrel.

It was learned that all the conference talking was done by Democrats, with Glass and Buchanan principals.

"This is a Democratic quarrel," said one of the Republican conferees. "We are letting them fight it out."

Representative Robelt L. Bacon (Republican), New York, who was instrumental in bringing about the last 33 1-3 per cent labor compromise, carried half a dozen new compromise plans with him to conference.

But he never got a chance to use one of them.

"We were too far apart," he explained.

Resentment against the appointment of Relief Administrator Hopkins, Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell and other members of the Administration's "brain trust" to direct the program, led some Senators to question the likelihood of their designation.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Democratic whip, said he had advised Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois to call off scheduled conferences with Hopkins, believing he would have no general supervision over the program.

"So strong is this feeling," said Lewis, "that I would not be surprised to find the President selecting another man to handle relief problems. For that reason I have notified Gov. Horner that there might be no particular good accomplished in coming to Washington to see Mr. Hopkins at this time; it might be better to wait until the works bill finally is passed and we find out what the President is going to do."

Dragging of River For Boy Planned

Virginia Child Is Feared Lost in the Jackson.

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Va., April 2.—Authorities here planned tonight to drag the Jackson River from Clifton Forge to Covington in the hope of recovering the body of 4-year-old Frank E. (Sonny) Rose, missing since Thursday.

Officers and men of the Covington Fire Department, CCC workers and citizen volunteers will begin the work tomorrow.

Hope of finding the child alive waned when bloodhounds trailed tracks thought to be his to the bank of the river. An extensive search has been hampered by high water, but the levels receded today. The child's father is a bank official here.

Budget Items Gain Fairfax Citizens' Favor

Board Hearing Brings Plea for Retaining All Activities.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 345, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

At a public hearing on the proposed county budget for the 1935-36 fiscal year, held yesterday by the Board of Supervisors, most of about 100 persons present urged continuance of present county activities.

There was no outspoken opposition to any appropriation, but several citizens, led by Col. Richard R. Farr, asked the board not to increase the present tax rate.

Among the items especially urged by the citizens were the appropriations for schools, the health unit and the county police. Several citizens and delegations urged that the county establish a larger police force, citing that the cost of police work at present is two and one-third cents per capita and declaring the force inadequate.

The health unit item was indorsed by practically all of the school and civic leagues, county granges charitable and community organizations. The proposal of the County Medical Society that it take over the health work was termed "selfish and highly inefficient."

The board of supervisors will give final consideration to the budget today and will set the tax rates for the next year.

The total county levy requirements will be $89,395.20, with $4,143.50 for fire prevention and $6,500 for Confederate pensions. The county schools will require $223,190 for operation and $30,463.44 for debt service. Of the total amount needed for schools, $141,000 is to be raised by local taxation. These figures are based on the proposed budget, in which very little change is expected to be made today.

Fairfax County Chapter, American Red Cross, voted yesterday to buy $100 worth of garden seed to be distributed among the indigent families of the county not eligible for FERA assistance. The seed will be distributed under supervision of Mrs. Pearl Edler, county welfare director; Mrs. J. Hunter Mack and Miss Sarah Cox.

Mrs. Russell A. Lynn, Mrs. John W. Echolls, Mrs. Will Cleveland, Mrs. E. D. Vosbury, Miss Jennie Moore, Miss Sarah Cox, Mrs. M. M. Barnard, Mrs. Albert Lester, Mrs. J. B. Davis, Mrs. Claude Oliver and Mrs. J. Hunter Mack were elected delegates to the National Red Cross Congress in Washington April 8-11.

The town council of Vienna last night voted to cooperate with the FERA on construction of a sidewalk from Maple avenue to Vienna School. The FERA will furnish the labor and the town all the material. The walk will be 475 feet long. The work was requested by a delegation from the Vienna Parent-Teacher Association.

Landscaping of the school grounds and erection of a stone wall, financed by the FERA and the Vienna P.-T. A., started yesterday.

Rogers Peet Tweedmoor Suits

When you think of clothing for hard wear, do you think of a fabric that might well be a second-cousin to cast iron? Rogers Peet changed all that when they invented their exclusive Tweedmoor Cloth—an all-wool fabric that will take all the rough usage you can give it, without any sacrifices to comfort or smart style. It is that kind of fabric because of the special wool that is used in the weaving, and the way it is woven—extra long wool fibers, extra tightly twisted. The result is a beautiful Scotch cheviot that is husky without being heavy or hard.

And when this cloth is hand-tailored by Rogers Peet into suits designed by Rogers Peet, the combination is something superb. Only Rogers Peet can produce Tweedmoor Suits, and only in this store in Washington can you buy them. Priced at $65. Other Rogers Peet Suits begin at $45.

Mobs in Athens Protest Mercy To Insurgents

'Down With Tsaldaris,' Shout Grecians, Irate Over Clemency.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, April 2.—Public clamor against the government's clemency to convicted rebels had Grecian nerves at trigger edge tonight, with talk of another revolution and demands for restoration of the monarchy heard in some quarters.

Shouts of protest against Premier Panayoti Tsaldaris' failure to mete out the death penalty to rebel officers went up from thousands of parading students who marched to the heavily guarded Parliament building under the leadership of John Metaxas, who quit Tsaldaris' cabinet to protest its mildness toward the insurgents.

Elsewhere in the city other throngs of students cried, "We want the monarchy restored!" "We want Metaxas for premier!" "Death to the Venizelists!" and "Down with Tsaldaris!"

Metaxas Coup Foreseen.

It was reported Jianni Polychronopoulos, former chief of the department of criminal police, who, with 17 others was acquitted last week of charges of attempting the assassination of former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, asserted ringleader of the recent revolt, had joined forces with Metaxas.

Whispers in Athens said Metaxas and Polychronopoulos, together with former Minister of Communications John Rhallis, were plotitng some sort of coup.

In this connection the Communist Newspaper Risopastis said "Polychronopoulos, just released from prison for a crime everybody knows he committed, has placed his services at the disposal of Metaxas and the royalist gang."

"Polychronopoulos is known to maintain terrorist gangs under the name 'Populist action groups,'" the newspaper charged.

Assails Defense League.

"There are 62 of these groups organized in Athens, equipped with arms stolen from the police and army. They are the exact counterpart of the equally bandit-like Republican Defense League. What the Republican Defense League has been unable to do in destroying its opponents will be carried out by Polychronopoulos' gangs which will carry out a wholesale massacre of Venizelists."

So tense was the capital that the government ordered out armored tanks and stationed them before Tsaldaris' home and public buildings.

Troops with bayonets fixed, cavalrymen and hundreds of gendarmes patrolled the streets.

Earlier in the day, 13 officers condemned to life imprisonment for participation in the rebellion were publicly degraded, epaulets and insignia ripped from their uniforms and caps, while thousands looking on howled approval and cried "lynch them, lynch the traitors!"

Two spectators struck some of the prisoners, but soldiers kept them from bodily harm.

Skating Queen Admits Her Former Marriage

Buffalo, N. Y., April 2 (AP).—A secret marriage to George Nichols, former National Boxing Association light heavyweight boxing champion of Sandusky, Ohio, was admitted today by Kit Klein, national women's speed skating title holder, and she sped tonight toward Sayre, Pa., to explain the situation to her announced fiance, Dr. Thomas Outland.

She said it was a "prank" marriage and had been considered a "joke" by both herself and Nichols, but it had never been set aside in court.

Miss Klein admitted she was married to Nichols after 24 hours of repeated denials that the ceremony was performed at Ripley, N. Y., October 9, 1933.

government will continue to issue gold coins.

He devoted most of his speech to the military crisis.

Flandin said the French military measures are known, but added cryptically that there are others which the government keeps secret, but which perhaps are not among its least efficacious steps to prevent attack.

"France could scarcely let the peace structure built up in the last 15 years collapse," the premier said.

Mauretania Will Sail To Ships' Graveyard

London, April 2 (AP).—After more than 20 years among the fast Atlantic liners, the Mauretania will be broken up at Rosyth, Scotland, it was officially announced today.

(The Mauretania in August, 1929, went from New York to Plymouth in 4 days 17 hours 49 minutes.)

The 27-year-old vessel in the next fortnight will sail on her last journey, with a skeleton crew and under her own steam, to the Scottish ship graveyard.

Ohio Liquor Chief, Fired, Kills Self

Enforcement Officer, 39, Discharged by Davey.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, April 2.—Ten days after he was dismissed as chief of the State liquor enforcement division, Edmond G. Mathews, 39, shot and killed himself today.

His widow, who was visiting a neighbor at her husband's request at the time, attributed the act to worry "about the deal he received from Gov. Martin L. Davey."

"He must have been temporarily unbalanced mentally," she said. "He wouldn't have done such a thing otherwise."

Gov. Davey, in ordering Mathews' dismissal and the removal of the position of chief liquor inspector from the civil service classification, declared Mathews had refused "in the most profane and defiant language," to comply with the request that he resign.

In a statement at that time, the Governor asserted a "super government of the underworld" is in control of the Ohio liquor business.

Switzes Guilty, Reveal Secrets To Win Liberty

Judges Puzzled Over How to Word Verdict; Couple's Estrangement Rumored.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 2.—A knotty legal problem was handed the judges trying Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz, Americans, on charges of espionage as Public Prosecutor Charles Hamel asked their exemption from punishment for revealing workings of the alleged "spy ring" to which they belonged.

The difficult question up to the judges, it was understood, was how to word the verdict so as to take into account the Switzes' confession and at the same time insure their escaping punishment.

Corridors of the court building, where the secret trials of a score of espionage defendants are progressing, buzzed with rumors that the Switzes were estranged.

Eyewitnesses said Mrs. Switz, at the close of the day's session, passed through the prisoners' box, smiled affectionately at her husband and grasped his hand.

Switz, the witnesses said, appeared to ignore the guesture, keeping his back turned.

Observers have been impressed by the reciprocal affection shown by the Americans during their 15 months' imprisonment. They were seen to exchange smiles today.

Prosecutor Hamel asked the court to exempt the Americans from punishment under the clemency clause of the espionage law, which virtually assures them of technical acquittal.

The judges were reported contemplating the couple "guilty, but exempt from punishment," or guilty with prisons sentences which would be canceled immediately.

The prosecutor's recommendation lightened the task of the defense attorney, Andre Klotz, who accepted it in his plea to the judges to do likewise when they pass judgment on all the 20 defendants.

Rosita Moreno Wed To Studio Executive

Yuma, Ariz., April 2 (AP).—Melville A. Shauer, Paramount Studio executive, and Rosita Moreno, screen actress, were married here today by Justice E. A. Freeman.

They were accompanied by Miss Moreno's mother, Mrs. Aschension Moreno, and William Gordon, the actress' business manager. The party returned immediately to Hollywood.

Reno, Nev., April 2 (AP).—Still a recluse after four days of residence in the "divorce capital," Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani remained in her home on Newlands Heights today, secluded from the rest of Reno's "colony" of divorce seekers.

A large amount of luggage, including several trunks, came by train from New York to the princess' home today. It also was reported that two or three of Barbara's retinue of servants had arrived by train.

Poles Indicate They May Join A Security Pact

Suggest Locarno Revision So They May Enter Along With the Germans.

By the United Press.

Warsaw, April 2.—The Anglo-Polish peace parley was reported tonight to have considered modification of the eastern European security pact to make adherence of Germany and Poland possible.

Germany has objected to the military clauses providing mutual armed assistance against an aggressor and the right of signatories to send troops across territory of others in the projected treaty. Elimination of these provisions might find both the Reich and Poland ready to adhere, although officially both sides remained silent.

Sources close to the government said no proposals were made by either the British or Polish statesmen in today's talks, the parley being primarily exploratory, like the Berlin and Moscow meetings.

Communique Today.

A joint communique will be issued tomorrow.

Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, war minister and the nation's strong man, was believed to have stressed this to Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal and peace envoy, during the initial day's conversations of the current two-day parley here.

Sessions between Eden and the Polish statesmen, including Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, were secret, as is customary on this tour by Eden to European capitals in the interests of checking the war threat, following German rearmament.

Both Beck and Pilsudski, however, stressed Poland's willingness to co-operate with England and the other allies—but made it clear they always had to consider their difficult position between Nazi Germany on the West and Soviet Russia on Poland's eastern frontier.

Laval to Visit Warsaw.

The proposed eastern European security pact with military clauses calling for armed assistance against any aggressor nation formed the keystone of the Anglo-Polish talks, as was the case in Berlin and Moscow in the last ten days. In view of the Polish uncertainity because of her new friendship with Germany and her delicate balance as a buffer state, however, it was doubted this nation would agree to adhere.

French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval will visit Warsaw the end of the month on a similar peace mission.

Laval's acceptance of Poland's invitation to stop in Warsaw en route to Moscow was announced by the foreign office today.

Danish Premier Ill, Quits Conference.

By the Associated Press.

Copenhagen, Denmark, April 2.—Premier Theodore Stauning entered a hospital for a heart examination today shortly after attending the first meeting of Scandinavian foreign ministers gathered here to discuss German rearmament. The premier's illness was attributed to overwork. Minister of Finance H. P. Hansen will take the premier's portfolio.

Here to confer with Stauning and the Danish foreign minister, Peter Munch, are foreign ministers Richard Sandler, of Sweden, and Halvdan Koht, of Norway.

France Hails Laval's Bid From Warsaw.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 2.—An announcement at Warsaw that Foreign Minister Pierre Laval would be invited to visit the Polish capital was hailed in official circles tonight as an initial victory in France's campaign to woo Poland back into the French camp.

Laval has accepted or will accept the invitation, sources close to the government said, and will stop at Warsaw on his way back to Paris from Moscow.

Roosevelt Misses Fish in Bahamas

'Very Little Luck' Off Long Island, He Radios.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., April 2.—President Roosevelt reported "very little luck" today in fishing off Long Island in the Bahaman group.

He sent the following message to Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary, established at Miami headquarters:

"Have been fishing all morning off Long Island. Very little luck. Probably proceed tomorrow to Conception Island."

It was off Long Island that President Roosevelt tried his luck at fishing last July 4 on his way to Puerto Rico.

Mr. Roosevelt is apparently going ahead with previous plans to continue his cruise for the remainder of the week.

Offer New Plan to Curb War

Underwood & Underwood.

Tax Bill to Cut Profits of War To 3 Pct. Urged

Senate Body Measure Also Would Put Curb on Personal Incomes.

corporations." They would be inducted into the military service and placed under command of the President.

When so inducted, these corporation officials would have an Army status and Army pay. Failure to cooperate would result in their being shifted into combat service at the discretion of the industrial management board.

Under the bill all commodities exchanges would be closed and a commodities control commission would fix prices and control sales. The President would be given authority to close securities exchanges and to issue rules for private financing. A securities commission would be given an initial $500,000,000 fund to start financing expansion of war industries.

License of Industries.

In addition, the President would be authorized to license industries related to the prosecution of the war.

Penalties would run as high as fines of $100,000.

"The committee can not guarantee," the statement continued, "that this bill will not be repealed under pressure at the beginning of a war. It can not honestly guarantee that its administration will remain uninfluenced by the pressure of huge and recalcitrant corporate taxpayers. I can simply state that given the conditions of no repeal and efficient, honest performance, it will do more than any other proposal before Congress to limit profiteering and to avoid the disastrous and possibly catastrophic results of another post-war deflation."

"Pay as You Fight."

The tax program is designed on a "pay-as-you-fight" basis. Tax payments would be collected quarterly. By this method huge war indebtednesses remaining after the conflict ends would be cut down.

House leaders, meanwhile, planned to bring the McSwain bill, calling for more moderate action in case of war, on the floor for initial debate today. An effort may be made to amend the McSwain measure to include some of the munitions committee proposals.

The committee plan was drafted by John T. Flynn, economist and committee adviser.

A contract for 15 bombing airplanes has been awarded to the Glenn Martin Co., of Baltimore, Md., it was announced yesterday at the War Department. Assistant Secretary of War Woodring has approved the purchase of the ships for $652,279.

War Department officials estimated yesterday that by June the Air Corps and the General Headquarters Air Force would have 1,367 planes. Of this total, 146 will be new bombers.

Mexican Aids In U. S. Accused As Church Foes

McCormack Demands State Department Protest Acts of 2 Consuls.

A State Department protest against alleged interference with American religious ceremonies by two Mexican consuls was demanded yesterday by Representative McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts.

Earlier the House Foreign Affairs Committee instructed its chairman, Representative McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, to learn whether the State Department favored a resolution asking the President to use his good offices to prevent religious persecution in Mexico or elsewhere.

McCormack said the House Committee on Un-American Activities, of which he is chairman, received "too late to investigate" evidence in dicating two consuls, Hermolao E. Torres, of San Bernardino, Calif., and Alejandro V. Martinez, of Los Angeles, sought to prevent religious demonstrations in this country.

"The State Department," McCormack added, "should not only act, but speak affirmatively, serving public notice on Mexico that such actions will not be tolerated or permitted in this country.

The Mexican government should be advised that 'religious freedom of conscience, together with the free exercise thereof,' is a constitutional right in the United States and that any consul of Mexico in this country will not be permitted to interfere with the same."

McCormack said both incidents had been reported to the State Department and were under investigation.

McReynolds consented to take up the Fish resolution with the State Department, but made plain he opposed its passage.

Fish charged the Mexican government with pursuing "a relentless and ruthless policy of religious repression and persecution and substituting atheism and communism for Christianity."

U. S. May Join New Attempts At Chaco Peace

Its Acceptance Depends Upon Others' Attitude, Declares Hull.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Buenos Aires, April 2.—Hope was renewed tonight that the United States again might join neutral South American nations in an effort to halt the bloody Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay.

So far the warring countries have refrained from wholly accepting the latest peace suggestions submitted by Chile and Argentina in a joint effort to induce the United States, Brazil and Peru to co-operate with them in mediating the conflict still raging in the Chaco border area.

Earlier indications that the move had encountered an obstacle faded when it became certain neither Bolivia nor Paraguay officially had received the peace suggestions and both said important negotiations were under way.

Acceptance by the United States of the joint Argentine-Chilean invitation to collaborate in Chaco peace efforts depends largely upon the attitudes of other invited nations, Secretary of State Cordell Hull said yesterday.

The Secretary said that if the United States accepts the invitation it will be with the idea of making every possible contribution to a peaceful solution of the Chaco situation in conjunction with the associated governments. He would give no indication as to when the answer of the United States might be expected.

The invitation to the United States, Brazil and Peru was made at the specific insistence of Paraguay, it was learned.

Diving Tube Tested For Lusitania Job

New Bell May Be Used to Salvage Liner.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 2.—A diving tube perfected by Simon Lake, submarine inventor, was tested today by representatives of a syndicate planning to work on the sunken liner Lusitania.

The salvage engineers were so favorably impressed that Lake is expected to receive an order to build a tube with which salvage operations can be conducted on the Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine in the Atlantic Ocean off the southern coast of Ireland during the World War.

The test was made in the East River off Rikers Island, where Lake for some time has been conducting experiments and attempting salvage work on an old sunken wreck.

The tube, attached to a salvage boat, has a submarine chamber at its other end. The tube was let down in 40 feet of water and the test made under Lake's personal supervision.

Germany Asks A 'War Holiday' For Ten Years

Hitler's Counter Proposal to Simon's Security Pact Is Confirmed.

By the United Press.

London, April 2.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler suggested a ten-year "war holiday" in his conversation last week with the British Peace Mission, according to advices from Berlin published here today, and confirmed in German quarters.

Hitler suggested pledging a decade of mutual nonaggression between Germany and her neighbors as substitute for the Moscow-inspired eastern European security pact, with armed assistance clauses against an aggressor.

The report said Hitler rejected the security pact offered by Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, in the Berlin conversations, and offered as a counter proposal:

A definite method for defining an "aggressor nation."

Withholding of assistance and supplies from any nation agreed upon as the aggressor in any future war.

The Star's diplomatic correspondent said he obtained the information from a United States diplomat in Berlin.

Competent British sources commented: "There is a certain amount of substance therein."

However, it was added that point 2 was inaccurate. The point was comparatively minor for the moment, although vital in the final analysis—the other two being of immediate and far-reaching significance.

If Germany is willing to enter into a boycott agreement against an attacking nation, observers agreed it indicated Hitler's professions of pacifist intentions have more basis than had been expected—at least for the time being. In ten years, when he has had time to consolidate the Reich as a powerfully armed military state, some feel he might alter his attitude.

A German spokesman here confirmed the report to the United Press, adding the proposal was handed Sir John in written form.

Duce Demands Unity of Action, Ridicules 'Diplomatic Circuit'

By the Associated Press.

Milan, Italy, April 2.—Premier Benito Mussolini today bluntly described the British and French traveling peace missions as "the European diplomatic circuit," and demanded unity of action among France, Italy and Great Britain if war is declared.

Il Duce, in characteristic style, warned against over-optimism regarding the forthcoming three-power peace parley at Stresa, in northern Italy, on April 11, when the powers will seek a united front against German rearmament.

"The usual castles of illusion are being built," Mussolini wrote in his newspaper, Popolo d'Italia. "But it can not be said these three governments have been completely in unison in facing the German gesture of March 16 . . . (Adolf Hitler's announcement he intended to organize a conscript army of possibly 500,000 men, in violation of the Versailles Treaty).

"Stresa should establish a common line of action in the face of a number of eventualities, such as warfare.

"This European diplomatic circuit, commenced last January in Rome by M. Laval (French foreign minister), with successive halts at London, Berlin, Moscow, Warsaw and Praha, will be concluded in at least the first phase at Stresa.

"After the failure of the British explorations in Berlin, many hopes are converging on Stresa . . . according to some, from the Stresa meeting should come the salvation of humanity—something like a miracle to end a nightmare.

"It is absolutely necessary to pour a certain quantity of water into the wine of this exaggerated optimism.

Warns Italians.

"Italians must not give themselves up to exceptional illusions. It is our very duty to warn them, because there is nothing sadder than the delusion which follows an illusion made roseate by vain desire.

"If Stresa should consecrate an identity of viewpoints among the three western powers, that would be something. It will be necessary that responsibility be assumed by those representing these powers . . . responsibilities which should take no account of the parley's probable effect upon the French municipal elections or the result of (English) bye-elections which might swing in favor of labor . . . 'It is understandable that the hopes and interests of the world should be directed at the impending Stresa Conference, but there should be no premature enthusiasm induced by a belief that Stresa precedes the millenium."

Pleasant Contrast.

Figuratively speaking, the House District Crime Committee has swept the District off its feet. At the conclusion of its investigation into lawlessness in the National Capital it has had the courage to join vigorously in the local demand for an adequate police force. In ordinary circumstances this straightforward policy would be regarded as a matter of course. But the District has been neglected so long that it may be pardoned for an outburst of enthusiasm when a congressional committee carefully studies one of its most urgent needs and actively sponsors remedial measures.

The committee's final report may not be completed for several weeks. But it took cognizance of the fact that the District budget bill is in the last stages of enactment. To thrust the issue of an adequate police force immediately before Congress the committee brought in a special report, calling for funds to employ 141 new officers and men. The timeliness of this action is indicated by the Senate appropriation subcommittee's approval of the increase.

Similar requests have been made repeatedly by local authorities and numerous civic groups. They have been coolly ignored. The House sub-committee, which is supposed to be familiar with Washington's municipal problems, has manifested very little concern over the city's disgraceful crime record. The current departure from that lethargic attitude is one of the most promising signs that has appeared on the legislative horizon in a decade.

As to the soundness of the committee's advice there is no question. "This recommendation," the report says, "is based upon evidence before this sub-committee and the testimony of competent witnesses, each one of whom urged this sub-committee to consider favorably an increase in police personnel." Not only have Chairman Randolph and his colleagues weighed the evidence fairly and accurately; they have also refused to permit their judgment to be warped by the unsatisfactory conditions they found in some branches of the Police Department.

In some respects, therefore, the conduct of the committee is even more important than its recommendations. It has treated the District as an important municipality confronted by acute local problems rather than an orphan trying to sponge upon the Federal Government. It has adopted an impartial attitude, instead of using District legislation to promote political prestige in distant constituencies. In a most emphatic way the committee's action suggests the necessity of lifting the District budget out of the hands of sub-committees on Federal appropriations and placing it in charge of groups which are actively interested in the District and its problems.

The Guggenheim Fellows.

The broad scope of contemporary scholarship is nowhere better demonstrated than in the assortment of projects contemplated by the new Guggenheim fellows. Forty-seven artists and scholars have been subsidized for at least a year of research and creative work. And the research subjects rival an encyclopedia in comprehensive diversity.

For example, the 1935 program includes studies of emotional expression among the Chinese; Bismarck's technique in manipulating public opinion; music in primitive cultures; the synthesis of sex hormones; the adaptation of Greek art forms to modern choreography; examination of mummified muscular tissue for comparison of blood types of ancient and living Egyptians; the emergence and disintegration of world outlooks of the past; and a system of determining whether a given weapon fired a certain bullet or shell. This, confusingly described as "forensic ballistics," comes at a particularly auspicious moment. Present indications throughout the world point to an abundance of convenient laboratories on the subject.

This eleventh annual selection embraces eight artists, four composers, four persons engaged in the arts of the theater, three novelists, one poet and 27 scholars. Of these, five are women, three are Negroes and one is Japanese. Some are married; some are not. Some will work abroad; some will remain at home. All are unquestionably well qualified.

The question rises, however, as to whether the new fellows represent the type envisioned by the donors of the memorial foundation. If, as has been commonly assumed, the purpose of the fellowships is to enable exceptional men and women to continue work which they otherwise would have been forced to abandon, the preponderance of outstanding (and thus, self-sustaining) names this year is surprising.

Nevertheless, whatever the basis for the judges' nominations it is clearly evident that this gracious philanthrophy will continue successfully to fulfill its aim:

> to improve the quality of education and the practice of the arts and professions in the United States, to foster research, and to provide for the cause of better international understanding.

The Scottsboro Decision.

The State of Alabama is in a hot spot as a result of the Supreme Court decision in the Scottsboro cases. But the country as a whole will have little sympathy with its predicament. From the beginning the atmosphere of these cases has been that of a miscarriage of justice. And the stubborn effort of the authorities to consummate the death sentence in face of many reasonable doubts has been an indication of judicial weakness rather than strength.

The Supreme Court has now ordered, without a dissenting voice, that the judgment in the case of Charles Norris "must be reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion." That means, in effect, that Alabama must end its consistent practice, shared in other Southern States, of excluding qualified Negro citizens from jury service. Such a mandate from the Supreme Court was never anticipated in the early stages of the Scottsboro trials. If it had been, one may safely predict, the questionable indictments in these rape cases would have been withdrawn long since.

Of course, more problems are raised than solved in the opinion handed down by Chief Justice Hughes. The racial issue has been so strongly stressed in the Scottsboro cases that a unanimous verdict by a jury of mixed color in this instance seems highly improbable. And a situation of that sort is far too likely to encourage mob resentment, if not mob action. New indictments to prosecute are promised by the Lieutenant Governor of Alabama. It would be wise to reflect very soberly before they are presented.

From their careful investigations the Supreme Court justices unanimously conclude that, both in Jackson and Morgan Counties, there are many Negroes well qualified for jury service. The same conclusion, of course, would be drawn from any impartial inquiry in almost any county of any Southern State. Soon or late the inclusion of competent colored citizens on jury panels must become a universal practice. It is only stupidity and stubborness which has caused the issue to be raised in glaring, and therefore dangerous, form in the Scottsboro cases.

The deficiencies of American justice are by no means a sectional problem. One thinks of other cases which have aroused criticisms and misgivings similar to this Alabama tangle. But the Scottsboro cases are broader in their application than most of those which have aroused strong public feeling. It has called an elemental right of citizenship, plainly guaranteed by the Constitution, into question. That right of jury service can no longer be safely denied by the State of Alabama, or by any other Commonwealth. The course of good citizenship in Alabama now is not to resist the Supreme Court decision, but to insure that its implications shall be accepted in as natural and constructive a fashion as local traditions will permit.

Right This Way, Folks!

Plans are being made for a new kind of "old soldiers' home" in Richmond, Va. The site has already been selected—a rambling old mansion with a garden and a pasture—and part of the proceeds of the circus to be held in Madison Square Garden next week will go toward its upkeep. This will be the home for aged and needy circus performers. Few more worthy projects can be imagined than this peaceful refuge where worn-out daredevils and tired clowns may pass their last days together under one big top.

There are numerous homes for old soldiers throughout the South and in all of them, single-handed, decisive battles of the Civil War are re-fought daily. Similarly, old actors have a way of living over past glories and reveling in superlatives. To the one group, tattered gray is the main topic of conversation whereas the other will hold forth tirelessly on the undimmed splendor of spangles. The tight-rope walker and the bareback rider may find renewed youth in swapping experiences and encores. The gnarled clown may forget his rheumatism as he tells of the countless hoops he has jumped through.

Reminiscing is one of the greatest functions of the human mind. It conjures up youth, happiness and former triumphs. And surely no people of any profession are more deserving of diversions in old age than those who have spent their lives entertaining others. In circus parlance, this home will be "the only one of its kind—stupendous, satisfying, and well worth your money."

None Of Your Business!

For years the so-called New Psychology has been demanding the keys to every privacy. The practitioners of this still empiric science have complacently conducted "confidential" interrogations concerning its victims' most intimate habits. Now a man of the name of Leuba, a professor at Bryn Mawr, drags the questionnaire to the last limit of impertinence; he sends out a series of inquiries which may be epitomized thus:

"Do you believe in God? Do you believe in immortality?"

There was a story current, some while ago, of a savant in one college for women who would, with pretended sympathy, lead his devouter students to answer such queries in the affirmative—and would then, before his whole class, jeer at their faith. The present perquisition suggests a similar attitude.

To furnish the investigator with the information he wants "will take," says Dr. Leuba, "a few seconds only." But it is unlikely that a reliable majority of the people he addresses will spare him so much time. For he now addresses the persons listed in Who's Who In America. And, even among these, the persistent professor will probably fail to find a typical cross-section which regards his sort of inquisitiveness as warranting any response.

In certain quarters, it is reported with considerable gusto that, for his part, Dr. Leuba does not believe in God. What we should like to know is whether God believes in Professor Leuba.

Afraid To Face The Music.

Only one conclusion can be drawn from the disinclination of the Department of Justice to test the constitutionality of the NRA. The Government's chief counsel fears an adverse ruling and prefers to wait until stronger arguments can be found to support the legality of the code system.

Until recently the Department of Justice must have considered the charges against William E. Belcher an excellent test case. At any rate, the Government appealed the adverse decision of Judge Grubb directly to the Supreme Court. In the meantime several decisions unfavorable to the New Deal have been rendered. Consequently the Government has withdrawn its appeal, with permission of the Supreme Court. Instead of facilitating a test of the NRA's legality, the Administration now wants it indefinitely postponed.

From two viewpoints this decision is unfortunate. Industries functioning under the code system do not know to what extent their activities are legal, nor does the recovery administration know how far it can go in enforcement of the codes. It is, indeed, an anomalous situation when an alleged code violator and a code authority functioning under NRA join in a plea for clarification of their status, while the Government insists upon continued uncertainty and confusion.

In this case, at least, the action of the Department of Justice amounts to acceptance of the lower court's decision that the lumber code is illegal and the recovery act unconstitutional. The Lumber Code Authority properly complains of the "deadening uncertainty" thus created. The mere fact that the Administration is afraid to follow to its conclusion a case involving the basic issues of minimum wages and maximum hours tends to accentuate the skepticism with which the NRA will be regarded until its legality has been fully tested.

Moreover, the task of formulating a new NRA act has been greatly complicated. Constitutional questions were a very minor influence in the drafting of the present law. Congress acted under the pressure of emergency. Whatever may be said in defense of that policy, it would be inexcusable for Congress again to legislate on this important subject without full consideration of the constitutional issue. In that respect a Supreme Court decision would have been an invaluable guide. The absence of such a decision will be not only a handicap to congressional leaders in favor of the NRA, but it will strengthen the hand of its opponents.

By refusing to test the recovery act, even after a special opportunity to do so had been created, the Administration has carelessly exposed itself to the charge of trying to force the hand of the Supreme Court. Presumably its purpose is to bring about a situation in which the court will have to find the NRA legal or subject the industrial structure of the country to serious derangement. The vicious nature of such a policy is so clearly apparent that it may become a serious deterrent to the enactment of the new NRA bill.

R. F. C. In Business.

Chairman Jones of the R. F. C. says: "It looks like we are in the public utility business whether we want to be or not." In corroboration of this statement, it is pointed out that the R. F. C. could, if it desired, take over control of about 2,000 public utility plants in the Middle West. The R. F. C. is also in other kinds of business. It owns, controls, or has an important position in the management of many banks as well as some railroads, insurance companies and miscellaneous concerns. So there is no reason why the public utilities should be singled out for special mention.

The people of the United States are not greatly worried about the Government's extensive interest in corporations that have borrowed from the R. F. C., giving various kinds of notes or security in exchange for loans. They are, however, interested in the future status of these indebted concerns. On various occasions Chairman Jones has urged banks and other corporations to take advantage of R. F. C. offers of credit to strengthen their capital structures, meet their obligations and even extend their activities. He has also openly deplored a tendency of some companies to repay such advances as promptly as possible, alleging that repayment has a depressing effect upon business. The meaning of this policy ought to be clearly understood.

While thus urging private corporations to borrow and retain Government funds, Chairman Jones has also tried to allay fears that the Government will interfere with the private conduct of business. Naturally, a public lending agency like the R. F. C. must protect itself against loss by exacting adequate security from borrowers, and it may be necessary upon occasion to prevent an inefficient borrower from wasting the proceeds of loans. That, however, is an incidental development which does not necessitate nor warrant a permanent invasion of the field of private enterprise by the Government.

If nature is so wise, why did she supply man with so many things to think about and with so little to think with?

Traffic Suggestions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I recently heard The Post's interesting representative, Mr. Harris Hull, on the radio outlining your attempt to make Washington a safer place for pedestrians, and explaining the committee that has been appointed to take this matter in charge. This prompts me to submit a few suggestions which, as far as I know, have not been brought to mind.

First: The motor vehicles driven on the streets of Washington are undoubtedly driven by men, women or children aggregating 50 per cent or more, who have no pecuniary or other interest in the motor vehicle itself. The owners of these vehicles have them insured and in the event of an accident, the insurance company pays. The driver is really responsible for the accident if it is caused by the negligence of the driven car, yet he escapes entirely in most cases. If it is a manslaughter case, perhaps he suffers some punishment. This blameworthy driver should be punished and the punishment should come quickly while the accident is in the minds of the public.

Second: The pedestrian is supposed to have the right of way, but this is hardly accepted among those who drive motors. In crowded sections of the cities, motors practically block pedestrians from crossing the street until the through traffic on the street is resumed.

We are presumed to be a democratic country, but having been in Europe for many months I have there noticed in several countries that the consideration for pedestrians is so much greater than what we show that it jars my dream of our being the one who considers human life.

Let me extend a friendly congratulation on the work you have undertaken.

Blossoms For All.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been informed that the Government Printing Office has just published a Japanese cherry blossom book, but too tardily for public notice and effective wide distribution where the visiting tens of thousands might most readily profit from its directions where to purchase, how to plant and when to care for these beautifully ornamental blooming trees of early April loveliness.

It then occurred to me that there must be, among so very many thousands of casual sightseers coming to Washington from hundreds of communities to witness the millions of pinky white blossoms, some dozens of unselfish and cooperative citizens who, at the mere suggestion of such an opportunity, would be glad to obtain that little booklet and then get a few of the little trees and have them planted to enrich the public park in the home town.

What a beautiful and continuing memorial to some delightful little girl or little boy now visiting Washington for the first time. These children would be ever after unselfish and thoughtful contributors to the improvement of the home community rather than to the selfishly walled back garden.

The American Husband.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Having cooked the breakfast and sent the children to school and to business, duty dictates that you must be greatly reproved for your recent frivolously toned editorial, "For Women Only," discussing the sound thoughts expressed in "While Rome Burns."

The American, as a husband, is a flop and you know it. Those of us who have lived in a foreign colony observe that the "husband-man" of Great Britain, Italy, Japan and the South American nations competently supervise both their jobs and their women; but the average American husband concentrates on his job and lets his wife and daughter go "on their own," smilingly justifying his shirking because the American is a superior woman.

I recall the home of an Italian wife, headed by a German-South American father, who had been interned in Italy for the full period of the World War and prohibited from working at his profession. I asked what he did then. "I educated my son," was his reply. And a fine lad the boy was.

Compare that with the complaint of a recently made widow of an (American) life insurance company official—"John's estate was largely in the stock of his company. My dividends are cut because American husbands frequently, when broke, commit suicide to benefit their wives."

"On The Red Only."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

There are no more deadly streets in the city than those blocks bounding the Public Library, with street car tracks on three sides and heavy motor traffic on Mount Vernon place. The red and green lights as at present scheduled control vehicular traffic, but are of no help whatever to pedestrians. It is safer for those on foot to cross Ninth or Seventh street against the light, for at least one can see the north-south traffic for some distance, and can estimate one's chances of crossing the street before being run down.

The numerous cars entering Ninth and Seventh streets from New York avenue, Massachusetts avenue, K street and Mount Vernon place, are as apt to turn into the middle or left-hand side of the street as to turn into the correct right-hand lane, as frequently there are several cars abreast.

This letter is to urge seriously that traffic lights be arranged at this location as they are at Dupont Circle: Pedestrians Cross On Red Light Only.

Comment On The Scottsboro Ruling.

Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial-Appeal—"It is commendable of the prosecuting authorities of Alabama to want to punish criminals, but we seriously doubt the wisdom of a retrial of the Scottsboro case. In view of the repudiations and denials, there is a question of legal guilt. New York lawyers and agitators have fattened off the publicity. The Supreme Court's ruling about Negro juries will not change the manners and customs of Alabamians. Further controversy will only inflame the people to a resentment that will be bad for both races."

New York Times—"The test under which the Supreme Court was placed has been trying, but the judges have met it in the finest tradition of judicial independence and integrity. They have showed that their love of justice extends to the smallest as well as the greatest. The records which they have made in this case can not fail deeply to impress the whole country. People may well hope to be spared a renewal of the original proceedings in the lower court. Might not the Governor of the State find sufficient reasons in what has already taken place for issuing a pardon in order to do substantial justice and at the same time free the courts from the duty of going on with a case which has become a public symbol of the mischief that may be wrought when prejudice is allowed to invade the place dedicated to impartial justice?"

Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser—"Otherwise, we wish to say that Mr. Hughes' pontifical deliverance is a lot of boloney. It seems to The Advertiser that if the Supreme Court presided over by Charles Evans Hughes had a more sensitive regard for the victims (actual and potential) of felonous assault and less regard for the politically dispossessed in the home State of the victims, it would not devote an entire opinion to an academic political question, but would offer some comment on the evidence by which the gorillas aforesaid had been convicted.

"After all the rape of a wench is not morally different from the rape of the proundest gentlewoman in the Republic and it seems to us that any man of sound instincts would see this truth. Rape happens to be a capital crime in Alabama."

Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald.—"Let the Scottsboro cases now be vigorously and fairly prosecuted and concluded in the light of the clear-cut Supreme Court ruling. Let us confront and assume the responsibilities which that decision generally emphasizes."

Hartford (Conn.) Courant.—"The case of the Scottsboro boys has become deeply involved in all sorts of prejudice, social and economic as well as racial. To lift it above such entanglements, to put it on a basis of simple fact, to lay it before a judge and a jury whose sole interest shall be the determination of the truth, to prosecute it fairly will be no simple task, but it is not an impossible one, and Alabama, whose courts have twice been rebuked by the highest tribunal, would seem to have no greater duty at the present time to see that it is accomplished in a way that will give no one further occasion to criticize.

The protection of its citizens, resting on the assurance that equal justice will be accorded to all, is the first and the highest duty of a State. If Alabama wishes to secure its reputation as a State in which the primary obligations of civilized life are fulfilled, it will now bend every effort to giving the boys a fair trial and seeing to it that, if acquitted, they are fully protected against violence from all sources. Not the boys but Alabama is now on trial."

Protection In The Death Penalty.

In restoring capital punishment for murder in Kansas the Legislature has been concerned with a crime problem in that State alone. It has sought an effective procedure against gangsters and other criminals who take the lives of people, quite regardless of how the death penalty has worked or failed to work in other States. It has considered the fact that any penalty for crime is as effective as the execution of the law makes it.

Under the bill now nearing enactment by the Legislature, the jury and not the court would determine whether, in any given case, there should be imposition of the death penalty or a life sentence. Under this, or under the reverse arrangement, there would be adequate safeguards. The law could be left to do its work, and there could be the summary disposition of the convicted slayer or the sentence to life as justice and the safety of society demanded.

With the aid of the death penalty, Kansas could have much better protection against crimes of violence than it has had in recent years.

The Post Impressionist

Border Ballad.

Post Office, Wednesday.

"I OWE you thanks for brightening many a dull morning street-car ride," soft-soaps George Lewis Jones. "I have especially enjoyed the occasional literary gambits in your Column, so I venture to inclose a copy of 'The Lay of the Desperate Maide.' As you used Dickens with such effect to show his 'modern' style, it seems to me that one may reverse the process: 'Frankie and Johnnie' does fairly well in old ballad trappings.

We were ever susceptible to flattery.

So the Jones text dutifully follows.

The wind blew cold in the cobbled yard,
And the minstrel's cloak was thin:
The scullions laughed at the shivering bard
As he entered the crowded inn.

He warmed himself at the fire awhile
And eyed our drink and fare;
But his hungry gaze brought forth no smile
From the landlord sternly there.

At last he offered his only wealth:
"A song for a meal!" quoth he.
The drunken crowd gave him a health,
And our host must needs agree.

He tuned his kit by the flickering fire
And softly sang a lay
Of ancient times and ancient ire,
Which turned our faces gray:

* * *

And none had ever seen
A love so true as Frankie's love
Or Johnnie's love, I ween.

In fullest bliss this twain did dwell
Till Johnnie with a pail
One night set forth for the nearest inn
To fetch a stoup of ale:
The ale he found, but he found also Fay Bly of bitter bale.

(Hear ye, my masters; hear my lay:
The Demoiselle Bly was an elfin jay!) . . .

When Frankie sought her missing swain,
The potman gently said:
'It rues me much to tide you thus,
But your man with a maide has fled.

Frankie set forth in the roaring storm,
And after the twain she flew—
To find them at last in a far countree,
And with one glance she knew
That the false Johnnie, with this ladyee,
Had forgotten his love so true.

(Hear ye, my masters; hear my song:

The frantic wife from her girdle drew
A bodkin like a knife
And through the hardwood door she burst
Athirst for Johnnie's life.

She stabbed him once, she stabbed him twice,
Until he lay in gore!
But as he died, he sadly sighed:
"I'll never wrong thee more."
And thus she felled her false lover—
His soul sped out the door.

(Hear ye, my masters; for thus are we cursed: Maidens will err—but swains err first!)

The wife, she watched her erstwhile love
Stretched out all stiff and stark;
And she cried aloud to be borne away
To a dungeon deep and dark . . .

The noose was ready, the trap was tried;
But, ere her time was up,
The sheriff gave her pardon free
And asked her home to sup:
'Your love was a varlet low,' quoth he—
'You must forget the pup!'

(List ye, my masters, list to my tale:
The girl so wronged had made good in jail!)

There was hardly a man, as the kit grew still,
Whose face showed not the pain
Of the love-wracked Frankie who'd made her kill:
We called for drinks again!

After such an exhibition of—Is it talent, genius, or just dexterity?—of skillful versification, anyhow, Mr. Jones has the hardihood to suggest that the Post-Impressionist may himself care to attempt a similar experiment.

We shouldn't dare!

But, when he modestly adds, concerning his own verse, that he had a lot of amusement composing it, we do not hesitate about commending some of that sort of literary endeavor to our other contributros.

Hitler's Moves Meet With Calm In Britain

By Frank Darvall.
Special Correspondent of The Post.

BRITISH opinion took Germany's brusque tearing up of the disarmament clauses of the treaties of peace very calmly. It had long been known that she was in fact disregarding those clauses. Few people were willing to use force, the only means available to compel their further observance. Most were very impatient at the lengthy, irritating, unsuccessful attempts to replace those clauses with a new settlement, on the basis of the equality between Germany and her major rivals which was in principle promised to the former more than two years ago. Many welcomed Herr Hitler's fait accompli as the only means of cutting the Gordian knot, and of restoring elements of reality and honesty to the situation created by German rearmament.

British opinion was, of course, universally annoyed at the manner and time of Germany's announcement. To throw such a bombshell into the lap of European diplomacy on the morrow of the peaceful return of the Saar to Germany, and on the eve of a British visit which promised further concessions—perhaps even arms equality—showed an unnecessary lack of courtesy, tact and respect for orderly processes of amending outworn treaties.

But many British people had long since given up crediting Nazi Germany with such qualities. And even had they not done so they would have been inclined to extenuate German haste and technical illegality, so critical are they of France as well as other of Germany's rivals, and so sympathetic to many of Germany's undoubted grievances.

Moreover, many of them are gradually coming to the conclusion that Nazi Germany is a definite menace to the peace of Europe, being possessed of ambitions, especially in eastern Europe, and of a temper, both of which are incompatible with peaceful, equal international relationships. They think that Germany's pacific declarations are only bluff, designed to postpone war until the German high command is ready for it. They therefore welcome situations like the recent one which confirm their view and convince others of it.

• • • •

TO PEOPLE who regard Germany as a definite menace the chief danger is that the bulk of the British and of the neutral public will allow sympathy for German grievances. At the same time there is evidence of an impatience with French and other anti-German unwillingness to attend to these complaints, which is a refusal to admit the German bluff until it is too late. Such people believe that Germany is counting on this, thinking that a combination of pacific declarations and military preparations will serve to divide her potential opponents until such time as she is ready to face them, separately or together. They therefore welcome anything which opens people's eyes to the realities of the situation and to its urgency.

British opinion, like that of other countries not directly concerned in Europe's major rivalries, has been divided as to the proper policy to be adopted with regard to the discontented states whose grievances and ambitions, if long neglected, must surely cause war. On the whole it has favored a policy of concessions, hoping that these would serve to moderate the temper and limit the objectives of the discontented group, of which Germany is the most conspicuous.

• • • •

IT has been easier for Britain to do so, of course, since the concessions so far demanded have mostly been ones which do not directly involve her, such as military equality on the continent and territorial rearrangements. These demands are not ones which call for British sacrifices, such as naval equality or colonial adjustments.

Britain has never much liked, however, paying the price which the French and others of whom concessions were demanded have asked for their collaboration. She has wished, and a large part of her public still wishes, to limit her responsibilities upon the European mainland.

She has signed the western Locarno and is willing to amend it so as to make it more water-tight and automatic and relevant to the problems of aerial warfare. So far as the rest of Europe is concerned, however, she wishes to see systems similar to Locarno established without being called upon to be a party to them. She has constantly been surprised and disappointed that such proposals do not get very far and completely fail to buy from the superior group of states the concessions that the inferior ones are demanding and which so many British people feel are only just.

Recent developments are shaking her out of this view of the European situation. More and more British people are being convinced that Britain can not usefully or fairly ask sacrifices of anyone without being willing herself to assume similar ones or to guarantee others against the unhappy consequences resulting from their sacrifices.

• • • •

THE more Germany comes to be regarded as an aggressive and militaristic power the more the British people will appreciate this fact, and will advocate a policy of concessions only in association with one of effective, mutual guarantees.

It is, besides, gradually seeping into the consciousness of the British people that the policy of concessions apart from organized security is getting nowhere. More and more people are coming to agree with Sir Austen Chamberlain who maintains that Germany in her present mood will be made more, not less, aggressive by further concessions. They note that almost all the concessions so far made, from the early evacuation of the Rhineland in 1930 through the virtual cancellation of reparations to the return of the Saar, have made Germany increase the tempo of her demands. They are coming to think that, unless Germany changes its temper, it will interpret any concessions as evidence of weaknesses rather than generosity on the part of its rivals, and will despise rather than thank them for it.

If this be so, to attempt to deal with the German problem, which the British regard as the crux of the European situation as a whole, by a policy of concessions only, can only serve to increase both the desire and the ability of Germany, when she feels the time is ripe, to redraw the map of Europe at her pleasure, by war or the threat of it.

Britain is therefore shying away from her former inclination to throw most of the blame for the European imbroglio on the French for whom most British people privately care much less than for the Germans.

She is, however, very far from swinging to the other extreme, and, having written Germany off as a mad dog in the heart of Europe, entering into attempts to fasten that dog on a chain of steel. Fear and distrust of Germany, though they are becoming more widespread in Britain, are far from involving friendship and confidence in Germany's rivals.

• • • •

BESIDES it is now the general British view that to write Germany off as a pariah, and to build up armaments and alliances against her, is to admit that war is inevitable. And most British people are, as yet, very far from being willing to admit any such thing.

They will increasingly, through fear of war and of Germany, be willing to allow their government to make what preparations, short of openly competitive armaments and alliances, it can for the crisis which may occur if Germany remains isolated and aggressive.

But they will continue, albeit with less confidence, their attempts to end German isolation and to moderate her apparently aggressive temper. Not until the eleventh hour will they give up such attempts and turn to the policy of dealing with Germany by force alone.

At the moment they hope desperately that those of their leaders, such as Lord Lothian, are right, who tell them that Hitler is sincere and that on reasonable terms Germany will enter into effective anti-war pacts at least for a period of, say, ten years. German breach of the treaties, German refusals to enter into mutual assistance agreements in respect of Austria and eastern Europe, German refusals to return to the league except after all her major grievances have been attended to, can not but chill such hopes. But they will not, for some time, wholly destroy them. For to destroy such hopes is, in the British view, to admit that war is inevitable.

To avoid such an admission the British people and government will give Germany the benefit of every doubt.

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Huey And The Mannekins.

THE next time Father Coughlin takes the air he had better do something about his buddy, Huey. It is regrettable for those of us who are making the great fight against the vested interests and the malefactors of great wealth, but the fact is that Huey is mellowing.

BARGERON.

Anybody who has observed him recently can tell this. That old fire has gone; he laughs as he delivers his diatribes against the enemies of the share-the-wealth program, he laughs as he takes cracks at his fellow Democrats. He is, in fact, entirely different when he takes the floor now. Whereas he used to arise with a scowl and the smoke would be issuing from his nostrils, he now gets up with a knowing wink at his colleagues and they sit back and await a little pleasant entertainment which they have come to associate with him.

Why, there have been times when it looked as though even Carter Glass had come to look upon him as a pleasant little fellow.

• • • •

It is difficult to realize he is the same man who a few weeks ago was a threat to the existing order, a potential Hitler or Mussolini, or something just as foreign. A change has unquestionably come over him; whether temporary or permanent, one can't very well say.

There is this fact, though: The change coincided with a group of mannikins in New York saying he was cute, with a certain devilish curly lock and twinkle in his eye. Since then Huey seems to have been trying to fit that picture. If this is the case, they have ruined Huey; they have checked his public career. A cute and devilish Huey is not a potential Hitler or a Mussolini. He is not dangerous at all. It was the fire-snorting Huey that seemed to be stirring them up. He may continue to sell a lot of medicine, but the crowd will buy from him only as they would from a movie idol, not as an upsetter of the existing order.

What I frankly believe is that this whole mannikin business is but a plot on the part of the vested interests. It may be the mannikins never said Huey was cute and devilish looking at all. They own the newspapers, according to Father Coughlin, and they could make them put these words into the mannikins' mouths.

Or if the mannikins did say it, these same interests probably put them up to it. They have always said that when they got a rip-snorting legislator to put on a dinner suit they had him. Imagine what it is when they get one to thinking he's cute. Their resourcefulness knows no bounds. Sometimes we crusaders despair of being able to do anything with them, and think we might as well let them go ahead and put men to work. It is hard to go ahead keeping men unemployed and then see them with their cleverness do to Huey what appears to have been done to him. It's downright discouraging.

Ever since this writer has been in Washington he has wanted to see one of those sirens which the books and movies say ensnare our public servants and turn them from brilliant careers in the interest of the people to the vested interests who are grinding us to pieces. Apparently it is mannikins now and not sirens who are doing the job, and not mannikins in Washington, but in that den of financial iniquity, New York.

The very idea that they can say a man is cute and divert him from the straight and narrow path! We must get our crusaders stronger and more resistant to such wiles.

The old-timers who got hooked by the sirens were deserving of sympathy if not envy, but to be caught by some sinister remote control is simply too much.

Father Coughlin will have to rescue Huey from this. He is supposed to have exacted the dry pledge from him when they tied up. What he has got to do now is to get a pledge that Huey won't pay any attention to what mannikins in far-off New York say.

Farewell, Heart Balm!
Throw those letters, ladies,
In the stove or garbage can;
Heaven (and the Senate)
Will protect the writing man!

• • • •

It's no use saving the correspondence, girls, or preserving memories of what he said in the taxicab. Nothing that a gay blade says or writes may be held against him in a civil court of law in New York any more, and nine other States are considering similar legislation.

• • • •

Gov. Lehman has signed the bill outlawing all suits for alienation of affections, breach of promise, etc., in New York and definitely scrapping the tabloid newspaper's favorite headlines:
"Girl, Tricked, Asks Heart Balm."

• • • •

Things had reached a stage where a man with money in the bank couldn't send a girl a souvenir postcard of the firehouse in Oswego without having it cited in a court of law as a proposal of marriage.

• • • •

Ladies with a letter saying, "I enjoyed the fish dinner last night; how would you like to see a movie tomorrow? Joe," could take it to a shyster lawyer and have it presented as being equivalent to "Tootsy—name your own bridesmaids. Popsy-Wopsy." But those days are gone forever.

"The Pumpkin Coach," A Realistic Yet Dream-Like Novel Of A Young Samoan In America.

By Theodore Hall.

SINCE 1762, when Goldsmith wrote his letters of an imaginary Chinese sage in London—the theme probably occurred in ancient Sanskrit, but I didn't get around to look it up—we have had a succession of books which describe a society through the eyes of a visiting alien. Louis Paul's novel, "The Pumpkin Coach" (Doubleday, Doran, $2.50) rings new changes on those old bells. For instead of giving his visitor an acid wit and a razor-edged vision to show up contemporary follies and absurdities—see "The Astonishing Island," Winifred Holtby's narrative of a young Tristan da Cunha islander in England, for a recent example of this—Mr. Paul makes us see the rich and profligate beauty of America through the sensitivity of his young Samoan.

Uan Koe—John for short—a brown, lithe, innocent and very likable young man of 21, came up to San Francisco from the islands to see the wonder of America for which books, magazines and old Father Renoir had made him hunger. With the pearl money saved up by him and his brothers, he has enough for a start.

Then, because he goes swimming in the buff, the law takes him in. Shocked, he becomes wiser when the lawyer gets him out of jail. But because a girl was swimming with him at the time, he learns something more about America when her brother and three allies set upon John, all but kill him, order him to make himself scarce in San Francisco. Too deeply troubled by this to face his friends again, John starts wandering eastward alone—a hurt and baffled young man, but still intoxicated by the vistas of this country.

HE is swirled up in a motley of adventures—befriended by a roving composer (who sets John's ambition to be an artist and catch in one instant the movement and rhythm of living things), robbed by a swindler, insulted by a great hulk whom he beats up, encountered by hoboes, jailed by a sheriff, and at last taken in tow by a friendly wanderer (and a marvelous creation he is) named Hunk Haley.

The central, and most poetic, episode in the book takes place when John stops at a ranch just east of Denver and meets the Morgans—the father a wry and amusing writer; the daughter, Jennie, as lovely, luminous and altogether improbable a slip of 17 as one could imagine. I can give you but one sample of her young, enchanting style. Test it for yourself; it occurs in a letter she writes later on to John. "Would you be good to me? Would you sit up half the night reading to me the grandly lyric rhythms of Shelley's 'Adonais?' Would you listen patiently to my wild improvisations on the piano? Would you let me insult your friends and then hit them in the nose because they annoyed me? Would you decry my sins and exaggerate my virtues and smile gracefully if I wore an indecent gown in public? What I mean is, are you in love with me?"

For though the two, with wild, naive young sensitivity, fall in love on the ranch, John goes on to New York—to study art, give it up and go broke, get a job in a hospital and finally take up boxing. The very first scene in the book, by an odd fillip of construction, is of John slugging in the ring and winning a match, with Jennie "down there in the blue smoke, far off as in a dream, yet the one real thing in all the fantastic world."

• • • •

I HAVE a feeling about "The Pumpkin Coach" that I am going to like it less as I remember it at greater distance. Yet there is ample room for it to diminish and still remain considerable, because I admired and enjoyed it enormously. Only Wolfe's "Of Time and the River" has exceeded it in a keen and heady infusion of sky and sun and green grass, of the looks and talk of real or at least distinctive Americans, of all the "fecund, heart-warming, and uncritical" largesse which makes up this country.

But, turning the pages over again, I get the first intimations that much—not all, by any means—of this novel is going to look rather slick. Not for a moment do I doubt Mr. Paul's sincerity of feeling. Yet his pen ran away with him, ran into such a phrase—one tiny instance out of whole pages—for a scene of happiness as "polyhedrons of joy." My eye! Rhomboid parallelepipedons of boredom! That sort of writing, glossy, plush, synthetic, gets nowhere.

Yet, though John fades out strangely toward the end, though the mood shifts tantalizingly from the real to the lushly improbable, though the sweetness is too sweet and the thoughtfulness a bit too consciously thoughtful, "The Pumpkin Coach" strikes me as one of the truly bountiful and extraordinary performances of the year. Louis Paul, whose first short story won the O. Henry prize last year, whose first novel this is, stands head and shoulders above William Saroyan as a literary discovery. And if the first fine effect of the book seems to fade, what of that? "The Pumpkin Coach" is dreamlike, and we don't recapture dreams.

Manager Of The Met

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE Metropolitan Opera House Company of New York has been for many years the blue ribbon association of singers. Every European prima donna and tenor and basso in the world has hoped that some time an invitation would come from America; and in European cities where operas and concerts are given, those of the company who are able to do so always write after their names, "Of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York."

Now Mr. Gatti-Casazza retires as manager after long service, and returns to his native Italy. The new manager is an American, originally from New Haven, Conn., and a graduate of Yale in the class of 1895. His name is Herbert Witherspoon.

• • • •

When he was a senior in college, I gave an elective course in Elizabethan drama, and he took it. I shall never forget the day when I was lecturing on Marlowe's "Faustus." I spoke of the various dramatic presentations of this story—Goethe, Gounod, Boito, Wagner's Overture, etc. I mentioned Henry Irving's spectacular production; and then I said: "Among the great actors who has played Mephistopheles, one of the greatest of all time is now playing and singing it in New York—I mean Edouard de Reszke."

At the end of the lecture, Herbert Witherspoon asked if he might talk with me a few minutes. He had always loved music better than anything else in the world; he wanted to become an opera singer. But his family, holding a view very common in those days, felt that singing was not a man's job, and could not bear to have him think of it as a career. I asked, "What do they want you to do?" He replied that they wished him to become a business man.

• • • •

He hated to disappoint them because he loved them so. At the same time his heart was in a musical career. "Well," I said, "the thing obviously for you to do is go to New York immediately after you graduate this June. Get a good job in a business concern (you could do that in those days), then secure the finest music teacher available, and take lessons from him evenings. He will be able to tell you, in a few months, whether you have only a parlor voice or whether you can go on the operatic stage. And if he finds you have a great voice, your family will not long maintain any opposition."

This is exactly what he did. In a short time it was clear that he could become a star. The first time I heard him in public was when he sang "Calm as the Night" at a concert where the soprano was Miss Meta Fellowes. The second time he sang in the "Creation," and although he had a terrific cold, his voice was splendid. It was not long before he joined the Metropolitan Opera House Company, and with only a few hours' notice—the other man being suddenly taken ill—he sang Pogner in "Die Meistersinger," and sang it magnificently. One day he showed me the robe he wore as the King in "Lohengrin." It had belonged to Edouard de Reszke! Thus in a definite sense the mantle of the great Polish basso had fallen on him.

• • • •

Herbert Witherspoon sang in the Metropolitan company until 1916. Later, he was director of the Chicago Civic Opera and of the Cincinnati Conservatory. He is a great teacher, and should be a splendid manager of the Metropolitan, where he will also be fortunate in having as assistant manager, Edward Ziegler, who has performed invaluable services in that position for many years.

Man And Nature Join To Blast AAA Theory

Farmers Still Sign Up For Program But Consider Whole Program Collapsing.

By Hilding Siversen.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Omaha.

THE withdrawal of restriction on the planting of spring wheat, the effort to remove the processing tax from cotton, the flourishing nature of the fish industry, the importation of considerable quantities of foreign farm products—these are some of the things that are causing thoughtful farmers of the Middle West to become uneasy about the AAA.

One of them, Dan Casement, of Kansas, wrote a caustic letter to Secretary Wallace, suggesting that he abandon the "cockeyed scheme." There are plenty of indications of ultimate disintegration.

A farmer of my acquaintance recently showed me a check for $75. "This is what I got for raising cockle-burrs," he said. And his statement would bear analysis, for he had a sideline and had been in the habit of letting a part of his land lie fallow. The "corn-hog money" in his case, was a barefaced gift, a tribute to weed growing.

The effort to remove the processing tax from various farm products, if successful, will confirm the suspicion that the benefits can be readily made into an outright gift. Whether this has anything to do with the coming presidential election will be left to the imagination. At any rate, a great many thoughtful farmers already see that the whole AAA program is fraught with perils and weaknesses.

In a recent interview in the New York Times, when confronted with the fact that the cost of foods, particularly meat, has been rising, Secretary Wallace let drop this inadvertent remark: "Fish and potatoes are cheap."

This brief remark may lead to a thorough analysis of the AAA program, and when that is made, there will be a lot of disillusioned young brain-trusters in the Agriculture Department.

• • • •

THE fishing industry is flourishing and just now the captains of that industry are blessing Secretary Wallace. Why? Because the "controlled production," which operates only one way—to restrict—has brought such high prices that fish have come back into the market to compete with beef, pork and other farm-produced foods. The slide rule has slid all over the place. This exposes the fallacy of the theory that "controlled production" will accomplish any permanent benefit to farmers unless it is extended to all food products. And if that comes—what next? Does this mean that the Department of Agriculture will eventually manage the fishing industry as well? And if so, must a sportsman obtain permission from the Department of Agriculture to catch a wall-eyed pike in Minnesota? Of course, there is no limit to the reductio ad absurdum.

The production of oleomargarine in January and February increased nearly 41,000,000 pounds over the same months a year ago. Another slip for the slide rule. This means a reduction in the consumption of butter. Packing houses are running 60 per cent of normal capacity. Recently a solid trainload of cattle was shipped to Chicago from western Canada. Pork products are being imported from Canadian packing plants. It is reported that 300,000 Mexican cattle will enter the United States this spring. Straws—just straws.

A well-informed Danish dairyman recently remarked that he was born in Schleswig, once under German rule. His father thought he was oppressed because he had to pay as much as 10 per cent of his income for taxes. However, even the tyrannical Prussian government never made an attempt to interfere with his father's business, which was farming. And the son was sent to this country to be "free!"

• • • •

THE amendments now under consideration for the AAA program contemplate fastening the bureaucratic machine still more securely on the farmer's neck. If passed, they will place the matter of marketing agreements in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture and various assistants, many of whom are city-bred. The farmer's private business will be open to snoopers.

The Department of Agriculture by means of its "controlled production," has reduced the yield of food, raising the price.

The Department of Commerce has advised people to buy less meat and more fish.

The Department of the Interior has been bringing more land under cultivation for the raising of more food.

And these features are a part of the hodgepodge of theories for which the taxpayers of the United States are asked to pay billions of dollars.

This hodgepodge has come about because the "economists" who have laboriously figured all these things out, by slide rule, tables of logarithms and ponderous textbooks, failed to take into account two variables—human nature and the weather.

Human nature is what causes people to buy fish when pork gets too high—oleomargarine when butter gets too high. When applied to politicians, human nature is what causes them to try to remove the processing tax and convert the "benefits" into out-and-out gifts.

THE weather, of course, played hob with all the tables of logarithms and the erudite theories about export trade. Of course, it makes the winter wheat belt farmers cheerful to have restrictions removed from the planting of spring wheat, since the unrestricted spring wheat production will probably compete with the restricted winter wheat production. And there may be some connection with the fact that many New England farmers are now using feed grades of wheat imported from France!

The signing up for the corn-hog program and similar items of "controlled production" still goes on. But it is not necessarily because the farmers believe in it as a wise policy. It is because it brings them in some ready money, and even the most honorable man will accept ready money when it is offered under the benediction of his government. There is now a fairly settled conviction that the entire program is wobbly, and this conviction is spreading, for events are the proof. The dust storms and the droughts have continued in the higher parts of the great plains area, and thus is brought more proof of the unsoundness of tinkering with Nature's own plan.

Club Habana's Vocalist Given Birthday Party

Russ Cullen Ready to Go Home When Told of Surprise Fete.

By Kay Ware.

They're having gay times up at Club Habana. Particularly the other night—or morning—when, around 3 o'clock Russ Cullen, sax and vocalist, got the surprise of his life. He was ready to go home to bed when Guy Scott locked the doors, led him to a big table and sat him down at the head of it. Sleepy-eyed waiters were whipped into action—and the birthday party was on. There was a cake, of course, deftly decorated with sugar palm-trees, a coconut and a monkey.

The new dance team at this night spot is booked as the "Zastros," Roy and Sonny, and Eddie Brach in "Three's Not a Crowd." They're a comely trio, too, as handsome in face and figure as they are expert in their dancing.

"Melancholy Baby" has been haunting Club Habana for the reason that an unknown guest haunts it too. So, if you hear the tune, look around for someone who looks incognito. However, if you don't want to hear about the baby, ask Moe Baer for your favorite. He's obliging that way.

Another birthday, and this time it belongs to Miss Ethel Malcolm, hostess at Child's Gingham Club. She was recently transferred from the Gingham Club in Cleveland, and the local spot is mighty glad to have her around. It's poise that counts—and an ability to handle any situation, whatever it may be.

Would you like to know the exact spelling of the dance team. On former engagements they were billed as the Di Gitanos, or Digitanos. Now, at Childs they're called the Di Gaetanos. All the same they're a good team. Get Mr. D. G. to tell you of his experiences abroad.

Florence Barlow, in a Moorish dance; Lou Hendricks, "The Girl with a Thousand Songs;" Mary Jo Hamilton and Jimmy Santmeyer and boys whip up a fine and fancy show.

Seen sipping orange juice at the bamboo room—none other than Mitzi Green. She says Fenton Froom is "swell" and thinks Ernestine Gardner is the image of Ruby Keeler. Also got a kick out of the smooth Slaughter Rhythms—and the orange juice.

The Shoreham has been blessed with a bunch of celebrities lately, what with Ray Bolger and Dixie Dunbar adding dance and comedy to the floor show. Now it's whispered that Mitzi Green and Leon Janney, young movie stars, will show up. Leon is to be master of ceremonies tonight and since Mitzi met him at the train and seems to like him a lot, the chances are she'll be his guest this evening, chaperoned by Mrs. Green and most of the show from the Earle.

The show is headed by Wilkins and Meyer, the girl in new costumes. (She must have dozens.) Talbert Haslett is back with more songs, Burt Lynn plays an instrument that's a cross between a guitar and organ. It looks like one and sounds like the other. Betty Lane is a newcomer, with rhythm, tap and shim-sham dances.

Maryland Club Gardens now serves luncheon from noon on every Saturday. Plus tea dancing with Al Barkley and orchestra serving music. Also the popular stand-up crystal bar, supervised by Ernst.

No matter how big the show at La Paree, no one has to be reminded of Emory Daugherty and his singing stars. The Winter Garden Revue is, of course, noted for size and swish of feathers, but Marie Fowler and Ray Beck get just as much fanfare as the featured acts.

Watch the Four Demons in the adagio number. Not bad.

The Russian Club Troika is holding over its entire cast of 15 performers for another fortnight, although an entire new show is being presented this week. Principal attraction of the new routine is the return of the famous "Charmonka," or Russian Organ Grinder number, which made such a hit a few weeks ago at the Troika. It is being performed now, in an ultra grand manner, by Mme. Anna Sablukova, Vladimir Diloff, and Kolia, the Troika dancer.

Basso Diloff, incidentally, will probably be held over for the remainder of the season. Not a night has gone by in weeks without a special request for him to sing "The Flea," a whimsical Russian ditty made famous by Chaliapin.

Still headlining, of course, is Ethel Pastor, whose repertoire is as endless as her court of admirers. Miss Pastor is the center of an intriguing little mystery which we'd like to clear up. Every night promptly at six a messenger, guided by secret orders, brings the Troika soprano a box containing a beautiful, white orchid. Miss Pastor has no idea who sends them and the manager, a small boy, refuses to talk, even when urged with handsome bribes. Sounds like a movie scenario.

The Lotus hands out two dance teams, Carron and Bennett and Sheldon and Rose but there's plenty of variety in both. Bill Strickland's Capitolians, and pretty Judy Ellington furnish music for dances and songs for the soulful.

Dude Ranch policy harks back a year or two. They say gently, "B. Y. O. L.," which means bring your own liquor. If you don't care for the hard kind, you can buy plenty of wine and beer.

The floor show is teaming with cowboys and cowgirls headed by Ann (Texas) Mix. Is she any relation to Tom? Tomorrow Dude Ranch celebrates its first anniversary and Host Milton Barrett will offer special entertainment—favors, noisemakers 'n' everything.

Cotton Club's talent line-up is like a theatrical billing. Wade and Wade, the dance team, are doubling at the Howard Theater; Chuck and Chuckles, who have been at Cotton Club for two weeks, headline Cab Calloway's show at the Fox Friday.

Amy Spencer does a good job as fan dancer and mistress of ceremonies. "Babe" Wallace, former M. C. and orchestra leader, has left for Hollywood Club in Montreal.

There's been an extra 6 feet added to the dance floor, meaning it will accommodate at least eight more couples.

She Sings—and She Dances

Boys Nearly Drown 'Shooting' Scott's Dam

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., April 2.—Two young brothers found the adventure they sought and narrowly escaped with their lives, when they attempted to "shoot" Scott's Dam on the swollen James River in a canoe yesterday.

The boys, Carter Tinsley, 19, and John Tinsley, 17, sons of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Tinsley, of this city, were pulled under the churning waters after their flimsy craft had been splintered by the drop over the dam. Carter Tinsley had tied a rope around his body and to the canoe on the theory that the boat would pull him clear of any obstruction in event of an upset, but his scheme did not work as planned and he came near drowning before he could unfasten the knot and swim to shore.

Broadway

Broadway Parade

After theater last night, I took young Jimmy Donahue, Barbara Hutton's cousin, up to Jack Dempsey's place . . . "I've always wanted to meet Dempsey," said the blonde, hatless youngster . . . So did the social miss with him, Toni Johnson . . . So, too, did the Aldo Erminis . . . I made the introductions when we were seated . . . "What's this I read about you in the papers, Jimmy?" asked Dempsey "weren't you toting a gun to protect the Princess?" . . . Donahue denied it stoutly, and his cheeks flushed . . . "Honest I wasn't, Mr. Dempsey," he protested. "There was a newspaper man aboard who had to send a story every day. That was one of the yarns he spun" . . . Dempsey nodded at him in mock severity: "I'll have to turn you over to Senator Wild Bill Lyons, last of the Texas Rangers," he said . . . "The Senator is the fastest man on the draw in the whole of God's Southwest. A couple of lessons from Bill and you'll be able to shoot out the lights in the Central Park Casino."

• • • •

Senator Wild Bill Lyons is 73 and a character . . . Dempsey should have some respect for the Senator's marksmanship . . . In Toronto, one night, when Jack was champion, the crowd of New Yorkers proceeded to get nicely saturated with Canadian liquor, and they stayed saturated for two days . . . Dempsey couldn't resist the temptation presented by Wild Bill's helplessness . . . While the last of the Texas Rangers uttered huge snores, Dempsey lifted his toupe, undressed him and laid him carefully in a shallow tub of water . . . Then Dempsey and some of his pals placed a full-length mirror at the tub . . . The Senator awakening, let out a shriek of pure terror at the bald-headed man who was staring back at him with bloodshot eyes, only a few feet distant . . . When he realized that the wild stranger was himself, divested of his toupe, he rushed to his room, clothed himself, and with six-shooter in hand went gunning for Dempsey . . . Failing in this, he shot out all the lights, and then as a final gesture, shot every mirror in the suite to pieces . . . Later the Senator was to get even with Dempsey . . . He persuaded Jack to buy him a watch . . . "Sure go out and get one," said the champ . . . Dempsey thought he'd been smacked by Firpo when the bill came . . . It was for $2,300.

Rudy Vallee would like to do "Petticoat Fever" for the screen as his next . . . I've never heard anybody sing "Eli, Eli" so magnificently as Arthur Tracy or Sid Gary . . . Earl Sande, famous jockey, prefers one song above all others: "Home on the Range" . . . Tall Nitza Vernille, the dancer, walks about town with a tiny wire-haired terrier—on a leash! . . . I like that Hollywood dispatch: Margaret Sullavan, will be starred in Paramount's "So Red the Rose" . . . Supporting her will be Fred Stone and Pauline Lord, who not so long ago MIGHT have permitted Miss Sullavan to play a bit with them . . . Helen Morgan opens at the Versailles tonight . . . Noah Beery, a bit gray and bespectacled, walked on the stage of Loew's Sunday night, and the audience almost tore down the walls in the fervor of their salute . . . The Ritz Brothers shape up as the greatest of comedy acts locally . . . They're ter-rific. Cotton Club reports increased business since the Harlem disturbances.

• • • •

Tap dancers are all nice people, strangely enough . . . Hal Le Roy is a grand boy . . . So is Georgie Tapps, most improved of the younger dancing phenoms . . . Paul Draper, reserved and a trifle shy, is an awfully nice kid after you scrape the surface restraint . . . Bill Robinson, the pappy of all hoofers, has the widest array of friends in the entire profession . . . Sammy White, from Ziegfeld's "Show Boat," is long . . . Tom Patricola and Buster West, who used to hoof together in "Scandals," are as unaffected and as genuine as the day is long . . . Ray Bolger, more serious than the rest of 'em, is a fine youngster . . . So take up tap dancing, my little chickadees, and sweeten your personality.

• • • •

Patsy Flick and Donald Flamm journeyed down town to a Jewish restaurant noted for the independence of the waiters, who are largely Communists . . . They seated themselves (as who doesn't in a restaurant?) and proceeded to eat . . . The waiter was getting on Flick's nerves, butting into their conversation and serving badly . . . "Waiter," said Flick, bring us the rest of our order and bring it quickly" . . . The waiter stepped back indignantly: "It is unfortunate that both you and I made a mistake," he said philosophically. "I thought you were a gentleman, and you thought I was a waiter" . . . The nettled Flick cried out: "You are a waiter, aren't you" . . . "No," said the Communistic servitor, "I am not a waiter—I'm only the contact man between the cook and the customer."

Park avenue is sincerely sorry that Prince George Matchabelli has died, for he was as bona fide as his title . . . I met him time and again with Beth Leary, and liked him a lot . . . Forced to earn a living in 1927, he turned his talents to good account in the marketing of perfumes and cosmetics, but there was nothing feminine about him . . . When he became an American citizen, he did not renounce his title . . . When they asked him his first name, he selected Prince . . . His American name was Mr. Prince Matchabelli.

And So Mrs. Jarmyn Didn't Get a License

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., April 2.—Mrs. H. P. Jarmyn, of Marbella Springs, today did not pass her examination for an automobile operator's license, but her examining officer, Walter L. Ray, of the State police, got the worst of the tests. He had to be treated at a physician's office for a dislocated rib, bruises and shock.

It was just one of those things an applicant fears most. Mrs. Jarmyn started her test this morning with Ray riding with her. On making a left turn, her automobile hit a parked car and careened across the street into the basement window of the fire department building.

The car was wrecked, but Mrs. Jarmyn was not hurt. Her examiner had to be taken to the office of Dr. Charles T. Fisher for treatment.

CCC Worker Is Killed In Hit-Run Accident

Kenbridge, Va., April 2 (AP).—Roban Crowell, of Winston-Salem, N. C., a Conservation Corps worker, was instantly killed last night when struck by a hit-and-run driver on the highway about a mile and a half east of Kenbridge.

Capt. D. E. Henry, of the CCC camp near Blackstone, who made an investigation, reported today that Crowell was walking with a companion from Kenbridge to a CCC camp when he was struck.

Six County Officials Confirmed by Senate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 2.—Their appointments by Gov. Nice having been confirmed by the State Senate, the following Washington County officials will assume office this week.

Robert Brindle, judge of the juvenile court, succeeding Harry E. Snyder; John D. Dunn and C. Edward Heard, magistrates at Hagerstown, succeeding Richard Duffey and Richard Sweeney, and Robert G. Foltz, Samuel K. Eckis and Robert B. Boyle, as members of the board of election supervisors.

Commerce Secretary Given Ritual in Ceremony at His Office.

Secretary of Commerce Roper, in the paneled seclusion of his private office, and 62 Washingtonians, behind guarded doors in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom, were initiated into the mysteries of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine yesterday and last night.

Both ceremonies took place under the aegis of Imperial Potentate Dana Scott Williams, of Lewiston, Me., Secretary Roper taking his orders in a sort of noonday interlude to the affairs of government, a private ceremony especially dispensed by Robert P. Smith, potentate of Almas Temple; L. P. Steuart, deputy imperial potentate, and John C. Koons, a Shrine member.

Nearly 3,000 persons attended rites directly concerned, with and subsidiary to the initiation of the 62 at the hotel. These included the wives of Shriners, who for the first time in the history of Almas Temple were provided entertainment while members of the order conducted their secret ritual.

March to Temple.

Preceding the initiation bodies of the shrine, in full regalia, marched from the temple at Thirteenth and K streets northwest, to the hotel. The temple band, under the leadership of Frederick Williams, the drum corps headed by Francis J. Paul, the Arab patrol, in command of Capt. Jesse E. Porter, and the Legion of Honor, under Capt. Clyde N. Strange, formed an escort for Imperial Potentate Williams and officers of the local shrine.

At the hotel Imperial Potentate Williams made a speech and received from Mr. Smith a check for $13,001.71, representing a legacy left by the late John Benjamin Flick, a member of the temple, to be turned over to the endowment fund of the Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children at Philadelphia.

Travels 70,000 Miles in Year.

"Since my election at Minneapolis last June, Mrs. Williams and I have traveled from Halifax to Honolulu and from Winnipeg to the Canal Zone, averaging 300 miles a day for a total of about 70,000 miles."

Mr. Williams also said that the next Shrine hospital would be built at Richmond and that the convention here next June should be the greatest in the history of the order.

The initiation at the Mayflower was put on by the following cast: Mr. Smith, Allen H. Potts, chief rabban; Asa M. Daniels, assistant rabban; Granville Gude, high priest and prophet; Stanley D. Willis, oriental guide; Karl E. Jarrell, first ceremonial master; Earl W. Shinn, second ceremonial master; Howard W. Foley, marshal; Needham Turnage, captain of the guard.

William P. Amos, was first alchemist; Harry Gardner, second alchemist, and the Rev. John C. Palmer, orator. Harry S. Evans acted as master of ceremonies; Ernest W. Snoots, director of stunts, and Guy G. Harper, stage manager. Assisted by the Oriental Band under the leadership of Frank M. Graham, the uniformed bodies, headed by the adjutant, Past Potentate Charles D. Shackelford, also took part in the rites.

Shrine Ladies Feted.

While ceremonies were being conducted, Mrs. Robert P. Smith, wife of the potentate, and Mrs. Dana Scott Williams, wife of the imperial potentate, received Shrine ladies in the hotel's Italian garden.

Meanwhile, dignitaries from several branches of the Masons' and past potentates of the Temple were officially welcomed by the Shriners.

The Masonic dignitaries were Robert S. Regar, grand master, Grand Lodge, F. A. A. M.; Otto B. Roepke, grand high priest, Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; John H. Cowles, grand commander, Scottish rite of Freemasonry, Southern jurisdiction; Ellwood P. Morey, deputy of the Scottish rite for the District of Columbia.

The past potentates were Harry Standiford, William F. Gude, James T. Gibbs, William S. Quinter, L. Whiting Estes, Leonard P. Steuart, Carter B. Keene, Charles D. Shackelford, Amos A. Fries, George B. McGinty, Edwin C. Dutton, James C. Hoyle, Robert S. Regar, Edward D. Anderson, Warren W. Grimes and William Miller.

A silver set was presented by the Temple to Imperial Potentate Williams and Mrs. William and jewels were given to E. D. Anderson, Warren D. Grimes and William C. Miller, past potentates.

Distinguished visitors were welcomed by the reception committee, of which George S. Harris is chairman, cooperating with the potentate's aid, John Q. Slye. The entertainment committee was headed by Ernest C. Guy and the medical board was represented by Drs. Charles Stanley White, Henry W. Jaeger and J. Ward Mankin.

The following were members of the class who received the degrees: Coenraad A. Alberding, Wallace S. Badger, Stephen T. Baldwin, John J. Barnes, jr., Harry G. Bauer, Henry J. Beahm, James R. Beaubiah, William H. T. Belt, Melvin B. Blake, Hugh H. Boyer, Samuel R. Boyer, Ernest W. Brown, Rufus C. Brown, James P. Burns, Ernest G. Chewning, Orlay B. Cidwell, Claude A. Cook, Forrester A. Coulter, John Harrison Davis, Shell C. Davis, sr., William I. Denning, Leon S. Dixon, Earle B. Dodson, Robert B. Doing, Charles B. Eaton, Harry O. Gathers, John T. German, Ernest C. Gibson, Herbert S. Goodrich, George J. Gray, William T. Griffin, William T. Hale, Harvey H. Handley, Henry F. Hill, jr., Nathan Hoffman, Homer T. Johnson, Rodham W. Kenner, George W. Kreis, Leonard D. Lohr, George W. Luckett, Morton E. Mack, John E. McClure, Orville E. Megby, Thomas B. Mitchell, Francis K. Mohler, Clarence H. Moulton, Jack Mursell, Preston E. Peterson, Theodore K. Reily, John P. Rice, Warren S. Rinker, Daniel C. Roper, Charles P. Ruby, Howard H. Rutan, Charles Scott, C. Melvin Sharpe, Archibald C. Stark, Verner L. Smith, Herbert M. Taylor, Alexander Ueland, Garland W. Wolfe, Jesse H. Wood.

Nineteen members were received into the temple through affiliation. They were:

A. Kenneth Armstrong, Paul R. Boesch, Hugh Brewster, Harvey C. Danner, E. Herman Erickson, Arthur G. Fessenden, Harry M. Forker, Willard H. Hawley, Evan Jones, Garfield I. Kass, Joseph E. Lewis, Wallace C. Magathan, Mark Mitchell, Miles E. Myers, Harry B. Plankinton, William H. Power, Everett R. Rust, Eugene W. Satterwhite, Herbert E. Stevens.

Distinguished guests included the following:

Representatives Clifton A. Woodrum, John T. Buckbee, Aubert C. Dunn, Allen T. Treadway, Robert F. Rich, C. Elmer Dietrich, R. Ewing Thomason, Chauncey W. Reed, Daniel A. Reed, Harry B. Coffee and W. D. McFarlane.

Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Eloy Alfaro, Minister of Ecuador; Hugh M. Tate, chairman, Interstate Commerce Commission; Harrison Parkman, purchasing agent of Postoffice Department; O. A. Keen, chief clerk of Postoffice Department; Frank J. Wideman, Assistant Attorney General; William Montgomery, president, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.; W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, and Karl E. Crowley, solicitor, Postoffice Department.

Man Jailed in Check Case.

Two checks, reputedly worthless and cashed for a total of $15, yesterday brought a year's jail sentence to Richard P. Morgan, of the 1400 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest. Judge Hitt sentenced him.

Light Bulb Cost Cut in District

Reduction to Save Citizens $300,000 Annually.

A reduction of 25 per cent in the cost of electric light bulbs, which will save District housewives $300,000 annually, was announced yesterday by People's Counsel William A. Roberts.

Manufacturers of the bulbs yesterday notified Roberts the average cost will be cut from 20 to 15 cents.

Complaints were made several weeks ago by the Women's City Club and the Women's University Club that cost of bulbs was excessive and the quality poor.

Roberts had tests made by the Bureau of Standards. As a result the cost reduction was announced and the makers plan to improve the quality of the bulbs.

Engineer Loses Fight on PWA Fraud Charge

D. C. Supreme Court Upholds Validity of Indictment Naming Seven.

Charles R. Olberg, former PWA engineer, yesterday lost in the District Supreme Court an attempt to have declared invalid an indictment charging him and six others with conspiring against the Government in connection with a Willacy County (Texas) irrigation project.

Justice James M. Proctor overruled a plea in abatement filed by the law firm of King & Nordlinger on behalf of Olberg. The attorneys had charged there were irregularities in the method by which the special grand jury that investigated the case was chosen.

Justice Proctor gave no reason for sustaining the validity of the indictment insofar as the selection of the grand jurors and their inquiry were concerned. Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly represented the Government.

The indictment alleges the men conspired to defraud the Government by changing plans for the Willacy County project so that redwood pipe would be substituted for the "open canal, or gravitation" scheme, which would have required little or no pipe.

Grocer Fined $50.

Abraham Marcowitz, a grocer in the 900 block of Fourth street southwest, was fined $50 in Police Court yesterday for violations of the District weights and measures law. He pleaded guilty.

Pony Express, 75 Years Old, To Be Reenacted on Birthday

Trip From St. Joseph, Mo., to the Pacific Coast Slated Today.

By the Associated Press.

St. Joseph, Mo., April 2.—Seventy-five years ago tomorrow a young man mounted a horse and, with flags flying, a band playing and crowds cheering, pounded westward from St. Joseph to inaugurate the pony express.

Tomorrow this city's part of the historic event will be reenacted. Three horsemen, in relay, will carry a picture of William F. Cody, famed as "Buffalo Bill," and a gavel made from the pony express stables here to Rosecrans airport. There they will be placed aboard a plane and flown to the Mayor of Sacramento, Calif.

By permission of the Department of Commerce, a regular air liner will make a special stop to pick up the airmail express.

The liner will make the trip to Sacramento in less than 13 hours, as compared with the 10 days required by the pony express.

Armed with a carbine, a pistol and a hunting knife, the first pony express rider—John Frey—dashed from the St. Joseph postoffice to the Missouri River wharf. He rode across on a ferry. Then began a daring relay across the prairies, Rocky Mountains and arid Great Basin, which ended when the specially-designed mail pouch had been carried nearly 2,000 miles.

Previously the swiftest communication from this Western railroad terminus to the Pacific Coast had been three weeks by overland stage.

The pony express began April 3, 1860. It ended 16 months later. The fastest time ever made was 7 days and 17 hours, in carrying Lincoln's inaugural address in 1861.

Have You Heard This? Story-Telling Taught

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 2.—They've taken up the art of anecdote telling at Fairfax Adult Evening High School on the theory even a good yarn poorly told is a bad one.

In general, it is hoped to dispel the timidity of the novice raconteur and convince him that, although there may be so-called "born story tellers," they also may be made.

Mrs. Mary Angier (Ph.D., Columbia), the teacher, told about the course today. It is largely her idea.

"One aim," she said, "is to help students judge what constitutes humor. Another is to show them how to build up a repertoire of stories—mainly to illustrate things in conversation, but also for those occasions when one 'that-reminds-me' leads to another."

Flag Displays Urged In District Saturday

A proclamation calling upon District residents to display the flag Saturday in celebration of Army Day was issued yesterday by the District Commissioners.

"Whereas the Commissioners of the District of Columbia believe that the Nation's Capital should be foremost in celebrating the day," the proclamation said, "We call on all citizens to display the American Flag on their places of business and at their homes and to otherwise appropriately observe the occasion.

NO EXTRA FARE
FAMOUS 400
The Train that SET THE PACE FOR THE WORLD will again CUT RUNNING TIME

The "400", with its connections, permits late afternoon departure from Washington—a day for business or pleasure in Chicago—arrive Twin Cities same evening—only one night en route.

SPEED!
Faster than ever; the new schedule of the "400" will further shorten the time to the Twin Cities—409 miles in 390 minutes. The great, powerful, new oil-burning locomotives which have maintained the fastest sustained running time on the American continent, are capable of speed in excess of 100 miles an hour.

COMFORT!
Big, substantial, standard-size, all-steel coaches, parlor cars, buffet lounge and diner—spacious, luxurious. Buffet service . . . $1.25 dinners to delight the epicure. Air-conditioned throughout. Every detail in keeping with the name and fame of this de luxe train. AND NO EXTRA FARE.

SAFETY!
Superb roadbed—perfectly ballasted and conditioned—oiled—dust-free. Heavy steel rails, regularly inspected by the marvelous Sperry "Electric Eye." Super elevation curves. Smooth, easy, steady riding.

And for 4 consecutive years "North Western" has won the highest Safety awards among all Class "A" American railroads.

TUNE IN STATION WENR CHICAGO EVERY TUESDAY, AT 8:30 P. M. (Central Standard Time)

Once more the "400"—Chicago & North Western's world-acclaimed fast train—will reduce the running time between Chicago and the Twin Cities—30 Minutes Faster—which, plus the advantage of Daylight Saving Time, actually gives an extra hour in Chicago—a full day in Chicago for business or pleasure—and 30 minutes earlier arrival at St. Paul.

Beginning April 28th THE "400"
Lv. Chicago - 4:30 pm (Chicago Daylight Sav. Time)
(3:30 pm—Central Standard Time)
Ar. St. Paul - 10:00 pm (Central Standard Time)
Ar. Minneapolis 10:30 pm (Central Standard Time)

Day after day, for months—through the most severe weather of the year—the "400" has maintained the fastest schedule of any train on the American Continent—and demonstrated that further saving of time is justified without lessening safety or comfort.

Until April 28th—the advent of Chicago Daylight Saving Time—the "400" continues on the schedule which made it the fastest and most popular train in America.

BaltimoreOpera Bid Accepted By Witherspoon

NewMetropolitan Impresario to See Performance of "Aida."

Herbert Witherspoon, recently chosen successor to Guilio Gatti-Casazza at the Metropolitan Opera Company, will witness the first performance of the opera organization under the incoming regime in Baltimore. "Aida" will be presented with an all-star cast at the Lyric Theater next Tuesday night.

Mr. Witherspoon one-time basso of the Metropolitan, telephoned Mr. Frederick R. Huber late Monday that he had accepted the invitation of Dr. Hugh Hampton Young to witness the Lyric performance from Dr. Young's box and to attend the reception for the opera troupe at his Cold Spring Lane residence after the performance. This will be the first visit of Mr. Witherspoon to Baltimore in ten years.

Mr. Witherspoon is keenly interested in the Metropolitan's Baltimore association and the proposed extension of the season next year. A graduate of Yale University, Mr. Witherspoon studied music under J. W. Hall in New York, and Dubulle in Paris. His opera debut was with the Castle Square Company, and his symphonic soloist debut was with the Boston Symphony. He is the first American impresario to head the Metropolitan since the days of Mapleson.

A New Remedy For Dandruff Gives Results

Beauty Parlor Specializes in Recently Discovered Treatment.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

TOO MUCH can not be said about the necessity of caring for the hair. It frequently happens that while a woman is young she takes for granted her hair will always be thick and lustrous. But the years pass and she is forced to acknowledge that her age becomes apparent through the lack-luster appearance of her hair, and in many cases because it is thin and straggly.

In all such cases early care of the hair will prevent these conditions. The woman who will begin while she is young to give her scalp the proper exercise, to brush her hair well, and have treatments for any abnormal conditions runs no danger of looking old before her time because of her hair.

While there are many conditions which should be treated the moment they become noticeable, the most prevalent is dandruff. How to be rid of it is the question uppermost in the minds of hundreds of women.

If this is your problem, seek the answer in a local beauty salon where dandruff treatments are a specialty. Here you may have a perfectly splendid shampoo and for an additional 50 cents the dandruff treatment.

This treatment is spoken of in the salon as a "new cure" because it has only recently been discovered, and is considered by hundreds who have already tried it as a remarkably efficacious dandruff remedy.

Cocktail Hour Accessories.

Just as net capes and flower-trimmed hats are outstanding factors in styledom this season so have mirror accessories risen to the height of popularity in the house furnishing line.

Already a local store is displaying some extremely attractive coaster sets made of octagonal cut mirrors. They include four coasters and a large mirror stand for the cocktail shaker. You have only to see this unusual set to realize what an added attraction it would be to your cocktail hour. And, remember, it costs only 69 cents!

Rollette Style Powder Box.

Every woman keeps a powder box on her dressing table, and nowadays most women keep a cigarette box, too. Since the dressing table is the scene of so much beautifying it should be kept as beautiful as possible itself. There's no better way of doing this than to begin with a matching cigarette and powder box, both in the modernistic—and extremely convenient—rollette style.

After you've once used a rollette box you'l never want to be without one. It rolls open easily and closes in the same manner. Once closed it is secure against dust or extraneous matter seeping in from the outside to ruin your powder. It will also help keep your cigarettes fresh.

Nail Varnishes in Gorgeous Shades.

The newest nail varnishes are in gorgeous shades, many of them highlighted with silver. There is such a variety of color that the smart woman who wishes to follow Parisian dictates may select her polish to match her gown or form a striking contrast.

One of the leading beauty exponents in America greets the season with eight bewitching shades. One she calls "Rose Fonce," a natural shade with just enough color to give a glow to the fingertips. The second, "English Rose," is a delicate petal pink and is the choice of the woman who likes a conservative polish. Printemps is a soft, rosy shade lovely when worn with delicate pastel colors, soft greens or white. Victoire is a clear rich red, particularly successful with black. Grenat, a deep garnet red, is the most flexible shade of all the polishes. Perfect with sun-bronzed skins is nasturtium, a vivid, real, glowing nasturtium color. It gives warmth and brilliance. Silver is a glowing iridescent tint exquisite for evening. Moonstone is a pearly pink with an iridescent gleam. It was especially made to be worn over any of the pale clear shades to give it additional color and to bring it into harmony with the costume.

How to Keep Well

Care of Premature Infants.

NATURE, of course, intends that the child shall be fully developed before birth, but sometimes disease or other factors bring on labor which ushers a new life into the world before the proper time.

Kidney disease, heart disease, diseases of the blood, tuberculosis or any type of infection in the mother present unfavorable conditions for the infant's life. The low limit at which life is possible is a weight of approximately 2 pounds, although the case is recorded of a child who survived with a birth weight of but 14 ounces. Experience has shown that any infant weighing over 4 pounds should make satisfactory progress if a favorable environment is provided.

The premature baby's chances for life depends upon many circumstances, chiefly the prompt adoption of a correct type of management. Deprived of heat from the mother, many of these infants will show a body temperature even below 95 degrees F., and protection from chilling is imperative. In such cases the baby should not be bathed, but should be wrapped in lamb's wool and placed in a small, electrically heated crib which is maintained at a proper heat, so that the infant's temperature will not fall below 99 degrees. It is far more dangerous to allow the child's temperature to drop below 98.6 degrees than to keep it at 100 degrees or slightly over.

It is not absolutely necessary to provide a special chamber (incubator) for the premature baby. On the contrary, an ordinary crib in a well ventilated room is entirely adequate if the proper temperature can be maintained. For the purpose of sustaining an even heat electric pads or a small electrically heated blanket may be used. Hot water bottles cool and hence do not supply uniform heat. Humidity is even more important than temperature, as dry air with its resulting loss of fluid adds to the difficulties of breathing. In the ordinary home moisture must be supplied, so that the relative humidity will not drop below 40.

All persons who have charge of a premature baby should be free from respiratory infections and, as a precaution, should wear gauze masks over the nose and mouth. No one should be permitted to handle the child or even enter its room—not even the physician—unless a sterile gown covers the clothing and a mask is worn.

Care must be taken to see that the child receives the right amount of fluid. This should total from one-fifth to one-seventh of the body weight each 24 hours. Because of the baby's tiny stomach it may be necessary to give some fluid under the skin.

Mother's milk is essential. This may be administered through a medicine dropper or a Breck feeder, which consists of a glass receptacle fitted with a small nipple at one end and a bulb at the other. By gently pressing on the bulb the nurse assists the infant in obtaining an adequate supply of milk.

Regardless of the weight at birth, all babies usually lose for the first week or so. In a recent successful case the birth weight of 1 pound 10½ ounces dropped rather steadily to 1 pound 5 ounces before gain began. Mother's milk, which was sterilized to avoid infection, was used.

Rickets and nutritional anemia must be guarded against, since the baby has not been able to store sufficient vitamins and minerals before birth and its food will of necessity require reinforcement, particularly with vitamin D and iron.

Three Better Health Campaigners Meet Tomorrow At Convention of Women's Democratic Clubs

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. STANLEY V. HODGE, collector of customs at Minneapolis, is one of the presidential appointees to be honored here this week.

MRS. ISABELLE A. O'NEILL, former member of the Rhode Island Legislature, now legislative contact official for the United States Narcotic Commission, warns that the drug habit is gaining ground among young people.

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. JEWELL SWOFFORD, chairman of the United States Employees Commission, is promoting measures for industrial safety.

Mrs. O'Neill, Mrs. Hodge and Mrs. Swofford to Be Honored.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

THEY EACH started out to make the world a healthier place to live in. Their three separate roads led to a place in the political sun. Tomorrow they meet in Washington, and, honored at a single table by the Affiliated Women's National Democratic Clubs, will be given their first opportunity to talk it over.

Mrs. Isabelle A. O'Neill, of Rhode Island, legislative contact official of the United States Narcotics Commission; Mrs. Jewell Swofford, of Kansas City, chairman of the U. S. Employes Compensation Commission, and Mrs. Stanley V. Hodge, of Minneapolis, one of the several New Deal women collectors of customs, began their careers as health workers. Today they stand with Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Josephine Roche, Director of the Mint Nellie Tayloe Ross and Ambassador Ruth Bryan Owen in the enviable aura of presidential appointments.

To Mrs. O'Neill, who devoted the early part of her life to building up healthy young bodies as a hygiene and physical education instructor, her present task is like the launching of a crusade. With 14 years' legislative experience behind her, she has vowed whether in or out of office to dedicate the remainder of her life to stamping out the drug evil.

Uniform Law First Aim.

"It is futile to dream of building up a healthy nation," she said yesterday, "with one of the most destructive forces of the modern age gaining ground among our youth. The adoption of a uniform drug law in all the States of the Union is the first step in our progress. Already 20 Legislatures have adopted it. The rest of the battle will be won through education and vigilant and enlightened cooperation on the part of parent, schools and organizations."

Since her appointment by President Roosevelt in 1933, Mrs. O'Neill has gone before the legislative committees of virtually every State and appealed for the adoption of the uniform narcotics law. Slowly but surely they are setting up the machinery which will reduce drug traffic infringements to a minimum.

"From the standpoint of our young people," Mrs. O'Neill said, "the sensation enlivening and inexpensive marijuana is the most insidious influence in the narcotics category. Very few of the States not under the uniform narcotics law have included this drug under their present provisions. More subtle in its effects than liquor, the influence of the drug can not be detected by parents until their youngsters have become addicts. This doesn't take as long as one would imagine."

Elected to Legislature in 1921.

Mrs. O'Neill, red-haired and blue-eyed, was the first woman member ever elected to the Rhode Island Legislature, becoming a member of the lower house in 1921. It was early in her experience that she became interested in legislating against the narcotics evil. She first introduced a resolution creating a commission to survey the extent of the narcotics violation, writing a report on the subject. Later she assisted in drafting the present State law which has since served as a model.

Elected to the State Senate in 1930, she soon proved her capabilities sufficiently to be chosen Democratic floor leader, an office she held until she received her present appointment.

The crusading spirit is also dominant in the mind of Mrs. Swofford. Acting in the capacity of an unbiased judge on accident cases, Mrs. Swofford's absorbing interest is safety programs.

"A little forward thinking and planning along safety lines is the best kind of preventive medicine," Mrs. Swofford declared. "When we contemplate the appalling losses in life, health and money tied up in each industrial accident, we realize the wisdom of safety measures now being put into effect by labor and industry."

With part of her job the administration of the longshoreman's act, Mrs. Swofford recently visited several large harbors throughout the country and studied the safety programs being launched by ship owners and workers.

"I learned a lot besides safety on that trip," Mrs. Swofford said, her dark eyes twinkling. "In the midst of the longshoremen's strike in San Francisco I was privileged to watch every process of docking a big liner and loading and unloading cargo. It was a romantic and colorful picture. There were equally interesting sidelights to my experiences in Cleveland, Seattle and New Orleans. But the most gratifying spectacle was the increasing precautions taken by both employers and workers in guarding health and preventing accidents."

A former resident of Kansas City, Mrs. Swofford, whose health activities were many and varied, is the mother of three children. Her eldest son, a West Point graduate, is now in the U. S. Aviation Corps in Panama, while her youngest is a recent law graduate from the Kansas City School of Law.

Banquet Scheduled Saturday.

Wife of a prominent Minneapolis physician, Mrs. Hodge, whose health work as member of the Medical Auxiliary is rivaled only by her outstanding political accomplishments, is another interesting personality who will occupy a place of honor at the banquet to be held at the Washington Hotel Saturday.

Prominent in Democratic politics since the ratification of the women's suffrage amendment, she was a delegate to the first county convention after women got the vote. Later she was elected a State delegate and was chosen national committeewoman from her State.

Other presidential appointees to be present at the banquet are Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Miss Roche, Mrs. Ross, Miss Mary Dewson, honorary chairman of the women's division, Democratic National Committee; Mrs. Blair Bannister, Assistant Treasurer of the United States; Mrs. Benton McMillan, Civil Service Commission, and Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau.

The banquet will climax a three-day convention. More than 300 delegates, representing 100 clubs, will be in attendance, according to Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president of the Washington Club.

Other Noted New Dealists Will Attend Dinner Saturday Night.

Here's a Recipe for Shad Roe Enthusiasts

Baked in Patapar Paper, It Is Fine as Main Dinner Dish.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT TAKES a brilliant work of surgery to extract all the bones from a Potomac shad without lacerating the flesh of the fish. The complete operation is almost too complicated to give without a series of drawings to explain every decisive turn of the sharp, slender-bladed knife. The process is so intricate that it takes years to perfect. No mere handling of tweezers will oust all the bones from the boniest of fish—the Potomac shad.

Peter Borras, of the Madrillon, in his story of St. Blaise—the saint who was the worker of miracles and rescued a boy who was choking to death with a fishbone in his throat—tells how the chef at the Restaurant Madrillon, Giacinto Maggia, has triumphed over the boniness of the shad and reduced him, in all his succulence, to a passive filet of solid meat.

Many persons believe that boning a shad is merely the process of removing the backbone and the row of bones on either side that radiate from it. This, however, is just the beginning, for there are still hundreds of bones which lie close to the skin. This is where Giacinto Maggia has triumphed, for with deft fingers he locates the bones that are hidden from sight and with his sharp, slender knife cuts long, straight slits in the flesh of the fish without breaking through to the skin. After the bones have been removed, the filets of meat which have been turned back to reveal the bones are put into place, and only the eating of the fish will prove that there are no bones in the shad. The appearance has not been changed nor the contour of the fish spoiled.

The ultimate goal in perfecting this process has, of course, been to make it more pleasant for Washingtonians to eat their favorite fish. The housewife would find it a difficult process to perfect, for Giacinto Maggia has spent years in perfecting his art. Completely boned shad serves to better advantage and cooks more quickly than the fish from which the bones have not been removed.

Even though the housewife may not try her hand at boning a shad in the professional manner, she may be interested in trying one of Mr. Borras' recipes that follows.

Baked Shad Roe in Patapar Paper.

Place a fresh and solid pair of roes on a whole sheet of patapar paper previously wet with water. Season with salt and paprika. Cream one ounce and a half of fresh butter with a pinch of prepared French mustard and spread over the roes. Chop finely half of a medium-sized onion, four medium-sized fresh mushrooms and two ripe tomatoes, previously peeled and partially seeded. Add a pinch of freshly chopped parsley and spread all of it over the roes. Add one 4-ounce glass of dry white wine or the juice of one lemon.

Fold the patapar so as to seal the ends, forming a neat package of the prepared roes. Baste the exterior of this package with cooking oil to prevent the patapar paper from burning. Put on a shallow pan and into a gay oven (moderately hot) for about 20 minutes.

Following is a suggested dinner menu, planned around the above dish.

Dinner Menu.

Cream of celery soup with croutons
Baked shad roe
Parsley new potatoes
Buttered spinach
Cucumber and tomato salad with French dressing
Whole wheat bread and butter
Lemon meringue pie
Coffee Milk (for children)

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Suggested Menu Includes Cucumber and Tomato Salad.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: With regard to "Cosmopolite's" letter last Saturday, don't you think the clew to her opinion that women from all sections of the country are more or less alike may lie in her preference to women "from all sections of this country," "from the deep South," etc.?

• • • •

I wonder if she has observed closely those women who live and have always lived in those sections? Of course, those who have gone away to school, who have spent summers abroad, who have lived in large cities, have become to a great extent as cosmopolitan as your correspondent herself. And also, of course, there are fundamental human virtues and defects that are equally universal.

• • • •

As an Army child and a Navy wife I have spent my life in various parts of this country, the West Indies, China and the Philippines, and my observation has been that the women of a particular section do have certain characteristics and traits of personality in common, which were brought out, for the most part accurately, in Miss Mangum's series on last week's woman's page.

• • • •

Not long ago Gertrude Stein was quoted as having remarked on the astonishing likeness of American college students, adding that perhaps this was necessary since they were originally so different. All the etiquette books are based on this hypothesis: that certain conventions in dress, appearance, and manners are desirable, even necessary, in order to provide a means of contact and a basis for understanding.

• • • •

So let us by all means keep the cosmopolitan ideal in mind, but at the same time be grateful for the geographical distribution that keeps us from being all alike! Sincerely,

CASUAL OBSERVER.

Our Own Conviction.

DEAR CASUAL OBSERVER: If we assume "Cosmopolite's" conclusion was based on a study of superficial attributes of conduct and appearance, it may well be you have hit the bullseye in analyzing her reason for believing women from all sections of the country are more like than unlike.

• • • •

However, it's possible she has gone deeper into the subject than her restrained and pleasant comment would indicate. Human nature, both masculine and feminine, is cut from the same cloth, the principal and perhaps the only difference between the sexes lying in their opposed and complementary relationship in the biologic function. Psychologically they are very like, and yet, in order to establish a mysterious and presumably more magnetic difference, they have been busy through the ages embroidering their respective constitutional and temperamental claims to dissimilarity.

• • • •

It is my own painfully earned conviction, which passing years and concomitantly increasing contacts serve only to strengthen and corroborate, that not only women, but men as well, are tremendously, even disappointingly, alike. There are the rare and gratifying individual exceptions, of course, just as there are other exceptons veering downward from the norm. Perhaps to arrive at this conviction, one may need to have learned to look beyond the surface, not confusing it with the background, into the depths of the person scrutinized.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

What Today Means

"Aries."

IF APRIL 3 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. until noon, from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m.

It might be wise to avoid, if possible, getting into crowds on this date. If you are in a position requiring your issuing orders, it is important that you should be very explicit in the giving of instructions, otherwise an error may occur. It will be good judgment not to overtax your strength on this date by any form of violent exertion.

In business, be careful you are not tempted to overstock or overbuy, through the glib salestalk of a go-getter type of salesman. In social contacts avoid being too insistent on a friend accepting an invitation, if he appears reluctant to do so, for if you are too persistent you may place him in a very embarrassing position by forcing explanations of a personal nature.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those under Cupid's enchantment, should find this an auspicious day for the planning of any form of entertainment.

If a woman and April 3 is your birthday, avoid giving way to any inclination you may have of becoming "set" in your habits or ways. Make it a point to take an active interest in the latest books, plays and pictures. Develop the habit of looking for the bright side of things and close your eyes, as well as mind, to the gloomy aspect. You may have a pleasant surprise in some matter involving money. Financial affairs are likely to improve in such a way you will be benefitted.

Treasury Lists March Income Topping Outlay

eral expenses for the month were $102,407,000 greater than in the same month a year ago, due chiefly from an increase of $7,000,000 in veterans payments, a rise of $29,000,000 in AAA benefit payments and an increase of $45,000,000 in interest payments on the debt.

Emergency expenditures for the month totaled $287,691,948, as compared with $449,808,670 in March, last year. In March, 1934, the Treasury subscribed $40,412,460 to stock in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and $25,036,413 to stock in the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, disbursements which were not repeated in March of this year.

Another item of decrease also occurred in the RFC account. Whereas in March a year ago the Treasury disbursed to that agency $[illegible]221,765, the RFC last month paid back to the Treasury $11,116,068 in excess of disbursements. A year ago CWA expenditures totaled $177,000,000 more than last month. The FERA, however, spent $121,000,000 more last month than it did in March, 1934.

bureaucratic government should be brushed aside and the legislature reestablished? This legislature ought to reassert itself, or else we should cease calling this a democracy."

Speaking as a small business man, George S. Tracy, president of the Perkins-Tracy Printing Co., of St. Paul, told the Senate Finance Committee that big business had attempted to intimidate him through a graphic arts code authority. He said his large competitors had attempted to prevent him from getting a State printing contract on the grounds that he had been bidding below cost. In this connection he said the authority had insisted on his charging depreciation on machinery that had been charged off as being paid for.

Smith L. Scoggin, president of the St. Paul Typographical Union, told the committee Tracy had been "persecuted" for employing union labor.

Code Official Comments.

D. M. Nelson, code administrative official, told the committee machinery had been set up for removal of code authorities that were not functioning properly. He agreed that there had been some improper administration by code authorities.

Nelson also referred to charges that cities had received identical bids for fire hose. He said the NRA had warned the rubber authority that price collusion was illegal.

The charges being prepared by the Federal Trade Commission grow out of the fire hose bids.

Announcing that the House Agricultural Committee had withdrawn its approval of the AAA amendments, Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, said that the bill would be reported out later.

"There are several amendments the members wanted to discuss," he said. "We shall think them over a day or two and then give the bill further attention."

Labor Troubles Disturbing.

Labor troubles still were disturbing relief officials, although the most serious, that in the coal industry, has been postponed at least until June. Strike votes in rubber plants were being watched, as were the situation in the textile and automobile industries.

The NRA still was hearing echoes of the Government's action in withdrawing its appeal of the Belcher lumber code case. Representatives of the lumber code authority will meet with Recovery Board members today. They have threatened to abandon the code, but NRA officials hoped for an agreement whereby a revised lumber code would be continued.

Hearings before the Senate Labor Committee on the Wagner labor disputes bill were concluded yesterday with testimony of James A. Emery, counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, and one of the most active opponents of the measure. Labor organizations are pushing the bill and it was reported after the recent labor-Administration truce was agreed upon that the Administration would not oppose the measure.

Farm Debt Act Wins Appeal; Supreme Court Takes Data

you address an argument which this court could not consider with any self-respect."

Krauthoff apologized, but insisted he felt the court should consider the question of "whether bankers shall be allowed to dispossess farmers and make them peasants and tenants."

Query on Precedent.

Earlier several justices—Brandeis, Sutherland, Roberts, Stone and McReynolds—pressed Harry H. Peterson, Minnesota's attorney general, for a legal precedent for a Frazier-Lemke provision preventing mortgage holders from taking over property securing the indebtedness.

"Was it ever possible under any law to deny a lien holder the right to get either his money or the security?" asked Justice Stone.

"A statute which says a farmer only has to pay half his debt isn't a bankruptcy statute, is it?" asked Justice Sutherland.

"I understand you to say that if the property should drop in value during the five years the farmer could refuse to exercise his option to purchase—and you call that a bankruptcy act?" asserted Justice McReynolds.

"I don't recall any cases where a mortgage holder was barred from bidding his property in if the mortgage wasn't paid. That to me is one of the novel features of this law," said Justice Brandeis.

Peterson said he thought the "principle of transferring the lien from the property to the proceeds answers this question," and added that "if the creditor gets the full value of his property, he isn't deprived of anything."

Provisions of Act.

Under the act an insolvent farmer may petition a Federal court to be declared a bankrupt and, if the mortgage holder refuses to make concessions by scaling down interest payments, the farmer may retain his property for five years, paying a reasonable rental determined by the court. At the end of the period the farmer may buy the property for a "fair and reasonable" appraisal fixed under the court's direction.

The Richmond appellate court held that the act was a just and reasonable exercise of power by a Congress confronted by an economic emergency, the Associated Press reported, adding that the tribunal ruled the act did not violate the "due process" clause of the fifth amendment to the Constitution.

The court pointed out that in recent years a much wider exercise of the bankruptcy power by Congress became imperative due to the industrial expansion and the "unprecedented expansion of credit." When the depression came, the court asserted, relief was needed by amendment of the original bankruptcy laws "to enable people to face reality with respect to the altered condition of their debt structure." Congress attempted to give such relief by amending the bankruptcy law in various ways, the court pointed out.

Emergency Cited.

"The most serious question presented is as to the five-year delay which the statute interposes to the rights of the creditor," the court declared. "It may be conceded that under ordinary conditions this provision would be so arbitrary and unreasonable as to offend against the provisions of the fifth amendment, but we are not prepared to say that it may be condemned when viewed in the light of the emergency that confronted Congress."

The court intimated that other interpretations may be applied under changed conditions in the future, by saying: "Whether after the economic depression shall have passed and conditions have returned to normal the act can be sustained is a question not before us."

As to specific contentions argued in the case, the court held that the act could not be declared unconstitutional merely because it related only to farmers. "It is well settled," the court said, "that the uniformity prescribed by the Constitution is geographical and not personal."

The opinion handed down yesterday was written by Judge John J. Parker and concurred in by Judge Northcott and Judge Soper. There was no dissent.

Federal Court Term Opens at Martinsburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 2.—The United States Court for the Northern District of West Virginia convened here this morning for the spring term, with Judge W. E. Baker presiding and the petit jury panel present.

So far as known there will be but one civil suit—the action of Mrs. Florence Keedy against Roger G. Charlton, seeking damages for the death two years ago of her husband, C. C. Keedy, who was struck by one of Charlton's trucks. Suit was first instituted in Berkeley Circuit Court and later moved to the United States Court. The term here will be brief, as the major portion of business has been scheduled for the Clarksburg term, which starts in that city next Tuesday.

Recreation Leader Ends Term.

Charlottesville, Va., April 2.—Mrs. R. L. Currier, director of recreation here for 18 months, tonight attended her last meeting in that capacity when the white and Negro advisory boards met in the council chamber. She will be succeeded by Mrs. C. S. Morris, who comes here from Lynchburg, where she had been engaged in welfare and recreation work for several years.

"Now I'm Full of Pep"

"HOUSEWORK IS FUN"

says Gloria Adams after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Housewife tells how this famous medicine gave her new strength

"I used to be all run-down and tired out," writes Gloria Adams. "I was nervous . . . I was so weak and tired that I could not do my housework without resting every few minutes.

"One day a friend of mine told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I started taking it. In a few days my strength began to come back, my color improved and I was able to sleep nights.

"I have now been taking the Vegetable Compound regularly for some time and I feel full of pep again. Housework is fun because it does not tire me. I advise all women who are weak, rundown and nervous to try this wonderful medicine."

PEPPY HOUSEWIVES

Thousands of housewives are now strong and full of pep because they have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before they tried this famous medicine, however, they were weak, rundown and tired. Many of them were cross to their husbands. Women who are all tired out just can't help being cross.

If you are tired out . . . if you are cross to your husband, try this famous old medicine . . . Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Its tonic action should strengthen you, calm your quivering nerves and give you the pep that you need to carry on with a smile.

CHECK YOUR FAULTS

Ask your family or friends whether or not you show any of these symptoms.

Are you cross? ☐
Are you nervous? ☐
Are you run-down? ☐
Are you always tired? ☐
Are you ever hysterical? ☐
Are you ever blue? ☐
Do you ever feel faint? ☐
Are you ever dizzy? ☐
Are you "all in"? ☐

If you have one or more of these symptoms and they are due to a nervous or run-down condition, you should read the rest of this advertisement . . . it contains advice which will be helpful to you. If you feel that any of these symptoms are caused by a serious ailment or disease, you should immediately consult your physician.

CHECK YOUR FAULTS

Read over the questions listed in the center of this advertisement. If you have to say yes to one or more of them you should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it is, no doubt, just what you need to give you renewed strength and energy.

TRYING TIMES

If you have a trying time each month, if you are all tired out during these periods and find that you are cross and irritable . . . you should do something about it. If your condition is due to some serious ailment, you should immediately consult your physician; if, on the other hand, your trouble is caused by a run-down, nervous condition, try the Vegetable Compound. It should give you sufficient strength and energy to carry on through these trying times.

PAIN AND DISCOMFORT

For quick relief from pain and discomfort which come each month use Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. . . They work well with the Vegetable Compound. Small size Tablet bottle, 25 cents.

Gloria Adams is a composite of the 749,721 women who have reported that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given them pep. Although Gloria Adams is a fictitious housewife, the statements attributed to her are echoed by thousands of grateful women who have received new strength from the Vegetable Compound.*

*By accurate record 749,721 women (out of 763,633 who reported) say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given them pep. This means that 98 out of every 100 women feel that the Compound has strengthened them.

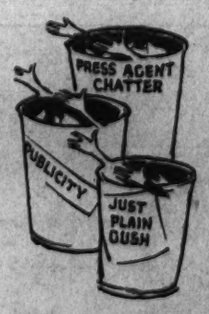
Sending Sidney Skolsky, the Broadway columnist, 'way our West to report on Hollywood was just like sending the society reporter out to cover a war. That's what the Wise Guys along the Main Stem were saying not so long ago. "Oh, sure," they scoffed, "Sid is a good reporter and all that . . . but wait until he attends a Hollywood movie opening, or is tackled by a publicity-mad actress, or tries to understand a studio executive's English! He'll go nuts in a week."

Well, that was months and months ago. Sidney is still out in Hollywood, writing the best movie-gossip column ever sent out of that city of Celluloid, and the Wise Guys are weeping enviously into their beer, wondering how he did it. For Skolsky's column on Hollywood is better, more varied, more amusing than Hollywood itself. It's four-star stuff, with the smooth performance of a Myrna Loy, the direction of a Frank Capra, the glamour of the Cecil B. DeMille production, and the human interest of a Mickey Mouse cartoon.

Skolsky leaped into fame as a Broadway columnist with his "Tintypes of Broadway," those brilliant and interesting sketches of the famous and infamous which were later published as a best-seller. In those days, he was known as the Midnight Midget who found bright paragraphs in the bright spots. The Midget has grown up now and in Hollywood he has become acquainted with the Film Stars who frequent the Cocoanut Grove, and the Extras you'll find in the cheap beaneries. He knows Hollywood so well that he can recognize the Invisible Man!

After all, it's nice to read about Hollywood and know that you're getting the straight dope—the Real Skolsky. Usually, a Hollywood column is written with the assistance of two press-agents, a lot of gush, and a vivid imagination. That's why Skolsky is different. He has three waste-baskets in his office for the express purpose of filing publicity directors' blurbs. When Skolsky writes "The Gossipel Truth," Skolsky writes of the things he knows about Hollywood, not the ducky little tea-set Claudette Colbert bought last week. Skolsky writes of the how and why of movieland, about the bright cracks heard above the camera's clicks, of the "boners" which slip past the film cutter.



"Hollywood," by Sidney Skolsky, is better than a seat at your favorite movie . . . and you'll find it five days a week in

Maryland Program On Relief Queried For Yield, Legality

Its Possible Failure to Provide $5,000,000 Needed Foreseen.

Hopkins Awaiting Details on Plan

Grocer Group Planning Court Test on Gross Receipts Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 2.—The Maryland Legislature ended its stormy 90-day session at dawn today, but whether it actually solved one of its most vital problems—that of relief—remained to be seen.

A dual hazard confronted the combination relief-revenue raising plan the legislators hammered into completion in the closing hours of their session. One was a threat of a court fight upon its kingpin provision, the 1 per cent tax on gross retail sales, and the other was a possibility that all the relief revenue sources tapped would not provide the $5,000,000 annually demanded by Federal relief authorities.

"Plans are in formation now to test this gross sales tax in the courts," Harry W. Walker, executive secretary of the Independent Retail Grocers Association of Maryland, said a few hours after the legislative session ended. He said he might have a further announcement to make by Thursday.

Hopkins Waits Facts.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, at Washington presumably was awaiting full information on the Maryland relief plan to determine whether it would raise the $5,000,000 minimum—$3,500,000 for general relief and $1,500,000 for old-age pensions—he set as the State's contribution to the relief burden. He withheld definite comment until all the facts were before him, but earlier he had been represented as expressing dissatisfaction at the plan.

Packed into the relief-revenue plan in addition to the gross sales tax were: The surplus from an inheritance levy imposed primarily to service the $8,500,000 emergency bond issue; unclaimed bank deposits to be seized by the State, and a 1 per cent title levy on automobiles.

Senator Milton L. Veasey, Worcester County Democrat, foe of the gross receipts levy and champion of a 2-per cent consumers sales tax, asserted the combined sources were inadequate and the Legislature would be summoned into special session soon to solve "this relief question all over again." Emanuel Gorfine, of Baltimore, speaker of the House of Delegates, however, held the relief plan would meet requirements and labelled assertions that it would not "bunk and propaganda."

Extends One Year.

Whether or not it is adequate, a special session of the Legislature will be required next year if relief is to be continued into that period. The plan adopted by the Legislature is for a period of one year only.

The legislative session was brought to a sudden end when the House adjourned sine die to keep from passing a measure which would have cut the Tavern licenses for liquor, beer and wine sales in Baltimore City from $500 to $300 and, opponents asserted, allowed liquor to be sold on Sunday in Baltimore.

Other last minute developments included:

Authorization of a referendum in the next general election on whether the State constitution will be amended to permit lotteries.

Enactment of a mandatory old-age pension bill—an administration measure—giving pensioners a maximum of $1 a day.

Providing a license fee for "claw" vending machines and earmarking this revenue for relief purposes.

Enactment of a measure to require teachers to take the oath of allegiance.

Hearing Scheduled.

The majority of these measures and many others still await Gov. Nice's signature to make them law. Their opponents and proponents will be given an opportunity to appear at hearings in the executive offices from Thursday through April 12.

Gov. Nice said tonight that he would be ready to listen to arguments on the bills from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. daily.

Soon after April 12, with Senate President Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), Prince Georges County; Speaker Emanuel Gorfine (Democrat), Fourth Baltimore; C. Andrew Shaab, secretary to the Senate, and John J. Nowakowski, chief clerk of the House, the Governor plans to sign the accumulated measures. The names of all these officials are required to make the bills legal.

The Governor made it plain he might veto several of the bills without waiting until after April 12.

Relief Agency To Run Closed Marble Quarry

Road Will Be Constructed to Long Idle Industry in Loudoun.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., April 2.—After a visit Saturday by Horace Truesdell, head of the FERA rehabilitation work in Virginia, and J. R. Lintner, county farm demonstration agent, to the long closed marble quarry in the mountains near Evergreen Mills, announcement was made that a road would be built to the quarry and production resumed under the FERA.

Samples of pink, blue, green and pure white marble were brought back by Mr. Truesdell, who declared that quality is high, and that work for a large number will be offered. In addition to the marble, a deposit of oxide useful as coloring for paints was found.

It is said that some of the finest marble used in the older public buildings in Washington came from the Loudoun quarry, but production was discontinued because of the high cost of handling and transportation.

Cannery to Operate A Pickle Factory

$100,000 Is Being Spent on Harrisonburg Industry.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 2.—With 700 Rockingham County farmers signed to grow cucumbers, the National Fruits Products Co., of Washington, is spending $100,000 to convert the Shenandoah Valley Canning Corporation plant into a modern pickle factory.

It was pointed out that Rockingham and Harrisonburg farmers will get much-needed cash income, at least 150 persons will be employed when the plant is in operation, and new capital is brought into the community. The pickle unit is said by W. G. Wormley, local representative, to be the first step in the construction of a modern condiment plant which will produce catsup and sauces.

Milk Board Acts to Fix State Prices

Revived Virginia Body Orders Regulations Be Enforced.

Amendments Possible in Rules Because of Changes Since Fall.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 2.—The State Milk Control Commission, revived by the State Supreme Court, and encouraged today by Gov. Peery, tonight ordered the enforcement of its regulations on the various local markets.

Instructions were sent to chairmen of local boards instructing them "to continue to stabilize prices in the different markets."

"In view of the fact that changes in conditions may have occurred since last November, the commission may find it desirable to make certain amendments to the present regulations," said Chairman J. S. Agnew.

The commission, controlling prices, production and distribution established by the 1934 General Assembly, functioned from the time the act was effective until November, when the State Supreme Court held the act invalid. Since then it was without authority to enforce the codes it set up for the various markes, until the court last week on a rehearing reversed itself and declared the act to be constitutional.

Price Sabilization.

Today the commission returned to its offices. This afternoon the members of the commission conferred with Gov. Peery, and tonight they issued the following statement:

"The members of the State milk commission met today to resume operations and to carry out the regulations of the commission in the various milk markets. The regulations which were in effect prior to November 15, automatically became effective again with the decision of the Supreme Court of Appeals March 29, upholding the constitutionality of the act.

"After conferring with Gov. Peery this afternoon the commission immediately took steps to continue to stabilize prices in the different markets. Letters are being sent from the commission today to the chairmen of each local board, asking that the members of the local boards be called together at once and that the regulations be properly enforced.

"In view of the fact that changes in conditions may have occurred since last November, the commission may find it desirable to make certain amendments to the present regulations.

"The milk markets already set up and in effect are Roanoke, Danville, Lynchburg, Harrisonburg, Norfolk, Newport News, Petersburg and the Staunton-Waynesboro area."

Agent Sees Groups Opposed to Control

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 2.—No groups, "powerful" or otherwise, want the State Milk Commission to take control of the market here, T. O. Scott, Albemarle County agricultural agent, whose recent presentation of a report on milk production costs, prepared at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, stirred the dairymen of the county to attempt to cooperate with each other, said today.

Making it clear that he was not speaking in behalf of any groups here, Mr. Scott said that he did not believe that "powerful interests" would petition the commission to enter this market. He expressed the opinion that the dairymen of this county had shown a will to cooperate and would rationalize the market here without interference from outside.

Liberty League Official Tells Chapter at Virginia U. of Aims

Dr. A. J. Haake Calls for Fight Against the 'Organized Minority' in Talk Before Charlottesville Students.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 2.—In a talk here last night before the University of Virginia student chapter of the American Liberty League, Dr. A. J. Haake, an official of the league from national headquarters in Washington, declared the organization's primary purpose was to "rouse the inarticulate majority against the small, powerful groups which are forcing their will on Congress."

The function of a collegiate chapter of the league, Dr. Haake said, is to "get students started on fundamental American principles in government and industry." He insisted efforts to "awaken the great unorganized majority which has been ruled by the organized minority" would be conducted on a strictly non-partisan basis.

Dr. Haake, a former corporation executive and college professor of economics, hit at the Government's interference in private business and declared that "only through the preservation of individual enterprise can our development as a nation go forward."

John H. Blaffer, of Houston, Tex., one of the organizers and chairman of the student chapter, in presenting the speaker said the university branch of the league has become the largest collegiate units in the country. Efforts are being made to have Alfred E. Smith or another member of the league's national executive committee speak here this spring.

Town to Be Host To Bible Group Meeting April 6

Harlan Crowell and John McSparran Listed as Guest Speakers.

By the Associated Press.

Rising Sun, Md., April 2.—Harlan D. Crowell, Grenbrook, Conn., president of the National Federation of Men's Bible Classes, and John A. McSparran, former secretary of agriculture for Pennsylvania, will be the guest speakers at the one-day convention of the Maryland Federation of Men's Bible Classes which convenes here April 6.

The meeting will open with a business session at convention headquarters in the Janes Memorial Church. The annual election of officers and submission of reports from various committees will follow.

Group conferences after the business meeting will be led by A. Warman, Mount Rainier, Md.; Burton L. Kellholtz, Rising Sun; Cleveland H. Taylor, Cumberland, Md., and George Harvey and C. H. Gundersdorf, both of Baltimore.

Crowell, who will speak during the afternoon, is past president of both the Stanford (Conn.) and Connecticut State Federations. He is the founder of the Greater New York City Federation and the New Haven Federation.

McSparran will speak during the evening session after a banquet served by the ladies of the Janes Memorial Church.

National officers who have made reservations for the convention are George Harris, Washington, national regional vice president; William Florian, Bridgeport, Conn., regional vice president; Russell Fairhurst, Newark N. J., secretary; Harry Slack, New York City, national advisory committee members, and Neil Jamieson, Gloucester City, N. J., executive vice president.

State officers expected to attend include H. C. McClintock, Elkton, president; C. Ellis Deibert, Elkton, secretary; Harold Day, Baltimore, treasurer, and the Rev. A. F. T. Raum, Baltimore, chaplain.

Appeal Holds Up Arson Sentence

New Trial Asked for Pair Who Burned Barn.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., April 2.—Sentence for Isaac Gaius Harvey and his wife, Mary Harvey, convicted by a Circuit Court jury of burning a barn belonging to Harvey's aunt, has been delayed pending action on a motion for a new trial.

"New evidence" prompted the appeal for a new trial, the Harveys' attorney said.

Harvey confessed he had urged his wife to fire the building, owned by Miss Virginia May Harvey, so that his aunt could collect $1,100 in insurance. He intended, he said, to borrow the money from her. His confession was permitted in evidence at the trial.

W.&L. Students To Hear Soviet News Writer

Vladimir Romm, Washington Correspondent, Will Speak Friday.

Lexington, Va., April 2.—Vladimir Romm, first correspondent from the U. S. S. R. to be stationed in Washington, will speak to Washington and Lee journalism students here Friday evening, it was announced today by O. W. Riegel, director of journalism at the university. His topic will be "The Press in the U. S. S. R."

Izvestia, leading newspaper of Moscow, assigned Romm to cover the American capital shortly after Ambassador Troyanovsky took up his official duties in this country.

Before coming to the United States last year, Romm was correspondent for Tass news agency in Geneva and Paris, and prior to that time had been with the same agency in Tokyo. He was born in St. Petersburg, now Leningrad, in 1896.

Romm's address will be made in the journalism lecture room in Washington college at 7:30 o'clock and the public will be invited, Prof. Riegel said today. An open forum on the U. S. S. R. will follow the address.

The appearance of the Russian newspaperman here is being sponsored jointly by the department of journalism and Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity.

Church to Observe Centennial Sunday

Trinity, at Orange, Will Mark Anniversary.

By the Associated Press.

Orange, Va., April 2.—Trinity Methodist Church of Orange, of which the Rev. W. L. Ware is pastor, will celebrate its centennial Sunday.

Dr. George E. Booker, who now is pastor of the First Methodist Church at Charlottesville, will speak at the morning service, and the Rev. R. E. Blankenship, a former minister at Trinity, will preach in the evening.

Other Methodist churches of Orange County will co-operate with Trinity Church in its celebration.

Dr. Hocking to Begin Lectures at Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 2.—Dr. William E. Hocking, professor of philosophy at Harvard University, will give the James W. Richard lectureship series at the University of Virginia Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Dr. Hocking will speak on the general subject of "The Idea of God and the Unity of the World." Titles of the individual lectures are "Motives to Monism: God as Absolute," "Motives to Pluralism: God as Finite" and "God in a Changing World."

Central Unit Will Pay 4% To Creditors

Holders of $877,000 in Blue Ridge Firm's Notes to Get Cash.

Dividend Expected by April 16; D. C. Realty Sale Approved.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 2.—William B. French, trustee of the Blue Ridge Securities Corporation, a subsidiary of the defunct Central Trust Co., filed a petition in circuit court stating that he expects to have available by April 15 approximately 4 per cent of the outstanding coupon notes, par value $877,000, for distribution to creditors.

The petition pointed out that the Blue Ridge Corporation issued in 1930 serial coupon notes of $900,000 and there is now outstanding $877,000. It added that every effort is being made to liquidate the assets of the corporation to terminate the trusteeship and pay a dividend to the note holders. There are no other creditors except the note holders.

The court granted a request of Mr. French, as ancillary receiver of the Blue Ridge Investment Co., another subsidiary of the Central Trust Co., to sell to Charles L. Rosemund, of Washington, an apartment house at 1815 S street northwest, for $55,000. Accrued charges of $46,500.52 would have to be paid out of the proceeds of this sale, Mr. French said. There is a balance due on a second deed of trust with interest from July 21, 1932, the deed being held as part of collateral to secure the $900,000 note issue.

The amount available on the second deed of trust would be $8,499.48. Mr. French informed the court that it would be to the best interest of the trust to accept the $8,499.48 in full settlement of the notes aggregating $22,600 secured by the second deed. The court approved the transaction provided the sale is sanctioned by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Office furniture used by Mr. French as receiver for the Blue Ridge Securities Corporation and the Blue Ridge Investment Co. was ordered by the court to be sold at public sale. The court also directed Mr. French to sell three different certificates of beneficial interest of the People's Liquidating Corporation at an offer of 4 per cent net. The Liquidating Corporation is liquidating the assets of the Central Trust which were not taken over by the new Western Maryland Trust Co. when the latter bank organized. The Liquidating Corporation is also collecting liability from stockholders of the Central Trust Co.

Mr. French said today he expects to liquidate the assets of the Blue Ridge Securities Corporation and the Blue Ridge Investment Co. within the next three weeks.

Hopewell Nitrogen Plant Reports Business Gains

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hopewell, Va., April 2.—A Japanese freighter is docked at the Atmospheric Nitrogen Co.'s plant here, taking on nitrates.

The Malchase, an American freighter, also is being loaded at the plant. The Solvay Process, Inc., now in charge of the Atmospheric Nitrogen Co.'s plant in this city, is unusually busy and has taken on a large number of men during the past two or three weeks.

Second in Hog Applications.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., April 2.—L. C. Burns, county agricultural agent, announced today that Carroll County is second among the Maryland counties in the number of applications for participation in the Federal corn-hog reduction program. Applications, which were received until April 1, total 325, representing about 90 per cent of the eligible hog producers in the county, Burns stated.

Legislation Study In Virginia Begun By Advisory Group

Heads Committee

Foster Studio, Richmond.

ASHTON DOVELL.

Leader Tells Council Work Is Limited to Governor's Needs.

Inquiry Gets Aid Of Tax Economist

Sub-Committee Heads Select Helpers for Investigations.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 2.—Emphasizing that it was to consider only those subjects referred to it by the Governor, and that its recommendations were for use only by the Governor in carrying out the constitutional mandate requiring him to make recommendations to the Legislature, Chairman John S. Battle today put his advisory council to work.

With the exception of the chairman each member of the council, which was announced by the Governor last week, has been assigned a subject to be investigated by a sub-committee he heads.

The sub-committee heads selected their committeemen today, and chairman Battle said as soon as formal acceptances are received, William R. Shands, secretary, will arrange a schedule of sub-committee meetings to which interested citizens will be invited.

Many Officials Named.

The sub-committees selected today were:

Trial justice system — Delegate Haskins Hobson, chairman; W. W. Martin, assistant attorney general; W. H. Overby, president of the State Trial Justices Association; J. W. Phillips, assistant commissioner of public welfare.

Banking laws—Senator G. W. Layman, chairman; Speaker S. Sinclair Brown, Salem; E. A. Kincaid, University of Virginia, and Judge William Meade Fletcher, member of the State corporation commission.

Delinquent real estate—State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett, chairman; H. H. Holt, Elizabeth City County Clerk of the Court; J. N. Montgomery, Franklin County treasurer; J. Laurie Smith, Richmond, and Delegate Samuel D. Rogers, Petersburg.

Paroles and probation—Senator Hunter Miller, chairman; Public Welfare Commissioner Arthur W. James; Judge Lemuel F. Smith, Charlottesville, and Dave E. Satterfield, Richmond.

The sub-committee on criminal procedure, headed by Delegate Ashton Dovell, was not selected today.

To work with these sub-committees, and with the council, Tax Commissioner Morrissett offered Dr. William H. Stauffer, economist for the tax department, whose services were accepted by Chairman Battle.

Use $25,000 Grant.

"We are fortunate in receiving a $25,000 grant from the Spelman fund for this work," said Chairman Battle. "This council is to consider only those subjects as may be referred to it from time to time by the Governor. Its report will be directly to the Governor for use in carrying out the constitutional mandate requiring the chief executive to report and recommend to the Legislature when it meets."

The Governor at the first meeting of the council last week told it he wished studies on the subjects on which sub-committees were selected today. He indicated that other matters would be assigned to the council, but no additional ones were communicated today.

The sub-committees are to report to the full council, and the council will deliver its findings to the Governor. The Governor may or may not accept and use them in his recommendations.

Extra Officers To Help Guide Apple Visitors

Force of 100 Will Handle Traffic at Winchester Blossom Fete.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, April 2.—Approximately 100 officers will be on duty in Winchester during the apple blossom festival handling the heavy traffic and aiding in enforcement of law, Chief of Police C. W. Hollis declared today.

In past years many officers have come from the District of Columbia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania to assist local and State police at festival time.

The route of the parade is being planned by the festival and city officials with a view to eliminating interference with traffic on the chief highways.

Confronted with the possibility of buds bursting into blossom from a week to ten days earlier than usual, festival officials were speeding up their work with careful watch on the budget. Approximately $7,500 remains to be collected of the $10,000 estimated necessary to finance the festival.

Broken Lease Charged In Suit for $100,000

A suit asking $100,000 damages from R. E. Milor and the R. E. Milor Co., 1631 L street, northwest, was filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Frank R. Abbo, proprietor of the Dixie Tavern, in Rockville.

Abbo alleged that Milor forced him to leave the Tavern April 1, although a lease he obtained from the Milor Co. had not expired. The plaintiff claimed he had been beaten when he resisted attempts to oust him. Attorneys George P. Lemm and Harold Brody represented Abbo.

Shepherdstown Mayor Commences Ninth Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., April 2.—Records were shattered here last night when the mayor and councilmen of Shepherdstown took the oath of office before Justice of the Peace C. E. Jones.

J. L. Waldeck took the oath as mayor for his ninth consecutive term, a record for Shepherdstown. Recorder A. S. Lucas and Councilmen W. W. Waddy and J. H. Robinson held service records of equal length.

Eleven Schools File Entries In Post National Spelling Bee

Maryland and Virginia Counties Represented in New List Taking Advantage of Early Registration.

Eleven schools yesterday filed their entries for the national spelling bee with The Washington Post, which is sponsoring the match in 32 counties in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland. Loudoun and Culpeper counties, in Virginia, each contributed three entries. The list, with the name of the principal or teacher in charge, follows:

Culpeper County—Jeffersonton School, Macon F. Fean; Culpeper High School, R. R. Tolbert; Salem High School, Mrs. Mary J. Hudson.

Loudoun County—Purcellville Elementary School, Miss Bertha E. Greever; Carter School, Mrs. Mary E. Hemsley; Middleburg School, Mrs. C. D. Rainey.

Warren County—Milldale School, Miss Margaret Mitchell; Linden School, Miss Virginia McMullen.

The other three counties represented in yesterday's enrollments were in Maryland — St. Marys County, where the Leonardtown School was entered by La Verne Miller; Washington County, where E. C. Weigand entered Paramount No. 2; and Prince Georges County, where the Olive Street School in Hyattsville was enrolled by Miss Kathryne Y. Niland.

Several principals have asked whether pupils in junior high schools are eligible to the spelling bee. Regardless of whether a school is designated as elementary, junior high or high school, the same rule prevails; any child is eligible who has not yet completed the eighth year of school work.

Early registration for the bee, which has been enthusiastically indorsed by county superintendents, has two advantages. It will allow for arranging the details of the county match with greater care of the number if schools participating is known in advance, and will insure the school's receiving a word list in ample time for study. The word list will be ready for mailing by the end of this week.

Liberal prizes, calculated to arouse the children's interest in spelling, will be awarded in the elimination matches with the grand award for this area a 12-volume set of the Encyclopedia Britannica Junior. In addition to this inspirational prize, the winner will be privileged to represent this territory in the National Spelling Bee, in which $1,750 in cash prizes will be awarded. For leaflet giving full details of the competition, write Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, in care of The Washington Post.

U. S. Government Lets Down Bars on a New Departmental Activity to the Films

Justice Dept. Cooperated; Janney Is a Visitor; Notes of Theater.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The United States Federal establishment is branching out in its partnerships with the producers of motion pictures.

It has long been taken for granted that if a picture involving in its development any of the inner workings of the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the flying corps of any of these branches of the armed service, or any other specialized activities which they may pursue, is to be made by any of the major studios, your Uncle Sam will have a cooperative and supervisory hand in the proceedings. It has been customary, of course, to put at the disposal of the film-makers all of the facilities of the Federal services, up to and including West Point, the entire United States Navy, its flying fleets, airplane carriers, etc., and such of the Army's ordnance as may be needed.

Now the procedure has been carried beyond the traditional fighting forces of the Nation into a new field, which, while belligerent enough, usually is kept strictly under cover.

I am referring now to an item that was touched upon by this department in a recent Sabbath essay devoted to the new angle from which the crime and gangster picture is being approached—the revelation of the adventures, methods and achievements of the "D. J." men, engaged in the running down of public enemies. This particular item is the James Cagney vehicle, being made under the title of "G-Men."

Entailed Long Research.

Many months were spent in preparation before a camera turned on the new First National picture, "G-Men," a production based on the daring exploits of the agents of the United States Department of Justice.

A vast amount of research was necessary to depict faithfully, for instance, the six months' training period through which all recruits go before becoming full-fledged "G-Men."

Only a small percentage of the people who see the picture will have had the experience of a tour through the new Department of Justice Building in this city, but, for the benefit of these few, First National production executives insisted the sets representing sections of the department be absolutely correct in all details.

Studio research agents spent many weeks in Washington; by special permission they were permitted to watch the actual training of embryonic Federal agents. They watched the technical divisions of the department in action and took scores of photographs of the rooms composing these divisions.

Turned Over to Specialists.

When they returned to Hollywood, they turned the fruit of their efforts over to various studio departments; the photographs they had taken went to the art department, the vast accumulation of data pertaining to Government technique went to the scenarist, Seton I. Miller.

From the photographs, the art department constructed a complete reproduction of the Bureau of Investigation of the U. S. Department of Justice within the confines of a single sound stage. The sets including a long narrow fingerprint-filing room, a fingerprinting department, a ballistics department, a gymnasium, a long marble-walled hallway and the offices of various departmental executives.

Then came the problem of "dressing" the sets. The offices and filing room were simple problems, but in order to assure technical accuracy in the fingerprinting and ballistics departments the studio called upon Frank P. Gompert, head of the criminological department of the Los Angeles County sheriff's office, to aid in furnishing these divisions.

Great Technical Array.

Gompert scanned the pictures taken in these divisions of the Department of Justice. Then he went to work furnishing the two departments with fingerprinting apparatus, selector devices, magnified photographs of bulletins, fingerprint comparators, microscopes, helixometers and a maze of other mysterious apparatus employed by the modern criminologist.

Experts who visited the sets described them as remarkable examples of a complete criminological laboratory and United States Attorney Pierson M. Hall, of the Southern California District, and Will K. Beardsley, assistant United States Attorney General, who spent an hour on the sound stage, stated they were amazed at the accuracy with which the Bureau of Investigation was reproduced.

Now then, what department will come next?

We suggest that the filmsters go directly to the President's secretariat—possibly as a vehicle for Hugh Herbert and Frank McHugh, or Lee Tracy and Warren William—to get official assistance in determining the lowdown on how Steve Early and Marvin McIntyre get all those swell trips to Miami!

This afternoon at 2, Leon Janney, juvenile star of screen and stage, will arrive at the Hoover Airport to spend the day with his friend, Mitzi Green, headlining this week's bill at the Earle Theater. Miss Green will be at the airport to greet her old-time friend and visitor.

The particular occasion of the junket, one is told, is that today is Leon's birthday and he has an overpowering yen to spend it in Miss Green's company, insofar as her stage appearances will permit.

The visit, as a matter of fact, will extend through tomorrow as well as today. Both tonight and tomorrow night Master Janney will be guest star at the Shoreham.

This is the same young Janney who has appeared in upward of 50 feature films and short subjects on the West Coast and enjoys the same eminence as a juvenile made star as accrued to Mitzi on the distaff side. His last appearance—and it was his first, too, I believe—on a Washington stage was at the Belasco Theater during the Wee and Leventhal tenancy of the Lafayette Square playhouse.

He was cast, you will recall—or maybe not—in the role of Raymond Clark, in support of Queenie Smith, in an amusing trifle called "Every Thursday."

Prepare for Premiere.

Katharine Cornell and her company will arrive in Baltimore from New York City today to hold three dress, scene and light rehearsals of John van Druten's "Flowers of the Forest," prior to the first performance of this drama in America in the Maryland Theater in that city on Thursday night.

The rehearsals are strictly private.

The advance sale for the four performances to be given in Baltimore is $12,231.50, which probably is the record for the city for a half-week's engagement of a dramatic attraction.

Hundreds of Washington playgoers have ordered seats.

The New York premiere of "Flowers of the Forest" occurs in the Martin Beck Theater on Monday night of next week.

Karl Neilsen, who will direct the National Theater Players in their eleventh consecutive season, opening Monday night, April 29, was a Washington visitor from New York over the week-end. Naturally, he and Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National and the Players, went minutely into plans for the coming "little season" on E street. One of the objects of Mr. Neilsen's visit was to observe the work of the graduates of the Clifford Brooke Academy in their Sunday night performance in the National. He is said to have been particularly impressed by the talents of Edwins Wise, Dolly Slaughter and Jean Prince. Miss Wise has been engaged as a regular member of the Players.

Study in the Open.

Plans for a summer course at Glenora, on Lake Seneca, N. Y., are announced by the Studio of Theater Arts of Washington, presided over by Constance Connor Brown. The studio is just rounding out its first season with marked success in the Capital, due principally to the thorough understanding of and proficiency in her art possessed by Miss Brown.

According to present tentative plans, the studio group, established last October, will move to Glenora in July for a course of eight weeks of intensive training in acting and stagecraft. The daily schedule calls for training in voice, speech and acting technique. There will, of course, according to Miss Brown, be ample time out for swimming and canoeing on Lake Seneca and tennis on the nearby courts, as well as other forms of recreational diversion.

The studio, which attained some note this season by its productions of "The Silver Cord" and "The Circle," does not contemplate any public performance for the summer. It is, rather, the intent to bring a play back prepared for early fall presentation in the Capital.

Enrollment must be prompt in order that complete housing arrangements can be made prior to departure.

"You've gotta stop kicking our gong around," might be said to be the present motto of the Loew forces broadcasting amateur performances over Station WHN of New York. To that end, Carter Barron, Eastern division manager for Loew's, Inc., has been commissioned to see what he can do about it and has been haunting the patent and copyright offices ever since.

The idea is that WHN employs a gong of distinctive tone to announce the termination of those amateur acts that are deemed by the judges "not quite good enough." It is the radio counterpart of the "hook," familiar to those who were addicted to the old-time stage "amateur nights," or "talent test nights," as they were later called.

Imitation has become so insistent and so diverse that Louis K. Sidney, major domo of Loew's audible entertainment, has decided to safeguard himself against infringement.

So Carter Barron is trying to see what can be done about protectively registering with the Government a "bong" on the air. It is, he finds, sort of a tough problem.

After all, nobody patented that "hook!"

Heartfelt Condolence Note.

Well, it's your own fault. You never should have kicked that plug hat with the brick under it!

Brings a New Play to Capital

A graduate of William Allen White's celebrated Emporia (Kans.) Gazette and the New York Times on the newspaper end and a former avant courier for some of the theater's most distinguished artists, including Ethel Barrymore, Brock Pemberton sprang into quick fame as a stage producer with his Broadway hit, "Enter Madame." He has since produced such successes as "Strictly Dishonorable" and the current New York "sell-out," "Personal Appearance." Last night Mr. Pemberton opened "Ceiling Zero" in the National Theater here. A review of this new play, I hope, appears elsewhere on this page.

*Employes of Federal Air Lines.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is a hurried midnight thought that the word "zero" has no place in any appraisal of "Ceiling Zero," the new three-act play by Lieut. Comdr. Frank Wead, retired, presented last night for the first time on any stage in the National Theater, under the auspicious aegis of that discerning functionary of the theater, Brock Pemberton.

While it embodies probably as complete an exposition of the credo and philosophy of the airplane pilot and those veterans of aviation who have come down from the Great War, and before, as ever has been written, "Ceiling Zero" also possesses those priceless qualities of speed, punch, pep, humor and suspense that contributed, within recent recollection, to the immediate and overwhelming success of "Three Men on a Horse."

Dealing with topics that might not ordinarily be expected to appeal to the interest of feminine spectators, this audacious and soaring flight into the higher realms of sky-flying encompasses just enough of romantic interest, feminine allure and simple heart interest to make it universal in appeal and irresistible in climacteric and thrillingly dramatic effect.

Is Daring and High-Power.

I refer to this play as "audacious and soaring" because it is frankly daring in much of its by-play and dialogue and does ascend to those heights of drama—or perhaps melodrama is the better word—that may only be attained by a concerted "lift" on the part of author, director and cast.

It completely catches every implication of its exciting subject matter and whisks an audience into a sphere, if not stratosphere, of brittle, breezy and dynamic pretending that is seldom reached by the ordinary play.

While the scene of the three acts is restricted to the single setting of the operations office of the Federal Air Lines at Hadley Field, Newark, N. J., its action traverses the whole canopy of the heavens from Newark to Cleveland and Chicago.

The skill with which Author Wead has enlisted the dramatic possibilities of suggested action and psychological drama is extraordinary. Through the medium of radio messages, phone calls and cryptic dispatches we are made to feel the hazards, humors and tragedies of skies that are heavy, clear or so deeply banked in fog as to give full justification for the title the piece so nobly bears.

Three Former Aces.

The principal characters are three war-time aces, now engaged in the comparatively prosaic enterprises of those commercial fliers who carry the mails, passengers and express on designated and inviolable routes.

One has settled down sufficiently to dedicate his talents to the executive operation of the airport; another is one of his most trusted pilots, a man of family, devoted to his home life; the third, a playboy whose notion of guiding a ship is still to execute all the maneuvers of the dog fights on the Western Front, with a more intent eye upon the likelihood of executing all the more intricate maneuvers of the affaires de coeur made famous by Casanova and Don Juan.

From the philandering of Dizzy Davis, the aviator who still thinks flying is a "game;" the homely honesty and fidelity of Texas Clark to his job, his home and his former comrades and the penetrating vision of the ace become executive are derived elements of conflict, comedy and poignant pathos that provide "Ceiling Zero" with a breadth, a diversity and a gracious quality of contrast that are on a par with its zest, its fun and the final sacrificial gesture of its adventurous and retributive climax.

Characters Faultlessly Played.

These three pivotal characters are faultlessly played by Osgood Perkins, as the ace gone executive; John B. Litel, the irresponsible flying fool who has never grown up, and G. Albert Smith, as Texas. All three play with unfailing grasp of the requirements of their respective roles—Osgood Perkins as a director of a vast commercial enterprise who still retains the spirit of the early days in the air; Mr. Litel with an overwhelming ebullience that fairly sweeps one off his feet and Mr. Smith with a staunch and sturdy adherence to the quiet and imperishable virtues.

The Osgood Perkins of this assignment would hardly be recognized as the Osgood Perkins of the expressive gestures and classic performance of Moilere's "A School for Husbands," in which he was last seen here for the Theater Guild. He is here the crisp business executive, but not without a sense of humor. John Litel interprets his role with an enthusiasm that has not been matched since Sam Levene's performance of the avaricious race track grifter in "Three Men on a Horse." (This recurrent comparison is inevitable, since "Ceiling Zero" and "Three Men on a Horse" are based on identical qualities of surprise, superlative speed and suspense.)

Entire Cast Excels.

There are, of course, many others in the cast who contribute in large measure to the unequivocal success of one of the season's most spontaneous and most novel evenings in the theater.

Foremost among them are Margaret Perry in the role of Tommy Thomas, a fair share of the play's heart interest and the object of the suicidal Dizzy's ardent but futile affections; Hope Lawder as Tex Clark's wife; Al Stone, vice president of the Federal Air Lines, who never could catch the viewpoint of the practical fliers in his employ; John F. Hamilton, the demented janitor, victim of such a crackup as may happen at any time to any flier, and John Boruff, the radio operator, who does yeoman's service throughout the three acts.

As a matter of fact, there is not an inferior performance turned in by any of the players listed in the small-type cast at the head of this column.

Letter-Perfect First Night.

The first night performance of "Ceiling Zero," as nearly as a close observer in the fourth row could observe was letter-perfect. It was attended by a practically capacity house. It received eight wholehearted curtain calls at the conclusion of the final act and could have had that many more.

"Ceiling Zero," in short, is a hit and something decidedly to be seen before it gets out of town and refuses to come back for two or three years.

Congratulations to Mr. Wead, Mr. Pemberton, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Litel and all the rest. A grand job.

Concert by the Washington String Quartet in the Carlton Hotel. Program: Quartet, Op. 133, No. 1 (Henry K. Hadley), Prelude and Fugue (Leonore Michaelis), Quartet in E minor, Op. 59, No. 2 (Beethoven).

Bringing their spring series of concerts to a close, Milton Schwartz, Paul Brightenburg, George Wargo and Sidney Hamer presented two new works by American composers, played from manuscript. Had the composers been present they would have appreciated the excellent readings, for the young musicians had prepared the novelties with as much care as though the scores had come from the shelf of classics.

The quartet by Henry Kimball Hadley bears little resemblance to any of his compositions with which I am familiar and demonstrates that his versatility is not failing him. He always has been eclectic, never adhering to any one school, and this time he has essayed the idiom of his younger contemporaries, with a remarkable freshness of accent.

Yet there are no extravagancies either in harmony or form, for Mr. Hadley's music is invariably well-mannered and urbane. The opening allegro contains some harmonic piquancies, which strike one at first as surprising from his usually conservative pen, but they are not affectations of speech, for they are an integral part of his thematic scheme. The scherzo is notable for a fine atmospheric trio section and the entire work is vigorous and assertive. In melodic treatment and in the liveliness of invention, the quartet is thoroughly interesting.

Mr. Michaelis' Prelude and Fugue has merits unusual in the writing of a man to whom music is not a profession. The composer, I understand, is a biological chemist who finds relaxation in tonal experiments. Yet there is nothing coldly scientific in the construction or the content of his composition. On the contrary, the music is emotionally charged and imaginative in ideation, warmly colored harmonically and indubitably sincere. Its mood is thoughtful, almost brooding in the prelude, and it repays the listener with genuine poetic eloquence.

The second of Beethoven's "Rasumovski" quartets, always a welcome guest at any gathering of chamber music enthusiasts, was given an admirable reading, technically expert and emotionally satisfying in its animation.

Concert by the A Capella Choir of First Congregational Church in the Mayflower Hotel; Ruby Smith Stahl, conductor. Program: 18 choral numbers by Palestrina, Byrd, Niedt, Daniels, Richter, Cruger-Mueller, Maud Sewall, Christiansen, Panchenko - Engel, Rakhmaninov, Holst, Nikolski, Arkhangelski, Dickinson, Burleigh, Trowbridge and David Hugh Jones.

At this fifth annual Lenten concert, the A Cappella Choir offered devotional music sung in a reverential spirit before an audience which refrained from applause save at the intermissions in the program. In previous appearances this organization of 60 mixed voices has proved its status as one of the best choirs in Washington and on this occasion one can only repeat a commendation expressed before and note an increased efficiency in dynamic control.

Chronologically extensive, the program ranged from the sixteenth century to the twentieth, opening with William Byrd's "Ave Verum Corpus," a beautiful example of early part-writing. The first group of chorouses contained as well the inimitable "O Bone Jesu," by Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina, to represent a great period in ecclesiastical composition.

In the first section were heard Niedt's "In Mirth and Gladness," Richter's "The Creation" for male voices alone, Mabel Daniels' "The Christ Child," and the Cruger-Mueller "Now Thank We All Our God."

The second group began with Maud Sewall's setting of "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee," a chorus of moving melodic tenderness and skillful weaving of vocal lines. After it came Melius Christiansen's "In Dulci Jubilo," Carl Engel's fine arrangement of Panchenko's "Praise Ye the Lord," Rakhmaninov's "Glory to the Trinity," Gustav Holst's expert pastiche of mediaeval style, "Lullay My Liking," and Nikolski's "The Earth Is the Lord's."

Arkhangelski's stirring "Day of Judgment" opened the concluding group, which contained Clarence Dickinson's arrangement of "Bring a Torch, Jeanette;" Rakhmaninov's "Hymn of the Cherubim," Henry T. Burleigh's "Were You There," Trowbridge's "Grace Be Unto You" and a "Hosanna," by David Hugh Jones.

Hollywood — By Sidney Skolsky

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, April 2.

THERE is bigger drama on the set of "Men on Her Mind" than the dramatic scene Bette Davis and Alison Skipworth are playing, for sitting on a chair, watching, is Emmett Flynn. Flynn wanders from stage to stage at Warners. He looks on. Occasionally he plays a bit in a mob sequence. He is trying to make a comeback in pictures; and of the many on this comeback trail, he is one of the few who stands a genuine chance. Emmett Flynn was a big director before he got into that trouble. When talking about it, Flynn refers to it as "that trouble." He was at the big house known as San Quentin, he was on a road gang, and now he is out on parole. "When you write about it," says Flynn, "please give Jack Warner the thanks. If it wasn't for him I wouldn't be out. I had to have a job to be released, and he took me and put me on a weekly payroll here." Thanks.

* * * *

Flynn wanders about the Warner studio, getting acquainted with the new stars and picture making again. He has been promised a chance to direct in about two or three months. He was a successful director before that trouble. He directed the original movie productions of "A Connecticut Yankee," "East Lynne," "The Man Who Came Back" and "The Count of Monte Cristo," to mention only a few. He was getting a salary of $3,500 a week. Now his salary, but that doesn't matter—it's a weekly salary. He's out among people he knows, and he has a fighting chance to come back. He is directing himself and playing the lead in a human everyday story, which could be called, "The Man Who Came Back." This was once his big success, and now—well, he's out trying and hoping, hoping.

* * * *

GRACE MOORE is recording her song, "Love Me Forever," for the picture of that name in the very setting in which you will see her sing it on the screen. She is in her apartment and playing the piano in this same apartment, but out of the focus of the camera is another piano. Herr Director Victor Schertzinger sits playing the musical accompaniment. Schertzinger wrote the song, "Love Me Forever," and he always plays his own music when Miss Moore records it. Grace Moore finishes singing, and her husband, Valentin Parera, waves his head to show that he wasn't satisfied. He is not only her husband, but her severest music critic. However, in a few minutes, Miss Moore will be able to be her own critic. The playback will be ready and she will be able to sit on the set, listen to herself sing and judge for herself. Pictures have this advantage over the drama and the opera.

* * * *

The man in the sound booth gives the signal that he is ready. Grace Moore sits in a chair. Grace Moore, from the sound booth, starts singing "Love Me Forever." It is interesting to watch Grace Moore listening to Grace Moore singing. She moves in her chair. Her eyes light up when she hits a difficult note correctly. Her fingers toy with her chin. When the song is over, she agrees with her husband. She goes back to the piano to record it again. This procedure continues for over an hour. Miss Moore is singing this song in a low G, the lowest she ever sang. She is practically crooning. At last, Grace Moore, listening to Grace Moore sing, is satisfied. This is the take you will hear. Miss Moore explained her selection. "If I feel the same emotion listening to the song," said Grace Moore, "that I feel while singing it, then it's good."

* * * *

WALLACE BEERY has his small daughter, Carol Ann, playing a small role in his new flicker, "China Seas." Carol Ann always wants to be around with Beery, has been a frequent visitor on the set when he worked in previous pictures, and lately has expressed the desire to be an actress. Perhaps it was because she saw too many Shirley Temple pictures she asked to be an actress, and here she is playing a role. Carol Ann and Wally have great fun on the set—it's just a great big toy for them. The first day of work, Beery told Carol Ann to stay in the sound booth, and then he proceeded to sing to her: "Carol Ann is full of fleas . . . Carol Ann is full of fleas." At first she didn't know where the voice was coming from, and it was such fun . . . Such fun, for Carol Ann and Wally.

Busby Berkeley had difficulties with the white horses he uses in a dance number in "Caliente," especially with the star horse, the one which Dolores Del Rio rides.

* * * *

He finally had to do the scene in pantomime, for the music excited the horses. Finally, after trying and trying, Berkeley became exasperated, and in full view of the entire company, he walked up to the star horse, shook his finger before the animal's face, and shouted: "Why can't you get this scene right?" Berkeley discovered that it is harder to teach a horse than a chorine or a star. And after hours of trying, he got the scene perfect, and then the star horse spoiled it by ad libbing.

Fund Campaign For Symphony Yields Results

Augmented Program Now Assured; Drive Will Be Quietly Pressed.

The augmented program of the National Symphony Orchestra—to include summer concerts, more regular and children's concerts and an increase in wages for the musicians—is assured, it was announced yesterday at the luncheon meeting of the orchestra's campaign committee.

Dr. William McClellan, who presided, said that while the full goal of $100,000 had not been reached he felt safe in stating that it would be possible to carry out the new program. He said that various committee chairmen had advised him that additional gifts were anticipated and that the work would go on quietly until the entire sum has been obtained.

It was announced by Dr. McClellan that the campaign headquarters at the Carlton Hotel will be discontinued. Further activities in the campaign "clean-up" will center at the orchestra's office at the Woodward Building. It was decided by the committee chairman to hold a meeting on Tuesday, April 16, for additional reports.

At the meeting yesterday Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the orchestra, expressed his gratitude to all of the workers for their efforts in the drive. A similar expression was made by Leland Harrison, president of the orchestra association, on behalf of the board of directors.

Laurence Rubel, chairman of the publicity committee, reported that his group's success was due to the co-operation of the newspapers. Mrs. Reeve Lewis, reporting for the association's committee, advised that more than 1,500 persons had contributed through this group. Mrs. Harold Marsh reported an excellent response from Government workers.

Increased interest in the orchestra was shown from the results of contributions through the Army committee, reported by Mrs. Barton K. Yount, and through the Navy committee, reported by Mrs. Emory Land. Mrs. Oliver Strunk told of 214 contributions from business houses, and John Kennedy reported excellent results of the national committee.

Trulio and Nelson Are Eliminated in Handball Singles Upsets

Aces of West Turn Back Favorites

Atcheson Is Impressive in Beating Swartz at Central 'Y.'

By John R. Vosburgh.

A TOWERING pair of huskies from the West threw the National A. A. U. handball championships, at the Central Y. M. C. A., into a topsy-turvy state yesterday afternoon as the singles competition went through the second round.

Executing a brace of upsets the like of which the annual tournament has rarely seen at such an early stage, George DiRe, 190-pound business man from Indianapolis, eliminated Angelo Trulio, former champion and a finalist last year, while Joseph Platak, of Chicago, ousted the veteran George Nelson, of Baltimore, former National Y. M. C. A. champion, in straight games.

DiRe, standing well over 6 feet, had his favored rival from the metropolis almost continually on the defense. The little New Yorker found little opportunity to use his customary aggressive tactics, but staged a brilliant rally in the third and final game when trailing 17 to 8, only to lose it, 21 to 17, and with it, the match. The final scores were 21 to 13, 3 to 21 and 21 to 17.

Atcheson Beats Swartz.

Jack Swartz, of the Jewish Community Center, the only surviving Washington entry, and former District champion, gave a creditable account of himself before losing to the defending champion, Sam Atcheson, of Memphis, 21-12 and 21-10.

While Atcheson was playing comparatively under raps, disdaining so much as to remove his sweat-shirt, Schwartz gave local followers something to talk about by making some apparently impossible "gets" in the face of the blinding offensive of the marvel from Memphis, overwhelming favorite to win his third straight title. In the first game, Schwartz matched his opponent point for point to 7-7 before Atcheson began knocking off aces in rapid-fire fashion.

Of the eight survivors, four are Westerners, three from the East and one from the South. In addition to DiRe, Platak and Atcheson, the other quarter finalists are Dan Marble, the chesty cop from San Francisco; Dick Bruck, of the City A. C., of New York; Al Hobleman, of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A.; Jack Srenco, of the St. Louis Y. M. C. A., and Joe McKaraher, of Germantown, Pa. The quarter finals will be held Friday night.

Trulio Is Outplayed.

The defeat of Nelson was scarcely less expected than that of Trulio. Despite his 39 years, the Baltimorian, who won the national Y. M. C. A. championship in 1933, representing the Washington Y, has been playing in top form, but it was not good enough to turn back his young Chicago adversary. The Windy City ace had an effective kill and a hard drive which gave him the upper hand throughout. A stubborn stand in the first game went to naught after the three-quarter point, when Platak began hitting out in unbeatable style.

DiRe characterized himself as a potential finalist by his crafty play built around a dead-corner kill in the right-hand sector of the fore court. Combining this with a system of high-bouncing tactics to keep the dangerous Trulio in the back court, the Indiana star was able to hold the offensive virtually from start to finish.

Singles (Second Round).

Sam Atcheson (Memphis Y. M. C. A.) defeated Jack Schwartz (Washington Jewish Community Center), 21—12, 21—10; Dan Marble (San Francisco Police Department) defeated William Maurer (St. Paul Y. M. C. A.), 21—3, 21—3; Richard Bruck (City A. C., New York) defeated Karl Walter (Cleveland Y. M. C. A.), 21—17, 16—21, 21—8; Al Hobleman (Baltimore Y. M. C. A.) defeated E. W. Benson (Salt Lake City, Deseret Gymnasium), 21—13, 21—10; Joseph Platak (Chicago Community Recreation Center) defeated George Nelson (Baltimore Y. M. C. A.), 21—13, 21—10; Jack Srenco (St. Louis Y. M. C. A.) defeated W. Maher (Cleveland Y. M. C. A.), 21—6, 21—5; J. McKaraher (Germantown, Pa., Y. M. C. A.) defeated William McCarthy (Chicago), 21—14, 21—13; George DiRe (Indianapolis A. C.) defeated Angelo Trulio (New York A. C.), 21—13, 3—21, 21—17.

Wood Is Ready For Record Run

Miss America X Displays Speed in Workout.

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., April 2.—Gar Wood opened up his Miss America X's 7,400 horsepower today for the first time over Biscayne Bay and called for a measured mile of water.

The famous speed boat driver said he would attempt to break his own world record of 124.86 miles an hour, "in all probability" Saturday, weather permitting.

The veteran speedster avoided estimates of the speed of Miss America X but he did say:

"You can say we equaled, or bettered, the salt water world record of 111.71 made here three or four years ago in Miss America IX."

Jones Brings High Hopes To Sooners

Advent of New Gridiron Mentor Is Hailed as Forecast of Victory.

By the Associated Press.

NORMAN, Okla., April 2.—Soonerland's perennially denied hope for an all-victorious football team is flaming to new heights with the expectation that Lawrence (Biff) Jones, famous coach of Army and Louisiana State teams, will come to the University of Oklahoma.

Since 1920, when the Sooners won the championship of the old Missouri Valley Conference, the big Re dand White teams have been in the running, but never on top.

As a result, the demand of alumni and students for a winner has made coaching at O. U. temporary work, since the "wolves" finally unhorsed Bennie Owen, "the grand old man" of Oklahoma football.

Huey's Alma Mater.

Jones, who sought a transfer after a tiff with Huey Long, who wanted to be "Kingfish" of Louisiana grid affairs as well as State, will find himself alding Long's alma mater if he comes to Soonerland, for it was here Huey got his start in law.

Even Bennie Owen, whose Sooner teams from 1905 to 1926 made "aerial circus" history, giving Oklahoma its only all-victorious teams, in 1911, 1915, and 1918, as well as the Missouri Valley title in 1920, had trouble satisfying the grandstand quarterbacks before he retired from the field to become director of athletics.

Ad Lindsey, now head coach at Kansas, couldn't produce a champion although his teams finished "in the money" in the Big Six. During his five years his teams were second only to those of Dana X. Bible, of Nebraska.

Hardage's Hopes High.

Lewie Hardage, whose three-year tenure will end with the expected advent of Jones, came with the words "give us three years and we'll build a football machine of which the university may be proud."

His teams finished in the first division and for next year, Hardage's hopes were high.

"We'll have a winner next year," he predicted a few weeks ago. "We've the greatest bunch of sophomores I ever saw."

"What about Nebraska?" someone asked.

"I just wish all our games next fall were against Nebraska," Hardage rejoined.

If Hardage's forecast is true, it will add another ironic note to the Sooner grid picture. Jones will be able to remain at O. U. under War Department orders probably only one season.

Benny Loving Named To Charlottesville Post

Benny Loving, diminutive Virginia golfer who has competed in numerous events in Washington and vicinity, including the National Capital Open at Kenwood, has been appointed professional at Farmington Country Club, Charlottesville. Loving will assume his new duties this week.

His place at Petersburg, Va., will be filled by Bud Carroll, former pro at the Crater course, Petersburg.

Loving made the winter swing with the professional stars to California, where he finished in the money in several tournaments.

Local Golfers Gain in Play At Pinehurst

Lunn, Davidson Advance as Two Favorites Are Eliminated.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 2.—Two Washington golfers, Dick Lunn and Dick Davidson, both of Chevy Chase Club, today advanced to the second round of the North and South amateur golf championship after a day of hectic golf which witnessed the unexpected elimination of two of the favorites, Dick Chapman and Jack Ryerson, and the 1932 champion, M. Pierpont Warner.

Lunn, former District titleholder, put out Bob Harlow, of St. Petersburg, Fla., 1 up, while Davidson by the same margin upset Warner, the one-time Yale golf star.

Frank Allen, former Georgetown Prep School student, who won the Washington metropolitan prep school title last year, eliminated Morgan Sargent, of Quincy, Mass., 5 and 3.

Chapman lost to Johnny Johnson, of Lumberton, N. C., and Howard Tryon, of Elmira, N. Y., played sub-par golf to eliminate Ryerson.

Meanwhile the defending champion and heavy favorite, George T. Dunlap, jr., advanced easily by trouncing J. E. Cooker, of Providence, R. I., 6 and 5, and Ray Lenehan, of Providence, medalist, defeated Bob Lowery, of Shamokin, Pa.

Virginia's two entries, Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk, and Tom Somerville, of Farmington, went to the second round. McCarthy defeated Jim Fownes, of Pittsburgh, 4 and 3, and Somerville upset Bobby Knowles, Boston star, 6 and 5.

Tomorrow's pairings:

Lunn vs. Lenehan; Clemson vs. Clark; McMullen vs. Johnson; McCarthy vs. Blue; Barbour vs. Dunlap; Wooten vs. Tryon; Knowles vs. Lynch; Davidson vs. Allen.

Jones Is 6-1 Favorite Despite Loss of Form

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 2.—Bob Jones, still playing the part of the genial Southern host with more pronounced success than golf, may be the magnet that has attracted so renowned a field of shotmakers for the second annual Augusta National Invitation Tournament, but his long-time rival, Gene Sarazen, is the target they will all have to worry about when the firing begins Thursday.

In the midst of a general assault upon Old Man Par today, with 66 professionals and amateurs answering the roll call, Sarazen cracked the course's stubborn resistance with a 67, his third sub-par round in four days.

Gene has registered successive grounds of 65, 72, 67, 67 for a 72-hole total of 271. This is 17 under par for a layout that Sarazen himself concedes to be one of the greatest tests of golf in the United States.

McDonald Cards 67.

There were a number of other crackling practice rounds, including a 67 by the veteran Bob McDonald, of Chicago, and two sensational performances by Johnny Dawson, a "business man" amateur who carded 67 and 69 for a brisk day's work-out, but Sarazen's consistently brilliant shot-making led to his rating tonight as the pronounced choice of the experts to win, even though he was still running second to Jones in the price list of local bookmakers.

Southern sentiment, measured by actual cash wagered, was still potent enough to make Jones a 6-to-1 choice, with Sarazen next at 7 to 1. Horton Smith, Paul Runyan, Ed Dudley, Henry Picard, Craig Wood, Tommy Armour, Harry Cooper and Olin Dutra, the national open champion, ranged from 10 to 15 to 1 on the pricemakers' slate. Meanwhile it was estimated close to $8,000, nearly double the amount handled last year, would be distributed through the tournament pool.

Jones, playing today with Ed Dudley in a practice match with Paul Runyan and Horton Smith, showed some improvement by carding a 72, even par, but the former world champion's game is still a full brassie shot away from the consistency he will need to challenge the top-ranking professionals seeking the majority portion of $5,000 in prize money.

Malone Stars As Yankees Top Braves

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 2. Although Pat Malone pitched one-run, four-hit ball the first five innings in his American League debut, the New York Yankees were forced to come from behind with a three-run rally in the ninth to defeat the Boston Braves, 7 to 5, in the final of their nine-game exhibition series today.

After Malone had left the mound, the Braves fell on Jimmy Deshong for four runs and six hits, with Wally Berger hitting a homer with two on in the seventh to put the National Leaguers in the lead.

Leo Mangum, who followed Ed Brandt and Ben Cantwell on the mound for the Braves, was the victim of the Yanks' ninth-inning rally, in which Hill and Selkirk cracked out doubles, and Rolfe, Dickey and Walker singled.

Garden Is Told To Sign Foe For Boxer

Must Match Schmeling or Baer With Jimmy Braddock for Date.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The New York State Athletic Commission today tossed the heavyweight boxing championship problem back into Madison Square Garden's lap.

A week ago the commission took charge of the situation by designating James J. Braddock, the Jersey City veteran, the leading contender for the title, and decreed that before Max Schmeling could meet Champion Max Baer in this State at least he must first meet and defeat Braddock.

Today the commission ordered the Garden's matchmaker, James J. Johnston, to produce a signed contract for either a Braddock-Schmeling bout or a championship Baer-Braddock contest by April 16, at which time dates for important outdoor shows will be apportioned by the fathers.

"We're giving the Garden a break," Chairman John J. Phelan said. "We could have made them put their cards on the table today. Now they have two weeks to either line up Schmeling for a trial against Braddock or produce a contract for a Baer-Braddock championship bout.

"We are anxious to have the championship bout held in New York State, and by giving the Garden two weeks' grace we feel we're doing our part. There's plenty of time left for Schmeling to come over here, train for a fight with Braddock, and, assuming he wins, go back into training for a fight with Baer. However, it begins to look like Schmeling has no intention of fighting in this country."

Baer Scornful Of Joe Louis' Ring Ability

Champ Terms Detroiter Too Inexperienced; Sees Carnera the Victor.

By the United Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—It came out today what Maxie Baer thinks of Joe Louis as a contender for his heavyweight crown—and it isn't much.

To him the weaving, slashing Detroit Negro is just another inexperienced youngster who had better mind his training manners between now and June 19, or else.

The "or else," Baer thinks, will be a nifty and instructive punching lesson from Primo Carnera, whom he meets in New York on that date.

"Why," Baer scoffs, "Louis is a third or fourth rater and no better than my brother Buddy. Who has he fought? His best knockout victim was Charlie Massera, and you wouldn't call Massera a contender. He's a good puncher, but not a murderous one."

Sees Carnera Victor.

After demonstrating what he would do to Louis if they ever met in the ring, Baer turned to the Carnera fight.

"Louis was overmatched for that one," he said, "and I don't think he can beat the Italian. You can take it from me that nobody's going to knock Carnera out with one punch. The big spaghetti juggler will keep getting off that floor.

"And say, I'm not so sure that a short puncher like Louis can do much with Carnera. Primo's so big he can wear a smaller guy down and Louis will have trouble shooting through his long flailing arms.

Baer "Short" of Money.

"I beat Carnera last summer because I could guess every move he was going to make with that long paw of his. Louis isn't that experienced."

But the $1,000,000 gate that Mike Jacob's, of New York's Twentieth Century Sporting Club, predicts for a Baer-Louis title match if Louis flattens Carnera sounds just dandy to Max.

Baer, he'll be frank with you, is having a slight touch of pecuniary embarrassment and right now the money's the thing. If Louis wants a title match, he can have it with Baer's compliments, providing Max gets the bigger check.

Harris Picks Whitehill To Open

Southpaw to Face A's in First Game; Burke Is Next in Line.

Nat Manager May Call Upon Rookies to Share Box Duties.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 2.—Manager Bucky Harris was given pause to reflect upon the state of his Washington ball club today when rain confined the Nats to their hotel, and out of his musings was gleaned the fact that the familiar and portly figure of Earl Whitehill would be on the pitching mound in the opening game of the pennant race.

Harris acknowledged that Whitehill not only is the farthest advanced of all his pitchers, but that the black-browed southpaw is manifesting mid-season form in the short tours of duty he has been asked to take.

As for the other pitchers, Harris shudders at the realization that the opening of the season is only 13 days away. Chief among the backward lot are Walter Stewart, who reported 16 days late at training camp; Monte Weaver, whose early performances have been consistently bad; Bump Hadley, who is nursing a sore arm, and Jack Russell, who has been ineffective in his every appearance.

Bob Burke is fated to share the burden of the early pitching duties with Whitehill. The lean southpaw for the first time in the last half-dozen seasons has escaped his perennial sore shoulder and is apparently fit.

Turns to Rookies.

Unless his other veterans make a speedy recovery, Harris will turn to the rookies, Ed Linke, Leon Pettit and Henry Coppola, as the solution of his pitching problems during the early days of the flag race.

Rain which has forced the cancellation of three of the Nats' last four scheduled games has dissipated all doubt that no Washington pitcher will work the full nine innings before the opening game with the Athletics in Washington on April 16. Seven innings is the most Harris will ask any of his pitchers to work in the intervening exhibition games and the first seven-inning assignment will go to Whitehill who will pitch against the Cubs at Chicago on Saturday. After that game, Whitehill will motor to Washington with his family to await the Nats' arrival.

"Whitehill trains in his own way," said Harris, "and I see no reason to interrupt him. He is always the most diligent worker in camp and he is smart enough to set his own pace. He's been doing it for years. It was the same way when he was with me at Detroit, and he has never failed to be ready for the season's opening. He will be ready this year, too, I don't fear that."

Irked by the morning rain that transformed the Nashville club's park into a miniature lake, Harris hiked over to the Vanderbilt University campus nearby in an effort to find dry ground where he could turn his athletes out for the day, but the rain had done a thorough job of it in Nashville.

Walter Stewart and Johnny Stone, the native Tennesseans on the Nats' roster, held court for their friends in the hotel today. From Crossville came a delegation to visit Stewart, but it was exceeded by the contingent from Mulberry, which renewed friendships with Stone.

Pleased with the results obtained by Trainer Lee Jensen, of the Chattanooga club, Pitcher Bump Hadley asked and received permission to remain in Chattanooga instead of accompanying the Nats to Louisville and Chicago. He will rejoin the club in Washington.

Eager to learn to what extent he can rely on Ed Linke in the opening days of the season, Harris will send the young right-hander to the mound in tomorrow's game here. He will share the pitching with Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart.

Frederick Loop To Meet Friday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 2.—Michael J. Thompson, Emmitsburg, president, has called the fifteenth annual meeting of the Frederick County Baseball League for Friday, April 12, at which time the league will reorganize and make preliminary plans for the 1935 season.

The eight teams — Frederick, Union Bridge, Thurmont, Brunswick, New Windsor, Middletown, Woodsboro and Taneytown—that finished the 1934 season will be ready to face the barrier again. Application has been received from Westminster for a berth.

A number of the players have regular places on college teams and on this account the season will not open until the students return home for their summer vacation.

Changes to Be Discussed at Meeting in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 2.—Armed with ideas, reports, charts, scientific data and arguments, more than 200 college and high school basket ball coaches came to Chicago tonight for their annual hardwood clinic.

The meeting, held by the National Association of Basket Ball Coaches, will open tomorrow and close Thursday, so that recommendations adopted can be placed before a meeting of the general rules committee in New York next Saturday and Sunday.

About 50 rule-change suggestions were ready to be placed before the association, but only those involving the center jump and the somewhat hazardous pivot post were expected to be acted upon in the Chicago and New York meetings.

Sarazen Replaces Bob Jones As Chief Pre-Tourney Threat

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 2.—In the old, brave days that you and I remember, it used to be Bob Jones who, like a rattler, gave warning before striking. Jones would tear off a couple of 67's in practice. The rattle would penetrate to the clubhouse, the locker room, the hotel and even to neighboring towns, and the pros and the amateurs would shiver in their shoes because it mean that Jones was hot.

Down here it hasn't been Jones, but the "Little Sardine," who has been making those terrifying warning noises. The little sardine is the pet name they have around here for that squat, brown, powerful, Eyetalian gentleman, name of Gene Sarazen. The sardine came down here and played the course in 65 the first time out, one under Bob Jones' record. And he was playing with Jones when he made it.

Then Sarazen played three more rounds, on three more days and his scores were 72, 67, 67 for four-round total of 271. Now, gentlemen, you will allow that that is rattling as is rattling. Of course there was no tournament pressure on, but he still had to hit the ball off the tee and knock it down into the hole.

And then, just for luck, yesterday the little sardine was playing nine holes to amuse himself, and he stood on the ninth tee. A hundred and fifty yards down the alley is a tall pine tree, and in the branches of the pine tree sat a big, old crow. The big, old crow laughed and cawed a little when Sarazen came up to bat, because he figured he was a pretty smart crow. Three seconds later that crow was on his way home, wondering how he was going to be able to explain to the missus

Scribes Select Indians to Win; Yankees Rated Second in Poll

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Major League baseball experts put themselves "on the spot" today, picking the Cleveland Indians, who finished third last year, to capture the 1935 American League pennant.

In one of the closest ballotings in the poll conducted by the Associated Press for the past nine years, Manager Walter Johnson's Tribe received the largest number of first place votes cast by 76 baseball writers and editors.

Tigers Overlooked.

Although the Detroit Tigers—last year's winner—went through the 1934 campaign to victory without a serious injury and will put virtually the same team on the field this year, they received 13 votes to finish first, barely enabling them to nose out the strongly bolstered Boston Red Sox by one vote. Philadelphia's Athletics drew three votes to lead the league.

The Tigers polled 35 second place votes. The Yankees were second with 18 and the Indians third with 17.

Detroit was the only club figured by the writers to wind up the season somewhere in the first division of the league. Besides drawing 35 second place votes they also polled 25 for third and three for fourth. Three writers voted for the Indians to land in fifth place and six gave the Yankees votes to finish in the same spot.

The Athletics polled votes for every position while the Red Sox were picked for every one except eighth. The last three places went to the Washington Senators—last year's choice—to finish sixth, the St. Louis Browns to finish seventh and the Chicago White Sox for the cellar.

Daily Double Mutuel Is $356.10

Florida. Betting on the individual races kept in step, for more than $475,000 was played for the day as compared with $242,900 on opening day last year.

The losing combinations in the daily double coming off Lookabout, the first winner, were: Flying Gypsy, $190.70; Sun Abbot, $181; McDonald H., $971; Impromptu, $27.70; Maddening, $150.40; Brains, $44.50; Jim Moss, $277.30; Prince Drake, $24.30; Red Vamp, $763.50; Dona Dulcin, $464.50; Jobs Dido, Mortimer Mahoney, in charge of the mutuel department, said that the play was the largest on opening day of any track. Thirty betters collected the small fortune.

Although the track was heavy as the result of recent rains, conditions overhead were ideal and close finishes and victories of both favorites and longshots served to make up for the slow times recorded in the races.

Star Porter Second.

Star Porter was installed the favorite in the Inaugural Handicap, a dash of 5½ furlongs for 3-year-olds and upward, and the Trueman-trained horse made a game but futile bid to offset the stretch rush of Dogmata, which accounted for the $2,000 added contest by a margin of three parts of a length.

Star Porter, running on his favorite soft race track, looked the part of a winner as the field reached the first turn. Maurice Peters, the leading American jockey last year, was hustling in the saddle. He had a daylight lead at the head of the stretch but along came Dogmata. Johnny Bejshak, the veteran rider, was making full use of every ounce of energy at the command of the Vanderbilt horse and slowly but surely he moved up on Star Porter. At the eighth pole the rivals were running head and head but Dogmata drew away as Star Porter tired nearing the wire. Four lengths back, came Dreel to save the third money.

Lookabout Winner.

Lookabout was the first winner of the Maryland season, after leading a pack of maiden juvenile fillies over the 4-furlong course. Jockey Merritt had the mound and he made every post a winning one. Festoon, from the Greentree stable, made a bid in the stretch, but Merritt applied the whip and the filly bounced out to score by five lengths. Patsy Begone, a keen figure in the early running, was third. Lookabout paid a $9.20 mutuel.

Acautaw, which won the first race of his career here three years ago on opening day, proved the first winning favorite of the season in the second race. The son of Trojan, at home on the off track, was given a keen battle by Sisowen and Mad Beth, the ones to complete the money bracket. Acautaw always had a short lead, but it was not until the final strides that C. McTague, the rider, was able to draw out. The margin was a length and a half and the price was $4.60.

Sparky, the property of R. H. Heighe, scored the first victory for horses that wintered in the North. In a driving finish in which Jockey Bobby Jones gave plenty of help, Sparky came up on the outside to outgame Brains and Dona Dulcin, the latter a field proposition.

Prince Drake Fails.

Prince Drake, the favorite, was nowhere in particular, while the well-backed Impromptu refused to break and merely galloped in behind the field. Sparky paid $35.90 in his own right and in the daily double hook-up with Lookabout, the winner of the first race, he supplied a $356.10 pay-off.

Sons of Epinard ran first and second in the fourth race, and the favorite players made it two victories in a row. Good Harvest, from the B. B. Stable and ridden by Silvio Coucci, was the winner, with Legume second and Dancing Doll third. Good Harvest, a Florida campaigner, asserted his superiority in the stretch run. Good Harvest was the first odds-on winner, paying $3.80. Enthusiasm, the early pace setter, faded out of the picture at the stretch turn.

Two substitial mutuels completed the program. Miss Careful scored a courageous victory in the sixth to pay $15.60 and earn a riding double for Jockey Silvio Coucci and Pencader, a field horse, took the finale at a $25.70 pay-off.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACAUTAW, $4.60, $3.50, $2.40; SISOWEN, $4.10, $3.20; MAD BETH, $3.60.

ACAUTAW, unruly at the post, broke alertly. He set an even pace while racing on the outside in the early stages, then, responding courageously under punishment, drew clear in the stretch run. SISOWEN moved up fast on the inside in the run down the back stretch and, saving the most ground the entire trip, outlasted MAD BETH in the final drive. MAD BETH, prominent all the way, held on gamely under punishment the last furlong. PRINCE POMPEY, hard urged all the way, closed stoutly in the stretch run. BROADSWORD broke forwardly, but dropped out of contention rounding the turn. He saved ground entering the stretch and was gaining steadily at the finish. TEDDY CARL, away slowly, gradually improved his position on the outside to the furlong pole, but then faltered.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:52. Winner, R. H. Hughes' b. f. (4), by Purdar II—Xania. Trained by J. A. Boniface. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:17 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARKY, $35.90, $20.80, $10.50; BRAINS, $6.10, $4.80; DONA DULCIN, $5.30.

SPARKY, away forwardly, gradually improved her position on the extreme outside of the leaders in the early running, assumed command in the stretch, when called upon and outlasted BRAINS when the final issue came. BRAINS, off slowly, worked his way forward steadily the first half-mile. He came to the inside entering the stretch and, closing gamely under punishment, was wearing the winner down in the final strides. DONA DULCIN broke in stride and displayed good speed, racing PRINCE DRAKE into defeat in the early stages. She responded gamely under punishment when challenged, but faltered in the closing strides. SUN ABBOT and MADDENING broke very slowly. Both closed big gaps and were going fastest of all at the finish. PRINCE DRAKE retired after going a half-mile. IMPROMPTU refused to break when the start came.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $356.10.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Graded Handicap, Class "B." For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:22. Off at 4:23. Winner, B. B. Stable's ch. g. (3), by Epinard—Blossom. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:15 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOD HARVEST, $3.80, $2.80, $2.40; LEGUME, $4.20, $3.10; DANCING DOLL, $3.30.

GOOD HARVEST, slow to get going, began to better his position along the inner rail the final three furlongs and, wearing the leaders down through the stretch, won going away under strong pressure. LEGUME, a forward factor all the way, took a brief lead in the stretch, but then was no match for the winner in the final drive. DANCING DOLL, going in near pursuit of the leaders in the early stages, faltered the final eighth-mile. BROWN TWIG and DANCING CLOUD finished stoutly. ENTHUSIASM displayed keen speed for a half-mile, but then stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $2,000 added. The Bowie Inaugural Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:56. Off at 4:58½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's ch. g. (4), by Dozer—Annie Jordan. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $1,500; second, $400; third, $200; fourth, $100. Two-dollar mutuels paid—†DOGMATA, $13.80, $4.90, $5.80; STAR PORTER, $3.60, $3.10; †DREEL, $5.80.

DOGMATA, slightly restrained and going wide the early stages, improved his position steadily when called upon, wore STAR PORTER down through the stretch and won going clear. STAR PORTER displayed keen speed and raced DREEL into submission the opening half-mile. He drew out entering the stretch, but then faltered slightly as if short when the real test came. DREEL, used up forcing the pace, weakened in the final furlong, but continued gamely under punishment to outlast SILENT SHOT. The latter gradually bettered his position on the extreme outside the last three furlongs and was going gamely at the finish. EVERGOLD, dwelt when the start came and was off slowly. He gained steadily while going wide the final half-mile and finished going fastest of all. LADFIELD, on the inside the early stages, came wide entering the stretch and was unable to improve his position the final furlong. WISE PRINCE retired the last quarter-mile. ALL FORLORN displayed a flash of early speed, but was done for after going three furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:27. Off at 5:28½. Winner, W. Elliott's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CAREFUL, $15.60, $6.60, $3.00; POPO, $10.40, $3.50; GOLDEN WAY, $2.50.

MISS CAREFUL, going forwardly on the outside under slight restraint all the way, closed with determination when placed under punishment through the stretch and outlasted her opposition to the final drive. POPO, prominent and forcing the pace all the way, took a brief lead entering the stretch and made a game effort when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's bid. GOLDEN WAY, rated off the pace and going wide the early stages, stole through on the inside the last quarter-mile and moved up menacingly at the furlong pole, but then faltered in the closing strides. ALADDINS DREAM, a trailer the opening half-mile, closed ground when called upon, but was unable to overhaul the leaders. ILCHESTER displayed good speed the early running, but weakened after six furlongs and was not persevered with. OLD JUDGE was eased up in the stretch run.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:58. Off at 6:00. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PENCADER (field), $25.70, $7.50, $4.20; ATMOSPHERE, $10.10, $6.70; DANCING BOY, $4.00.

PENCADER, stoutly restrained until leaving the back stretch, moved up on the outside determinedly when called upon and, continuing courageously under punishment through the stretch, outlasted ATMOSPHERE in the final drive. ATMOSPHERE, away forwardly, raced CONVENTIONAL into defeat in the early running and drew out rounding the lower turn, but then faltered in the stretch run. DANCING BOY, hard urged and well up all the way, made a game effort through the stretch, but was unable to reach the leaders. AHMED, steadied off the early pace, moved up strongly rounding the last turn, but then weakened when straightened out into the stretch. BELL MAN closed some ground. FRIEND WHITEY retired after going six furlongs. CONVENTIONAL stopped badly after displaying early speed.

Garibaldi and R. Dusek to Grapple

Rough Customers Feature Wrestling Show on Tomorrow Night.

By George Considine.

HEAR YE! Hear Ye! All youse citizens, riot squads, police scout cars, Army Navy, Marine Corps, Boy Scouts, etc., take warning.

Promoter Joe Turner promises all those who enter the portals of Washington Auditorium tomorrow night the roughest rassle card of the indoor season. Yup, if we are to believe reports emanating from Poppa Joe's, the Dusek-Garibaldi tete-a-tete will be the acme of virility.

The mat game's beef, bruising Eyetalyan chompeen, Gino da Garibald, rates, according to expert opinion, as Public Rough-house No. 1. Bearing so pretentious an appellation and equipped to defend his holdings, Garibaldi looms as a threat to outmuscle the famed Nebraska Wildcat.

Nothing need be said of the prowess of Rude Rudy Dusek. He and his Rocking Chair Split hold have been an integral part of mat maneuvers for nearly 15 years. During that time, the dean of the grapple racket's most prolific family has amassed a fortune and incidentally proven over and over his right to occupy the inner circle.

In what has all the ear-marks of a blood and thunder semifinal, brother Emil Dusek squares off with Blue Sun Jennings, the tough Injun. Undoubtedly a treat for firewater eyes, as you might say.

And, if you must know, the 30-minute prelims offer Andy Rascher and Sure Mike Romano, not to mention the Irish Flipsmith, youthful Jack Donovan, and husky Frank Bronowicz.

Baltimore, Washington A. A. U. Champs Clash at Tech Tonight

Sholl's Five To Oppose Stonewall

145-Pounders to Clash; Sherwood, Leland Girls to Battle.

A TRIPLE-HEADER basket ball program, featuring the best 145-pound and unlimited teams in Baltimore and Washington and the two girl finalists in the District A. A. U. Tournament, is scheduled tonight at Tech High School's gym.

Clashing in the topliner at 9:30 o'clock will be Sholl's whirlwind quintet and the Stonewall Democratic Club of Baltimore, South Atlantic A. A. U. unlimited champions.

At 8:30 the Twin Oaks Black Hawks, 145-pound District A. A. U. titleholders, will meet the Ramblers of Baltimore.

Sherwood A. C. and Leland will battle for the District girls' championship at 7:30—the only two teams who failed to wind up their tournament campaigning in the big event sponsored by The Washington Post.

Intercity Championship.

The Sholl's-Stonewall and the Twin Oaks-Ramblers games will be the first of a series to determine the intercity A. A. U. championships in the respective classes. The second contests will come off probably Saturday night at Tech High, and a third, if necessary, will be played early next week.

A trophy is being donated to the intercity title-holders by the District A. A. U., Winfree Johnson, basket ball chairman, stated last night.

Baltimore's teams will be out to avenge defeats suffered here last season at the hands of George Washington University's freshmen team, unlimited champions, and Heurich Flashes, 145-pound winners, who were repulsed last Saturday night by the Twin Oaks in a big upset.

Stonewall Democratic Club won the Baltimore championship last week by defeating the Y. M. C. A., 33 to 31 in the finals, while the Ramblers subdued the Y. M. H. A., 46 to 33.

Stonewall Has Stars.

Feldmen, Snyder and Hauser are three stars on the visiting Stonewall team, while Lafferty, Marks and Hamil have been the big shots in the Ramblers' attack all season.

Bolstered by the addition of Hal Kiesel, center, and Bill Noonan, forward, Sholl's, conqueror of Bureau of Investigation for the unlimited crown, is the favorite to defeat Stonewall. Bobby Lucas, Fats Wiley, Bernie Jones, George Beach, Ollie Tipton, Tiny Ingham and Sammy Hook are available for duty.

"Pep" Hunter and Harry Cole will be the young lads the Ramblers will have to stop if they hope to come out on top.

Sholl's.	Position.	Stonewall.
Jones	L.F.	Feldman
Noonan	R.F.	Knoll
Kiesel	Center	Snyder
Tipton	L.G.	Hauser
Hook	R.G.	Lecker

Hunter	L.F.	Lafferty
P.Schuetzen	R.F.	J.Schuetzen
Oliverson	Center	Marks
Cole	L.G.	Hamil
Lassise	R.G.	Hubbard

Leland.	Position.	Sherwood.
Lee	L.F.	Lois Trundle
Kupka	R.F.	Cutt
Green	J.C.	Hobbs
Johnson	S.C.	Williams
Cooper	L.G.	Ladson
Molyneaux	R.G.	Lily Trundle

Alabama Signs Crisp To Six-Year Contract

Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 2 (AP).—The Tuscaloosa News says today that Henry G. (Hank) Crisp has signed a new six-year contract as athletic director of the University of Alabama.

The new contract would expire September 1, 1941, replacing the existing agreement which would have expired on September 1, 1936.

Crisp formerly was associated with sports at both Hampden-Sidney and Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

61 Entries Received For Deep Run Races

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., April 2.—The race committee of the Deep Run Hunt Club announces that there have been filed 61 entries for the six races of the meet to be held at Curlie's Neck next Saturday.

Drinmore Lad, fresh from his Carolina Cup victory, and Trouble Maker, Mrs. T. H. Somerville's famous veteran, are the two best known horses in the feature race, the Hunt Cup.

Maryland Clubs Post Ball League Forfeits

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Barton, Md., April 2.—At a meeting of the Cumberland and Georges Creek Baseball League, six of the eight clubs represented in the circuit posted forfeits of $25 each, assuring the league that they will be ready to open the campaign on May 12, and the Midland Indians and Keyser Golden Knights were given until next Saturday to turn over their fee to the treasurer.

The teams posting forfeits were Westvaco, formerly the Tri-Towns Merchants; Barton Braves, Eckhart Athletic Association, Frostberg Giants, Lonaconing Athletics and Cumberland Colts.

Clair Shirey to Lead Antietam Baseball Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 2.—Clair Shirey, veteran pitcher, who has served with the Washington Nationals and other organized clubs, will manage the Antietam nine of the Washington County Baseball League this season. He has called the first practice session for Thursday evening.

water combine to catch any wayward shots, Jones hooked his tee shot into the trees, but was lucky to have the ball carom out to the fairway. On the seventeenth, he misjudged a long putt so completely that the ball rolled off the green, down a bank and forced him to recover with a pitch shot. He missed four of five putts by narrow margins, but had birdies on the seventh, eighth and fourteenth due to fine approaches.

There were a flock of subpar practice rounds during the day, including 69s by Mike Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y.; Leland Hamman, Texas amateur; John Revolta, of Milwaukee, and John Golden, of Noroton, Conn.

Dutra, in his first crack at the course, shot a 70. Walter Hagen and Phil Perkins, of Cleveland, each carded 71; Leo Diegel a 72, and Lawson Little, the amateur king, a 75.

Starting times fixed for the opening round of the tournament Thursday call for Sarazen and Armour to tee off at 10:30 a. m. (E. S. T.), Dutra and Little at 10:48, Jones and Horton Smith at 1 p. m.

Other pairings include:

17 Matches Scheduled By St. John's Golfers

An array of 17 dual matches makes up the 1935 golf schedule of St. John's High School released yesterday. The Johnnies open their season tomorrow against Devitt Prep at Rock Creek in a Private High League match. The team also will play in the annual metropolitan schoolboy championships in which The Washington Post individual trophy will be at stake, May 27 to 30.

April 4, Devitt, at Rock Creek; 5, Gonzaga, at Rock Creek; 9, Tech, at East Potomac; 11, Georgetown Prep, at Garrett Park; 13, open; 16, Western, at East Potomac; 18, Tech at East Potomac; 23, Roosevelt, at East Potomac; 26, Devitt, at Rock Creek; 27, open; 30, Western, at Rock Creek.

June 2, Georgetown Prep, at Garrett Park.

Burke Fights Saturday On Amateur Program

Burke's opponent will be Steve Kadash, hard-hitting trooper from Langley Field. The fight will be for five rounds or less.

National City Unlimited Nines Set May 5 for Season Opening

COMPOSED again of 16 clubs, the powerful National City Unlimited League, completed arrangements last night for the opening of the 1935 season on May 5. Four new teams are numbered in the circuit this year, Cherner Motor Co., Army Medical Center, of Walter Reed Hospital, and the Georgetown nine. The league is one of the many operating under the Washington Post Association.

The meeting was held at the Atlas Sport Shop, leaving as the next steps, formation of the Junior and Midget divisions.

Making up Section A will be last year's champions, Pig 'n' Whistle, the runner-up Blue Flame Valets; Dor-A., Miller Furniture, Murphy 5 and 10, Cherner Motors, Army Medical and Union Printers.

In section B, will be the Lewis Ice Cream Co., Warwick A. C., David's Grill; Woodmen of the World (Elm Camp); Stansbury A. C., Capital Transit, District Grocery Stores and Georgetown.

The opening day's schedule will call for the following games: Dor-A vs. Miller Furniture, Murphy's vs. Cherners; Pig 'n' Whistle vs. Army Medical and Blue Flame vs. Union Printers in Section A. In Section B, Lewis Ice Cream will play the Warwicks, David's Grill the W. O. W., Stansbury A. C., the Capital Transit and the D. G. S. outfit, the team from Georgetown.

Houghton Bows To Mackenzie In Hot Duel

Both Are Far Under Par in 16-Hole Contest at Kenwood Course.

AL HOUGHTON and Roland Mackenzie, two former amateur stars making good as pros, staged a mighty 16-hole medal battle yesterday in an informal get-together at Kenwood's course, with the latter winning by a single shot.

In order to avoid traffic on the course, Mackenzie and Houghton decided to start from the third hole, with 16 holes as the route for the match. Playing brilliantly from tee to green, and putting as of old, Mackenzie finished the 16 holes four under par, while Houghton was three under, and the young Congressional pro won by a single stroke.

Both, realizing that perfect golf for the first and second holes would give them great scores, elected to play on, although Mackenzie already had won the match. They parred the first in fours, and with a chance to score a 67 for the 18, Mackenzie missed two shots on the second hole and finished with a disastrous 6 as compared to Houghton's 4.

The result was a 35-33—68 for Houghton and a 35-34—69 for Mackenzie. Loe Walper, party of the third part, shot a 36-37—73, unable to match the burning pace of the Kenwood and Congressional pros.

Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, left his winter club, Indian Creek in Miami, Fla., yesterday, and is due in town Friday. The red-haired pro will return to his duties on Saturday morning. Barnett has been away since early in December. He will discover that the golf shop has been remodeled in up-to-date fashion. Johnny Doonan, who assisted Bob at Indian Creek; Neil Turner, former Indian Spring caddy; Billy Hardy, club maker de luxe, and Sandy Douglas will comprise the personnel of Barnett's professional staff this year.

The opening first team matches in the District Women's Golf Association competition will take place Friday morning at Indian Spring Country Club, with Indian Spring meeting Beaver Dam, Army and Navy opposing Washington, Columbia facing Woodmont, Congressional clashing with Kenwood and Chevy Chase facing Manor. The matches were scheduled yesterday, but were postponed because of the soggy condition of the course.

Tomorrow morning the second teams will clash at Columbia in the matches postponed from Monday.

This conflict in tournament dates is getting on the nerves of Washington golfers, and the latest conflict really is a big shock. Baltimore Country Club's invitation dates are May 23, 24 and 25, it was announced yesterday, and the Manor Club invitation dates happen to be May 21, 22, 23 and 24. Harry Pitt, three times winner of the historic Baltimore invitation, is the defending Manor champion, and Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, who won the event last season, would prefer playing in a tournament at home rather than compete in one out of town. But at the same time both Pitt and Peacock would love to take in the Baltimore invitation usually held at the famous Five Farms course. So would at least 20 other Washingtonians.

Bruce Robertson will assist Professional George Diffenbaugh in the Indian Spring golf shop this year. Robertson succeeds Jim Schrider, who has returned to his printing trade.

Griffith Home, Predicts Nats Will Fool 'Em

CLARK C. GRIFFITH, the Washington Baseball Club's president, its most ardent booster and probably its worst golfer, arrived home from the Southland yesterday to await the coming of his 1935 team and the approaching campaign.

He reported to the stockholders in good condition and with the usual pre-season supply of optimism. Griff's opening salvo was that the boys are "going to fool a lot of people this year," and said it in a tone that implied that he meant all he said.

Prexy was ready to talk baseball at the drop of a hat, but the boys kept their chapeaus on and the conversation shifted to golf. Griff admitted he had done unusually well this season and intimated that he may go South earlier next season to get in a few extra rounds.

Back on baseball he admitted that Dick Lanahan, the lanky District sandlot southpaw, had pleasantly surprised him in his two appearances on the mound. He reported that the former Eastern High School ace is putting on weight—something he always has needed—and is fast acquiring the inside tricks of the game. Lanahan is a sure bet to stick with Chattanooga, and it is not improbable that he may land back in a Washington uniform before the season is over.

G. U. Prep Trounces Devitt, 6-0 at Golf

Georgetown Prep, perennial holder of the prep school golf titles of the Washington area, began defense of its Private High League title yesterday, with a 6-to-0 victory over Devitt Prep on the Garrett Park links. Hughes Spalding, veteran Little Hoya star, ran into the toughest opposition before subduing Holden, 2 and 1.

Spalding defeated Holden, 2 and 1; Higgins defeated Syverson, 3 and 2; Georgetown Prep won best ball, 2 and 1. Canning defeated Hamner, 5 and 4; Jack Dettweiller defeated Ochse, 6 and 5; Georgetown Prep won best ball, 6 and 4.

Silas Protests Halting Bout With Furr

SID SILAS, the New York welterweight who was the victim of a seventh-round technical knockout at the hands of Phil Furr at the Auditorium Monday night, yesterday filed formal protest with the boxing commission over the stopping of the bout.

"The commission's attention is invited to the fact that in many of my bouts here I have been on the floor," reads Silas' written squawk. "I recuperate rapidly. I always take advantage of the full nine count. I have never been knocked out."

Silas had been floored for eight counts in the first and second rounds and for a two-count in the fifth. Just before Referee Muggsy Morris halted the action, Sid had been dropped, face downward, for another eight-count with a sizzling right uppercut. Upon rising, Silas ran flush into another right to the jaw, which staggered, but did not floor him. He was covering on the ropes as Furr shot both hands, when Morris halted the bout.

Counted on Wrong Man.

Silas not only protested the action of Morris in halting the bout, but claimed that the arbiter counted over him on two occasions when Furr had wrestled and thrown him to the floor.

"I wish also to protest against the action of Referee Morris in counting over me on two occasions when Furr had wrestled and thrown me to the floor, a foul action on his part," Silas' letter to the commission reads in part. "On one of these counts, Mr. Morris was counting over me while Furr was in distress, on the ropes, on the opposite side of the ring as the result of a blow from me. While Mr. Morris was counting over me, I pointed to Furr to call Morris' attention to his error. My head was clearer than his."

On one of the occasions to which Silas refers, Morris did begin a count when Sid had merely slipped, or been wrestled to the canvas. On the other occasion, in the fifth round, the circumstances are exactly as he claims, excepting that the majority in the press box thought Silas had been floored by a punch and not wrestled to the deck.

Sullivan Would Pilot.

"Before I left the ringside a physician, Dr. Knowlton, spoke to me in my corner and, with other doctors agreeing with him, said, 'This man is no more out than I am. He is in good condition to continue'."

Silas' protest closed with a request that he be allowed to fight Furr again, with any referee other than Morris assigned to the bout.

Kid Sullivan, a one-time fighter who now referees in the District, also visited the Commission yesterday, asking permission to be allowed to manage Silas for three bouts.

"I'd like to have him for three fights just to show he is a good fighter," Sullivan said. "To me he looks like the best boy before the public here and he needs to learn only two or three things to be able to beat good men. I'd like to manage and train him."

The commission will act later on Sullivan's request to act as a manager.

Central Golfers Win.

Central High opened its golf season with a victory yesterday, defeating St. John's High, 6 to 3, on the Rock Creek course.

Sullivan (St. John's) defeated Rogers, 4 and 3; Mertle (Central) defeated Horstmann, 4 and 2; St. John's won best ball, 2 and 1. Garland (Central) defeated Bayhee, 5 and 7; Hutchinson (Central) defeated Winsett, 3 and 2; Central won best ball, 3 and 2. Meyers (St. John's) defeated Harman, 5 and 4; Leapley (Central) defeated Hernean, 4 and 3; Central won best ball, 4 and 3.

Shenandoah County Mines Forming League

Woodstock, Va., April 2.—Plans to organize a county baseball loop are under way here, it was announced today by Louis Morrison, manager of the Woodstock nine. The loop is expected to include teams from New Market, Strasburg, Mount Jackson, Edinburg and Woodstock. The proposed loop will be the first of its kind ever held in Shenandoah County, although several of the teams have been members of the Valley League teams in the past. Woodstock decided to enter the loop since they turned down a Valley League franchise that was offered to them again this year.

It was not decided whether the league would have officials to act as umpires throughout the season or whether the officials would be brought in from nearby counties. Officers of the league will be elected in near future, when the representatives of the teams meet to decide a schedule for the season. It is expected that Woodstock will play several independent teams from Washington, Maryland and West Virginia this season in addition to the league games.

Navy Teams to Open Spring Season Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 2. — The spring sports season in Annapolis will be ushered in tomorrow with baseball and lacrosse games, and a tennis match, teams from New England institutions furnishing the opposition in all three contests.

St. John's College lacrossers will entertain Dartmouth, while Navy entertains Harvard on the diamond and Tufts College on the tennis courts. The Johnny stickmen profited by a good workout against an alumni team last Saturday.

Pepco Quintet Wins.

Pepco defeated the Southeast Flashes in the second of the series to determine the "underdog" championship of the Community Center Basket Ball League last night at Macfarland gym. The score was 31-18. The final game will be played tomorrow night.

Cherner Motors Wants Game.

Cherner Motor Co. tossers, who will compete in Section A of the National City League this season, want to book a strong unlimited team having a diamond for a Sunday game. For games call Manager Nate Miller at NOrth 9628.

High Schools Face Busy Period

THE busy opening week of the scholastic spring sports season, which began yesterday with Western High's baseball victory over National Training School, gets an added touch of inaugural flavor tomorrow when the Harvard Freshman ball team meets St. Alban's on the Alban field.

It will be the first time virtually since time immemorial that a Harvard team has competed in the Capital. St. Alban's, bulwarked by the return of a number of regulars from last year's team, is set to offer considerable more than a semblance of resistance, despite its being the first game of the season.

The sports calendar for today finds Georgetown Prep opening its season against Bethesda-Chevy Chase High at Garrett Park. Coach Joe Gardner's combination appears several degrees greener on paper than the 1934 championship team. The only regulars from last year's outfit are Capt. Billy Dettweiler, shortstop, and DeSales Powell, first base.

The team will bat in the following order, Bob O'Shaugnessy, left field; Austin Parks, center field; Bobby Troutman, third base; Lloyd Rice, pitcher; Billy Dettweiler, shortstop; DeSales Powell, first base; Elkin Franklin, second base; Bobby Renehan, right field; Squire Pennington, catcher. Bobby Murphy and Berwin Moree are the first rank reserves. Despite the new men on the squad, the fast-improvment of the squad in the last few weeks has Coach Gardner mildly optimistic.

The only other event listed for today takes Central's tennis team against the powerful Episcopal High net squad at Alexandria. The Episcopal team was outstanding in the sport last year, defeating the prep school champions of St. Alban's, as well as every other team it met. Central, inter-high champions, go into the matches without the services of its No. 1 man, Nate Ritzenberg, who is recovering from a tonsil operation.

Indians Face Dartmouth.

Williamsburg, Va., April 2 (AP).—William and Mary will play Dartmouth on the Cary Field diamond at 4 o'clock tomorrow. Scott is expected to occupy the mound for the locals, with Stewart behind the plate.

Maryland Nine Meets Cornell In Opener

College Park Contest to See Delayed Start of College Season.

WET grounds forced a cancellation of yesterday's Georgetown-Dartmouth game, but, barring unforeseen showers, the college baseball season will positively open this afternoon at College Park, where Maryland crosses bats with Cornell at 3:30 o'clock.

Jinxed by Washington's temperamental weather, which kept it idle two days, Dartmouth packed its duds immediately after hearing of the postponement and struck out for Virginia, where it meets William and Mary, Richmond, Washington and Lee and Virginia on consecutive days.

Cornell's invasion has not been preceded by an avalanche of publicity, but if the Big Red nine is as good this year as it was last the boys can stand on their own merit. Maryland divided the two-game series last spring and was lucky to get an even break, but Coach Burt Shipley says things are going to be different this time. He expects to take both games.

Terps Reputedly Strong.

The Terps reputedly have one of their best teams in recent years. It is supposed to be one of the greatest hitting combinations to sport the Black and Gold in a decade, and from a defensive standpoint it is said to rank with the greatest of all time. Cornell will prove or disprove, as the case may be, some of these reckless statements.

Be that as it may, there is no doubt that this '35 nine is a better than average outfit, and there is a possibility that the school that sent Boxie Berger to the major leagues and a score of others to the minor circuits may have additional recruits. Dick Nelson, an infielder, and Catcher Bob Love have been pronounced grade A prospects.

'Belmont' Picked For Horse Show

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., April 2.—Historic "Belmont," rich in traditional lore, and situated near Leesburg, will be the scene of the fifth annual Loudoun Hunt Horse Show, according to an announcement made today by the secretary W. F. Peach. Through the courtesy of the present owners, former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, the event will be staged on the wide meadows of the vast estate, Saturday, June 1.

Nineteen classes will be shown, including half-breds, thoroughbreds, ponies and the usual wide variety of hunter classes. The feature of the day's sport is the Loudoun Hunt Trophy, which is given for horses hunted during the past season with any recognized hunt. Jumps for this event will not exceed 4 feet, the conditions calling for hunters to pop one, lead over one, and take two jumps at a fair hunting pace. Performance only will count.

Officers of the Loudoun Hunt are Judge J. R. H. Alexander, president; vice presidents, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, P. A. Wilmer, E. A. Miller, David N. Rust, jr., and R. T. Corbell; W. F. Peach, secretary and treasurer; W. H. Lipscomb, M. F. H. The board of governors include the officers of the club, and L. C. Hoge, S. H. Hall, Mrs. Clara S. Frye, H. E. Cole, W. A. Metzger and D. M. McDonald.

Fleming to Get Trial With Danville Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 2.—Philmore Fleming, youthful speed ball artist of Ridgeley, whose mound performances at Charlotte, N. C., Bethlehem, Pa., and Chicago were instrumental in winning the junior world's baseball championship for the team of Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, has gone to Danville, Va., to receive a try-out with the Danville Club, Boston Red Sox "farm" in the Bi-State League.

Pete Horworth and Kenneth Clark, outfielders, and George "Pruny" Kraft, also members of the local legion team, will join the Danville Club on Wednesday.

Board Pushes Plan for School In Gainesboro

Frederick Maps Proposed Building on 'Pay-as-You-Go' Basis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 2.—With a "pay-as-you-go" slogan, Frederick County School Board members are proceeding with plans for erecting an eight-room brick consolidated school in the Gainesboro District this summer. The building will cost approximately $25,000.

Plans call for excavation soon, relief labor to be given the call. A surplus of nearly $13,000 and the sum of $20,000 ear-marked in the next budget for construction will enable the board to pay cash for the improvement.

The board recently purchased three acres of ground for a consolidated grade school at Clearbrook on the Martinsburg pike north of this city. The school probably will be erected during the summer of 1936.

Low Price for Pigs Blamed in Washington County.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 2.—The price of 9 cents a pound for hogs was believed responsible for a decrease in the number of corn-hog reduction contracts signed by Washington County farmers.

Only 117 county farmers have signed 1935 contracts for a reduction of 10 per cent in corn acreage and a like amount reduction of hogs, against 204 signed in 1934.

Organization meetings are being held this week in four districts. Two districts, Hagerstown and Smithsburg have been combined. Chairmen selected in each of the four districts will meet later and organize the 1935 Corn-Hog Association, which will have charge of the administration of the reduction program.

Stock Market Yields Ground After Upturn

Int. Bus. Machines, With Gain of 2¼ Points a Bright Spot.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 2.—A little out of breath after yesterday's short upward spurt, shares gave ground in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

Following Monday's session in the spot light, the rails drew backstage surrendering the advantage gained on temperate enthusiasm for the rate compromise granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Sentiment derived a dash of cheer from reports of railroad loadings which indicated fair gains on balance. The report by President Thomas J. Watson at the annual stockholders meeting of International Business Machine Corporation focused attention on one bright spot. Watson's statement that a good increase over 1934 is expected for the corporation's business this year was greeted with a rise of 2¼ points in the common shares.

The closing gong found equities down 3-10 of a point at 36.3 in terms of the Associated Press average of 60 stocks. Trading was somewhat more active at 532,388 shares, compared with 444,590 shares on Monday.

Fractional losses ruled among leading industrial equities. Included in the list were United States Steel, down ¼ at 28⅝, American Smelting off ¼ at 132¾, Chrysler with a loss of ⅝ at 33¾ and International Harvester down ½ at 36¾.

Corn Is Strong, Wheat Lower

Cotton Off 3 to 13 Points Under Foreign Selling and Liquidation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 2.—Private crop statisticians' estimates of domestic winter wheat production that were construed as bearish by many traders brought about a decline in wheat futures prices today.

Opening higher, May later reversed its early trend following announcement of the forecasts. The average of five experts' figures placed this year's winter wheat yield at about 490,000,000 bushels, or $85,000,000 more than production last year, but 142,000,000 less than the ten-year average.

Wheat closed ⅜ to ⅝ below yesterday's finish; May, 94½ to 95⅛. Corn developed independent strength in connection with figures showing low farm reserves and finished ¼ off to ½ up; May, 80⅛ to 81. Oats were ⅜ lower to ¼ higher, and rye lost ¼.

Although the private predictions were subject to change inasmuch as it will be nearly three months before the winter wheat crop is harvested, the estimates were larger than many traders expected in the light of recent severe dust storms and dry weather in parts of the growing belt.

Buying of corn against sales of wheat was reported, with May corn displaying strength that indicated short covering. Private estimates of stocks of corn on farms as of April 1 averaged 430,000,000 bushels, against 834,000,000 a year ago. Corn strength accompanied expectations that the small supply of grain in the country might bring about a tight situation especially if the corn-hog ratio remained at better than 10 to 1. Oats largely followed the action of corn. Provisions were easy.

Cotton Market.

Opening advances were followed by reactions in cotton today under foreign selling and liquidation, with the close steady at net declines of 2 to 13 points.

The opening was 3 to 12 points higher on firm Liverpool cables and trade buying in the old crop positions while there was some covering in later months. This demand was supplied by the foreign selling and prices worked off gradually.

There was considerable switching from near to late months and reversal of straddles between New York and Liverpool.

Metropolitan Bankers Turning to Outright Opposition to New Banking Bill; Even Prefer to Retain Permanent Insurance Plan if Needed.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 2.—The attitude of New York bankers toward the pending banking bill of 1935 is gradually changing from one of reluctant assent to outright hostility. Perhaps a majority now definitely favor no banking legislation at all at this session, rather than to see passed the measure now before Congress.

Outside of New York City, however, banking sentiment has not swung so far as yet, and a great many out-of-town bankers would acquiesce in the admittedly unsound features of the bill as the price that must be paid for those provisions that are urgently desired. This is shown by the statement of the president of the American Bankers Association before the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

Title I of the pending bill amending the Federal deposit insurance provisions of existing law is the part that the banking community is especially eager to see passed. If Title I or similar legislation is not enacted into law, then the permanent plan of deposit insurance will automatically go into effect on July 1 of this year. The banks would then have to apply one-half of 1 per cent of their total deposits to subscribe to class A stock of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The present $5,000 limit on insured accounts would be raised. Far more serious, the insured banks would be subjected to unlimited assessments to make good the losses of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the future.

This "blank check" provision of the permanent insurance plan is regarded with special dread by bankers, for a future recurrence of a bank failure epidemic would subject the strong banks to repeated assessments in order to pay out insured deposits in weaker and more speculative banks which closed down under such conditions.

Deposit Insurance Charge Seen as Sop to Quiet Protest.

Bankers given to blunt speaking regard Title I of the bill as a sop to them, in order to quiet opposition to Title II, which contains the vital provisions changing the Federal reserve act and imposing almost outright political control over the future conduct of the Federal Reserve System. However, it has been argued by officials of the Reserve City Bankers Association and other bodies which follow legislative developments closely that political control is virtually a fact now, so that the new legislation would merely make more formal and perpetuate a condition which already exists. In order to gain the coveted modification of deposit insurance, and cut down the maximum contribution to the insurance fund that any bank would have to make in one year to one one-twelfth of 1 per cent of its deposits, therefore the other elements of the bill were to be accepted after every effort had been made to modify them in the interests of conservatism.

After hearing the ambitions of Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board to stimulate a new expansion of long-term and non-liquid bank loans and investments, however, and after studying the terms of the measure more fully, the New York bankers are beginning to relent and refrain. Once full political control of the Reserve System is established, by statute, they fear that it may not be possible to curb or end it for a long time to come. Furthermore, they do not relish seeing the banking system of the country loaded anew with slow loans, mortgages and other frozen commitments, which would be certain to lead to trouble at some future date.

New York bankers are asking themselves, in fact, whether modification of deposit insurance would not be purchased at too high a price under such circumstances. After all, as long as the banks of the country are conservatively managed, losses from deposit insurance will remain small, so that the character of the guaranty system in effect will not make much difference as a practical matter. Thus far, losses under the system have been negligible. Furthermore, they feel that it will be easier to modify the deposit insurance law in the future than to attempt to change the worst features of Title II of the pending bill if it were enacted.

Codification of All Bank Laws Is Urgent Need.

Another reason why bankers here feel that the pending bill should be opposed outright, even if the result will be no modification of the permanent insurance plan before it goes into effect July 1, is the urgent need that is felt to exist for a codification of the banking laws of the country. The national banking act, the Federal reserve act, the many amendments to these two basic statutes, the various emergency banking laws, the gold reserve act of 1934 and other legislation all effect the conduct of the banking business. It would greatly clarify and strengthen banking regulation if all these laws were codified, and contradictory and confusing provisions eliminated or harmonized.

To pass the present banking bill would be to make this statutory confusion worse confounded. Hence, as an alternative to its passage, leading banking and business organizations are being urged to advocate appointment of a nonpartisan commission of experts, industrialists and bankers to spend the next year in surveying existing banking legislation and in drafting a codification of all Federal laws on the subject.

Stocks—Lacked sentiment to substantiate the previous session's short rally, and gave ground. Rails were prominent in the recessions. Fractional losses predominated among leading equities at the close. Sales for the day up to 532,388 shares.

Bonds—Federals, lately neglected, took the center of the stage and led secondary rails and utilities into higher ground. Transfers increased $11,324,000.

Curb—Trends were mixed, with utilities and oils slightly lower. Sales were up to 116,000 shares.

Grains—Private crop reports of good winter wheat prospects brought sagging prices. Opening quotations were higher than the previous close. May wheat closed at 94½ and May corn at 80⅞.

Cotton—Advanced at the opening, but slumped under foreign selling and liquidation. Closes were steady at net declines of 3 to 13 points. May cotton closed at 10.95.

Sugar—Raw sugar closed steady at 3.18, while refined was quoted at 4.90 for fine granulated; unchanged.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 closed at 7½ and Santos No. 4 sold last at 9 to 9¼.

Bar Silver—Unchanged in New York at 61¼ cents per ounce. In London it closed off 3-16 pence at 28¼d.

Bar Gold—Off 1 shilling 3½ pence in London and closed 144 shillings 1 pence (United States equivalent, $34.69).

Com. Credit Co. To Call Entire Preferred Stock

Stockholders Will Have Privilege of Exchange for New Issue.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Redemption of all outstanding preferred stock of the Commercial Credit Co. of Baltimore will be called about May 1, according to A. E. Duncan, chairman of the company's board of directors.

Conversion of six different types of preferred shares into the new issue was voted at a special stockholders meeting at which 64.03 per cent of all the company's voting stock declared in favor of the changed certificate of incorporation.

The call will be effective about June 30, Duncan asserted, and will give all of the shareholders the opportunity to exchange their stock on an equitable basis for the new stock and some shares of the common stock. Any shares of the new preferred that are not taken up by the shareholders will be underwritten by an outstanding banking group.

Determination of the exact price at which shares may be exchanged and the price of the new stock will be decided by the directors a few days before the call is issued. When the plan is completed, Commercial Credit will have only one type of preferred and common stock outstanding, with a sizable reduction in the preferred stock.

Carpel Dividend Increased.

Directors of the Carpel Corporation, have voted to increase their yearly dividend to $1.60, it was learned yesterday when payment of a quarterly dividend of 40 cents was announced.

During 1934 the company paid $1 on each share of common stock outstanding. Earnings during the first two months of 1935 were reported at 80 cents per share.

March orders received by the National Electrical Supply Co. Appliance Division here are the largest in the firm's history, it was disclosed yesterday.

Actual deliveries during the month were 40 per cent higher than the corresponding 1934 period. A greater proportion of quality purchases, as compared with buying of low-priced merchandise, was also reported.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announced yesterday that it would add air-conditioning equipment to 118 of its cars this season. While the purchase of no new cars is contemplated with this move, it will bring the total number of air-conditioned cars to the system up to 401. This number includes 31 cars on its subsidiary, the Alton Railroad.

New York, April 2 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange firm of Pearl & Co. will dissolve on April 30, it was announced today.

The firm is one of the oldest in Wall street. Edward P. Field, senior partner, will become a member of the stock exchange firm of Whitehouse & Co., and three other partners will organize a new stock exchange firm under the name of L. S. Kerr & Co.

Penn. R. R. Redeems Notes.

New York, April 2 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. announced tonight it had redeemed $1,928,000 principal amount of ten-year secured 4 per cent serial notes which it had sold to the Public Works Administration in the spring of 1934 to finance purchase of steel rail. The notes were part of a total issue of $3,648,000. The funds came from current cash of the road.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Investment buying due to better budget prospects caused a sharp improvement in gilt-edged securities on the stock exchange today. Speculators bought Belgian bonds, oils and motor shares. The market otherwise closed quiet and prices drooped.

Paris—Trading strengthened on the bourse today, rentes leading the rise in French shares after a weak opening. With the exception of Young plan issues, the international group was weak. Salgium fluctuated throughout the session. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Prices remained quiet, due to a smaller turnover on the boerse today.

American Smelting Proposes To Reduce Common Par Value

Stockholders Will Be Asked to Make Cut From $33.33 to $10, Permitting a Write-Down of $42,698,000 in Intangible Assets.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 2.—Possibility of a substantial refunding operation by American Smelting & Refining Co. was brought to light today at the annual meeting when F. H. Brownell, chairman, announced a call for a special meeting of stockholders May 21 to act on a proposal to cut the par value of common stock.

Approval by stockholders would reduce stated value of common from $33.33 to $10 a share, an action which would permit a write-down of $42,698,000 in intangible values in property accounts.

Brownell said the move was taken to avoid any possibility of liability for accuracy of statements in the balance sheet. It was pointed out that under the securities and exchange act it is necessary to divide the net property account into intangible and tangible assets so as not to misstate the company's financial position.

Refunding Is Considered.

The chairman said directors were considering refunding $36,200,000 of 5 per cent bonds outstanding, but that possible disposals of the company's stock of excess metals valued currently at $20,000,000 was an important consideration.

Indications were that under proper market conditions, the company might consider complete or partial retirement of funded debt.

The net property account at the end of 1934 was about $100,000,000, he said, with intangibles at about $48,000,000 and tangibles at about $52,000,000. Net value of intangibles will be reduced to about $4,000,000, Brownell declared, and he added that on such basis the officers and directors could not be accused of overstating the value of intangibles.

January and February, 1935, earnings were reported by Brownell at the rate of $2 a share annually on common.

Stewart-Warner Gains 30% Over Last Year

Richmond, April 2 (AP).—James S. Knowlson, chairman of the board of Stewart-Warner Corporation, reported to stockholders at the annual meeting here today that gross business done by the company during the first three months of this year was 30 per cent greater than during the corresponding quarter of 1934.

T. R. Sullivan, of Chicago, secretary-treasurer of the corporation, was elected to the board, succeeding Robert J. Graham, who recently died. James E. Otis, jr., of Chicago, is president of the company.

Pacific Lighting Reports Deficit

San Francisco, April 2.—Gross operating revenue of $43,549,689 is reported by Pacific Lighting Corporation for 1934. The company's subsidiaries supply natural gas in Southern California, serving more than half the population of the State. Exceptionally warm weather prevailing throughout the year, it is explained, caused a reduction in usage of gas for heating and accounted for a decrease in gross revenue compared with 1933, when the company reported $44,864,160.

After payment of dividends on 196,665 shares of preferred and 1,608,631 shares of common stock outstanding, the company incurred a deficit of $443,398 charged to surplus. The first reduction in dividend rate since 1899 was ordered on March 20, 1935, explained as being due to the uncertainty of business conditions generally and to "destructive and oppressive legislation enacted and proposed, although Pacific Lighting is a geographically integrated system and differs from an operating company only in form.

Briggs Manufacturing Co. and subsidiaries report for 1934 consolidated net profit of $5,121,625 after charges and taxes equal to $2.59 a share on the common stock compared with $1,591,425, or 80 cents a share in 1933.

Island Creek Coal Co. and subsidiaries report 1934 net profit of $1,667,083 after charges and Federal taxes, equal, after preferred dividends, to $2.54 a share on the common stock. This compares with $1,097,680, or $1.58 a common share in 1933.

Miami Copper Co. reports for 1934 a net loss of $425,829 after charges and taxes, but before depletion. This compares with a loss of $477,530 in 1933.

Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation directors have declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, payable May 1 to stock of record April 15. A similar payment was made in the last four periods.

All Bonds Firm In Expansion Of Dealings

Federals, Utilities, Industrials Show Upward Trend.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 2.—Renewed interest in United States Government securities and further nibbling at secondary rails and utilities helped to give the bond market a steady to firm tone in today's slightly expanded dealings.

Transfers totaled $11,324,000, par value, against $10,935,000 in the previous session. The Associated Press corporate averages were only a shade changed in either direction.

Recoveries of one thirty-second to eight thirty-seconds of a point in the Federal section were attributed by some traders to the overnight announcement that the Government would do no additional financing in connection with the payment on April 15 of the remaining called Liberty fourth 4¼s.

Although some of the recently active lower-priced railroad bonds showed signs of being tired after the strenuous activity which came into the market following the rate decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the majority of them held up well.

Utility bonds continued to edge forward in a quiet manner. The industrials generally followed a restricted range. Foreign loans were quiet, but French issues rallied briskly following the vote of confidence given the government by the Chamber of Deputies on its intention to maintain the gold standard.

Crude Oil Output Shows Decrease

Average Production Off 36,850 Bbls. Daily.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 2.—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 36,850 barrels in the week ended March 30, totaling 2,563,250 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California decreased 6,150 barrels to 2,092,350 barrels.

Refineries representing 89.8 per cent of estimated total capacity operated at 87.3 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills at 2,294,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 89.8 per cent of total, operated at 89.9 per cent of capacity, was 2,384,000 barrels.

Finished gasoline stocks at refineries totaled 37,910,000 barrels, against 37,858,000. Unfinished gasoline stocks totaled 5,860,000 barrels, against 6,088,000 barrels.

Texas Yields Most Sulphur

Production Last Year Was 84 Per Cent of Total for the Country.

To supply the mineral industry promptly with data on sulphur production and markets during the last year, the following information is furnished by the United States Bureau of Mines:

Production and shipments of sulphur changed little in 1934 in comparison with 1933. Production of sulphur increased slightly, from 1,406,063 long tons in 1933 to 1,421,473 tons in 1934. Shipments declined from 1,637,368 tons in 1933, valued at about $29,500,000, to 1,613,838 tons in 1934, valued at about $28,900,000.

Texas was again the leading sulphur producing State with an output in 1934 of 1,187,233 long tons, or 84 per cent of the total for the country. In 1933, Texas produced 1,083,445 tons, 77 per cent of the total. Shipments amounted to 1,302,663 tons in 1934, compared with 1,507,749 tons in 1933. The properties that contributed to the production in 1934 were those of the Duval Texas Sulphur Co. at Palangana Dome, Benavides, Duval County; Freeport Sulphur Co., at Bryan and Hoskins Mounds, Freeport, Brazoria County, and the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., at Long Point Dome, Long Point, Fort Bend County, and at Boling Dome, Newgulf, Wharton County.

Production of sulphur in Louisiana decreased from 321,492 long tons in 1933 to 228,830 tons in 1934. Shipments, however, increased from 128,916 tons in 1933 to 307,186 tons in 1934. As in 1933, the Freeport Sulphur Co. and the Jefferson Lake Oil Co., Inc., were the producers.

California produced 4,410 long tons of sulphur in 1934. The Bureau of Mines is not at liberty to publish comparable figures for 1933, but the combined production for California and Utah totaled 1,126 tons.

The average quoted price for sulphur as reported by the trade journals was unchanged at $18 a ton, f. o. b. mines, throughout the year. The spot price for car lots was $21 a ton.

Imports of 5,839 long tons of sulphur ore were recorded by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in 1934. This quantity compares with 4,773 long tons imported in 1933. Chile supplied all sulphur received in the United States in 1933 and in 1934.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A sharp decline in the dollar in London featured foreign exchange trading yesterday. Gold currencies were comparatively steady.

In London the dollar yielded 2½ cents, closing at 4.82 to the pound sterling but in later trading in New York, the trend was reversed and sterling yielded ½ cent to 4.81.

In Paris the dollar was a trifle lower at an equivalent of 6.595 cents to the franc and in later dealings in New York the French unit advanced .00⅜ of a cent to 6.59⅝.

Belgian belgas hovered closely around its new parity, selling at 16.97 cents in early dealings in New York where it was .03 of a cent lower. Guilders and Swiss francs showed little change.

Cross Currents In Curb Trading

Utilities and Oils Yield Slightly; Sales Volume Is Higher.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 2.—Contradictory trends were again present on the Curb Exchange today. Utilities yielded slightly following some improvement during the forenoon. Oils ended a shade lower, while alcohols were mixed. Transfers increased to 116,000 shares from 76,000 on Monday.

United Shoe Machinery and Pepperell Manufacturing both lost around a point on light dealings. Minor recessions were recorded by Lake Shore Mines, International Petroleum, Hiram Walker Amerian Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share and Swift & Co.

Real Estate Bonds Up 9.2% in Quarter

New York, April 2.—Real estate bond issues increased in market value an average of 9.2 per cent during the first three months of the year, although slow movements which characterized dealings throughout March contributed only nine-tenths of 1 per cent of this total, it is shown by Amott-Baker realty bond price averages, based upon 200 important issues secured by properties in Eastern cities.

"Net average price advances during the first quarter of this year are well above the rate of increase for the two-year period, 1933-34, for which our averages totaled 57.2 per cent," says H. R. Amott.

Bill to Control Soft Coal Wins Way to Senate

Guffey Predicts Early Vote on Proposed Federal Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

The momentum of a 14-to-3 vote of approval yesterday sent the Guffey bill, designed to insure strict Government regulation of the soft coal industry, to the Senate floor.

Legislative proposals along similar lines have been pressed for years, but yesterday was the first time a committee had voted for a favorable report on such a bill.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, author of the measure, predicted the Senate would act on it at an early date.

Would Create Board.

The bill would create a national coal commission within the Interior Department and give it sweeping powers to control production and fix minimum prices.

In a radio address, Guffey asserted proponents of the bill believe its failure would bring "immediate catastrophe to the bituminous coal industry."

"America's future place among the nations of the world," he said, "depends largely upon its supply of power—bituminous coal—and for that reason we have a duty to conserve it."

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, termed the committee's action "in line with what had been expected" as a result of hearings on the bill.

"Its enactment by Congress is imperative," the union leader declared, "on account of the crisis in the coal industry superinduced by the breakdown in the industry's price structure and the inability of NRA in the field of enforcement."

Lewis said the "clarification" resulting from the favorable action of the bill would be of "material benefit" prospects for negotiating new wage agreements for the industry.

'The Best Dog Is'—Brussels Griffon

Nine Out of Ten Men Like the Breed, in Spite of Its Being a Toy, Say Dr. Swope and Jimmy Dunn, Praising Its Hardihood.

When a man—a regular he man—likes a toy, it is excellent proof that said pup is not a shivering lap dog craving steam heat and bonbons.

And nine out of ten men admire the Brussels Griffon, a sturdy little fellow with the alertness and sporting characteristics of a terrier. At least, that is the opinion of Dr. Chester Swope, of 2812 Thirty-fourth place, president of the Rotary, and the man who owns one.

And it is the opinion of "Jimmy" Dunn, of the State Department, the debonair diplomat who brought the first of this breed to Washington, as far as this writer can discover, and gave one to Dr. Swope.

To begin with, lest some male reader who may not know this dog, scoff at the idea of a toy being fit for anything but milady's boudoir, the Brussels Griffon will step right along for a 3, 4 or 5 mile hike and be just as fresh at the end of it as his human walking companion. In the country he will give chase to a rabbit with the best of terriers. All in all, he is ready for any sort of fun at all.

Everybody Loves Her.

"Peggy takes it for granted that everybody loves her," Mrs. Swope said, while the subject under discussion, a beautiful sable bitch of seven years, nestled in the arms of the osteopathic doctor's wife. "We had a Boston terrier before we had her, but I must say that the Brussels Griffon have many more lovable mannerisms than the Boston has. If Peggy is ignored for too long a time, she begs for attention just as a child would do.

"They are obedient little dogs," Mrs. Swope continued. "Peggy will do anything to please us. If we do have to scold her for helping herself to candy, she adopts an attitude of 'what have I done wrong now?' She has such a strong inferiority complex that we can never use a collar, harness or any sort of lead for her. I threw her last lead away, for she used to get dejected for hours after we took her out on it."

The Brussels Griffon or, as the dog books have it, the Griffon Bruxellois, has come to the foreground with amazing rapidity. He has the honor of being the national dog of Belgium, as commonly seen there as the universal housedog and pet as the Boston terrier is here. The breed is absolutely distinctive and, once seen, it is never forgotten.

Two Types of Griffons.

There are two types of toy Griffons, the wire-haired and the smooth or the Brabancon Peggy, registered with the Belgian Kennel Club as Diane, belongs to the Brabancon variety. Most fanciers date the Brussels Griffon back to about 1880, when a police agent mated a small dog to a Barbet.

According to the American Kennel Club standard, the Griffon Bruxellois is an intelligent, sprightly, robust dog of compact appearance, reminding one of a Cob and captivating the attention by the quasi-human expression. The dog weighs from 5½ to 9 pounds. The features of the breed are the red wiry coat, the mustache and the beard, three things lacking in the Brabancon variety. The head is large and rounded; the nose is black, short and surrounded with hair converging upwards to meet that which surrounds the eyes, which are large and black with long lashes and eyelids edged with black; the chin is prominent without showing the teeth, the lips are edged with black. The chest is wide and deep; legs straight as possible; tail upwards and cut to two-thirds. Ears should be semi-erect.

Official to Visit Cumberland Lodge

General Breiel to Be Odd Fellows' Guest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 2.—A major event in Odd Fellowship in Western Maryland will be held Friday, April 12, when the general commander of the Patriarchs Militant, I. O. O. F., Gen. George I. Breiel, of Kentucky, will pay an official visit here. He will be accompanied by members of his staff and Col. A. Gilbert Isaac, department commander of Maryland, and his staff.

During the evening Canton Allegany, No. 4, will assist in conferring the Decoration of Chivalry on May Myers. Colfax Rebekah Lodge, No. 1, will be hostess for the occasion.

At 6 p. m., a banquet in honor of Gen. Breiel will be held in the recreation hall of Centre Street Methodist Episcopal Church, followed by a parade from the hall to the armory. At 8 p. m., a public reception will be held in the armory under the direction of Colfax Rebekah Lodge, No. 1. A dance will conclude the evening's entertainment. Rebekah and Odd Fellows in the tri-State area will be present in larger numbers than for many years, it is announced.

Prosecutor's Son Held On Hit-Run Accusation

Richmond, Va., April 2.—T. Gray Haddon, jr., 29-year-old son of the Richmond Commonwealth's attorney, was free on $500 bail today after his arrest late yesterday on a hit-and-run charge.

Police said young Haddon was the driver of an automobile which struck another here yesterday and sent it hurtling into a third machine. Three persons were slightly hurt in the accident. Haddon said his car had been stolen from him a short while before the accident.

West Virginia Victory Looms In Tax Fight

Supreme Court Expected to Back Chain Store Levy on Gas Plants.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court indicated yesterday it would require the Gulf Refining Co. of Texas to pay the West Virginia chain store tax on its gasoline plants and filling stations in that State.

The question came before the high court in an appeal by the West Virginia tax commissioner from a decision by a three-judge Federal district court for southern West Virginia holding the chain store tax did not apply to gasoline plants and filling stations.

Since that ruling the Supreme Court held in the case of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey that the West Virginia chain store tax did apply to gasoline filling stations.

By questioning Attorney General Homer A. Holt of West Virginia and Arthur S. Dayton, counsel for the Gulf Co., today, Chief Justice Hughes developed the two cases were broadly similar. He then announced the court would not hear further argument and the case would be sent back to the three-judge district court to enable it to set aside its former decision and enter an order in conformity with the Supreme Court ruling in the Standard Oil case.

County Society Launches Drive

Children's Aid Unit Begins Campaign in Carroll.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., April 2.—The annual financial campaign of the Carroll County Children's Aid Society, was launched here last night at a meeting of district chairmen in the Firemens' Building.

The Rev. O. G. Robinson, pastor of Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church and president of the Carroll County Council of Religious Education, and the Rev. Harry Bassler, pastor of St. Paul's Reformed Church, were the principal speakers.

The Rev. Mr. Robinson used as his theme, "What the Wisest and Best of Parents Desire for Their Own Children, That, the Community Wants for Its Children." The Rev. Mr. Bassler spoke on "Cooperation." It was announced at the meeting that three districts, Uniontown, Freedom and Myers, already have raised one-third of their quota. Three thousand five hundred dollars is the goal in this campaign.

OFFICIAL NOTICES

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, Washington, March 26, 1935. Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of an item authorizing changes in the permanent system of highways contained in D. C. Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914 (Public Act No. 435, 62d Congress), approved March 14, 1913, as amended by an Act approved June 30, 1926 (Public Act No. 152, 69th Congress), the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the Board Room of said Commissioners on Thursday, April 11, 1935, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., to all persons interested or owning land within the territory affected by proposed changes in the plan of said permanent system of highways, described as follows, viz: 1. Property in the northeast section located within the territory bounded by Rhode Island Avenue on the north, 20th Street and Queens Chapel Road on the east, West Virginia Avenue on the southeast, New York Avenue on the south, and Metropolitan Branch, B. & O. The Tramp.

I SEE the sad and seedy tramp departing and returning, and wonder if a welcome lamp for him somewhere is burning. He wends his way through rain and snow, serenely and unhurried, his hair is long, it looks as though it never had been curried. The whiskers on his weathered jaw are long and running over, and they are full of wisps of straw and seeds of hay and clover. The rags he wears could scarcely bring ten cents in any alley; oh, he has felt misfortune's sting, has walked privation's valley. Salathiel, he's doomed to roam, he's doomed to endless bumming; I wonder if in any home they listen for his coming? Perhaps some mother opes the door, when shades of night are falling, and hopes to hear upon the moor the pilgrim's footsteps falling. Perhaps she sighs, "The lazy lout, he'd rather loaf forever, than come and hang the washing out or make some sane endeavor." Perhaps a father, old and gray, looks down the road to find him, and seeing no one on the way the tears of sorrow blind him. No doubt he thought the roamng boy, in distant regions straying, would be a comfort and a joy when years were on him weighing. And now he says, perhaps, "By Heck, I'm tired of Alexander, and I will surely wring his neck if home he should meander." Perhaps a tender, sad-eyed wife is waiting his arrival to bring some gladness to her life, and know her love's survival. Perhaps she listens for his step, still smiling and forgiving, and says, "If Alec had some pep, perhaps he'd make a living."

BREATH BADLY TAINTED..?

Out of balance!

Get Protection, quickly and safely with LA LASINE...the DOUBLE-ACTION Antiseptic

Nobody is safe from unpleasant breath. Its odor is a real warning that germs are breeding in the decaying food particles that have lodged between your teeth. These germs, breeding too rapidly for Nature to kill them, throw the bacterial count of your mouth out of balance—Result! Tainted breath...many times sore throat.

Do this...Insure Protection and Mouth Cleanliness that you can FEEL

Gargle with La Lasine mixed with water—half and half. Or if you prefer, full strength. A double-action takes place: First, the antiseptic foam of La Lasine kills germs. Caught in its small-bubble foam they, together with the offending food particles, are expelled from the mouth. Simultaneously, the special La Lasine membrane-restoratives bring your salivary glands back to par. Quickened to action, these glands release their antiseptic enzymes and ferments. The bacterial count of mouth and throat returns to balance.

LA LASINE

THE DOUBLE-ACTION ANTISEPTIC

2 Its membrane-restoratives stimulate the salivary glands.
